Exclusive Fall Millinery

Wherein is exemplified all the latest aspects of Millinerial Mode, as seen in Paris and New York, and trapslated by our own designers.

Tailored and semi-tailored hats promise to be the most in vogue for this season, the prevalence being given to felt and velour shapes, ribbon banded or very simply trimmed. Velvet is the material in evidence for hand made hats, the shapes being usually small and turban like, or with brims rolling and turning up at odd angles, this angular effect considerably enhanced by the clever posing of wings and bows. Come to our millinery parlor and see the charming array.

TELL OF BRUTALITY IN PRISON CAMPS

Captives Overworked, Underfed, and Beaten, Wounded British From Germany Declare.

WAS AMERICAN VICTIMS

LONDON.—The brutal treatment of prisoners of war by the Germans is described by wounded British prisoners who have arrived at The Hague from Germany. All prisoners are badly treated and are on virtually starvation rations. The prison camps at Soltau and Crossen, in Prussia, are reported to be in particularly evil condition.

Belgian prisoners, who were the most numerous in the camp at Soltau, were approached several months ago by two civilians, who claimed to be Flemings. They were introduced by the commandant, with the object of inducing the Belgians to side with Germany. The Belgians stoned these emissaries and made things unpleasant for the commandant, with the result that the whole camp was visited with punishment for a fortnight.

The condition of Russian prisoners throughout all the German camps from which these British prisoners had is declared to be pitiable. There had been many cases of death from starvation among the Russians, some of whom had been shot and beaten when they were unable to perform the tasks imposed on them.

Several of the British soldiers came from Stralkowo, in the Province of Posen, where about 300 British are confined. Three weeks ago thirty Americans arrived there.

At the camp at Crossen, in Brandenburg, prisoners received little food. Many of these men suffered from dropsy and neurasthenia, and numerous deaths occurred. At one time there were in this camp 140 British prisoners, captured in April, and ten Americans, captured in May. They were compelled to work on the railways, carrying heavy rails and pushing trucks for twelve hours at a stretch. Their food consisted of German soup and one slice of bread. If they failed to get up in the morning quickly when the Germans called them to work they were prodded with bayonets and hit with rifle butts. It is declared that one man so treated was found dead next morning.

Most of these men arrived at the Crossen camp on August 24 in an extremely serious condition. They were inspected after a few days and about ten of them were marked out for work again. They had been working behind the German lines from April until the latter part of August.

An Interesting Letter From Pte. E. Kimbell, of Lang

The Writer Was Wounded on August 8th—Three Snipers Located in a Tree.

Mrs. Eric Kimbell, Lang, P.O., has received a very interesting letter from her husband, Pte. Eric Kimbell, who was wounded in the thigh on August 8th. Pte. Kimbell enlisted with the 247th Battalion and is well known in the city.

August, 13, 18.

No. 1063100, Pte. Eric Kimbell,
4th Southern Gen. Hospital,
Comell Head Section, Davenport, England.

Dear Wife,—Just a few lines to let you know how I am. I am feeling better and am going to tell you of the night I was wounded. We got three hours rest on a hill with nothing to cover us but our rubber sheets and the wet grass for a bed. They woke us up with a lively gunfire which they had turned on Fritz.

When I was hit it was in the afternoon of August 8th. I fell to the ground when a sniper hit me in the thigh. This was where four Germans were manoeuvering a machine gun. I picked them off one at a time and killed them all. I started to load my rifle again but another sniper spied me but his shot hit my rifle and went into the ground. I lay perfectly still for I was out in the open ground but I kept my eyes on the watch and my ears open. At last I saw three Germans in trees. I shot at one and he fell from the tree shot through the forehead. The other two started down the trees but I got them too and they dropped. After that I walked twelve miles to a dressing station got my wound dressed. Don't worry about me as my wound is doing fine. I will be in this hospital for a month and after that in a convalescent hospital. After that I will begin all over again.

From your loving husband,
ERIC KIMBELL.

LAUGHS AT IDEA OF GERMAN POISON PLOT

"Boil the Rubbers for Your Jars and You Are Safe," Says M.O.H. to Women.

TORONTO, Sept. 12. — "I take that with a grain of salt," commented Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, M.O.H., when he read a story to the effect that a German plot had been discovered —a plot to poison thousands of people by putting phenol on the rubbers of fruit preserve jars.

"There is about as much plot to that as there is to chase and slaughter all the flies in the City Hall. The thing is too absurd to deserve much comment."

"It would be almost impossible to get enough phenol on the rubber to do any serious harm. And any careful housewife boils or scalds the rubbers before she uses them. That is enough to make them safe."

Muskoka Story Lacks Detail.

Dr. Hastings commented on the fact that the story about the family in Muskoka which had been affected lacked detail. Only one person was really sick and that did not prove that it was poisoned rubbers on preserve jars that did it.

"Just tell the women to boil the rubbers and they'll be all right," he said.

Phenol is just another name for carbolic acid, according to chemists, and it would be very difficult, they say, to poison people by way of the small quantity that could adhere to the rubber.

APPLE EMBARGO STAYS.

Not Necessity, and Ships Needed as Transports.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—A definite announcement is made by the Department of Agriculture that there is no possibility of removal or modification of the embargo on the shipments of apples and other fruits to Great Britain until shipping conditions change for the better. "Every foot of available steamship space," says the Department, "is required for the transportation of men, munitions and food. The Canadian apples as well as many other articles of food, are not considered essential, and, until shipping facilities are in a much more stable condition than at present, all efforts to modify the apple embargo must be futile."

The first requisite in the summer home is coolness; and all furnishings should be of the simplest.

SUGAR! SUGAR!

Remember with (80,000,000) eighty million pounds of sugar sent to the bottom of the sea off the American coast during last month, sugar must of necessity be scarce. Most of this sugar was for Canada. Therefore the Food Board asks you to be reasonable. The situation will be relieved in a few days, but nobody must look for an unlimited quantity.

ON OPENING DAYS WE WILL SELL SUGAR during the hours of 8 to 10 a.m., and 2 to 4 p.m., with a limit to each customer of four pounds. Further we are requested as a protective measure, to sell no sugar to children.

CLEVELAND MAY ADOPT THE TWO PLATOON SYSTEM

Firemen Claim They Are Entitled to One Million Dollars for Back Pay.

A LEGAL QUESTION

No doubt some satisfactory arrangement will soon be made with the firemen of Cleveland, O. Their claim that under a city ordinance they are entitled to $1,000,000 back pay for overtime has been submitted to the mayor. This claim was for extra time worked over the eight hours provided by the city ordinance. The second proposition made by the men is that they will accept the two-platoon system, with day and night shifts of 12 hours each, until the eight-hour arrangement can be made effective. The mayor is favorable to either or both propositions if the financial conditions of city can stand the increased expense.

Mayor in Favour.

Mayor Davis announced that until the city received extensive financial relief, the eight-hour day could not become effective, but that he was strongly in favor of this plan and would see to its adoption as soon as money was available. He also notified representatives of the firemen that he would order the two-platoon system to be instituted provided they could convince Chief George Wallace that it could be operated with the present personnel of the department without reducing its efficiency.

Will Institute Action.

The firemen have declared that they would institute a $1,000,000 action for back pay regardless of any temporary settlement of other questions involved. They said the obtaining of better hours was of greater immediate importance to them than that of salary increases.

The firemen have recently joined the International Association of Fire Fighters, and on this subject the mayor said it was not his purpose to disrupt any organization formed or to be former by the firemen which does not interfere with the discipline and effectiveness of the fire-fighting force.

A Legal Question.

It will be interesting to know how the matter will be finally arranged. The situation at present is that the men consider they are employed the same as laborers or mechanics for certain prescribed hours per day, and that they are entitled to remuneration for every hour they have served in the fire houses over that time. There is a legal question involved here as to whether the firemen and police are to be considered in the same class with other workmen. The duties of firemen are of a distinctively special kind and they are appointed by the year to discharge those special duties and cannot be removed, under civil service rules, without cause. The subject must be thoroughly discussed before any definite decision can be arrived at. If the men are entitled to the extra they claim, they ought to get it, and their demand for the two-platoon system is only in keeping with what other departments are granting every day.

SIMCOE STREET, A FEW DOORS WEST OF TURNBULL'S

THE JUDGMENT OF EARTH

By Captain Lord Dunsany

"Come here," said the sentry.

Bill Simmons was loafing aimlessly about the "Kriegsiangenenlager" with his hands in his pockets, doing no harm. What was the matter now? He drifted up to the German sentry.

"Do you want chocolate" said the sentry.

"What for" gasped Bill.

"To eat," said the sentry.

"Chocolate" said Bill.

"Every day for the rest of the war," the sentry said.

"Good Lord!" said Bill.

"All you've got to do," explained the sentry, "is to teach me English for an hour or two every day: and put your heart into it, as though it was foot-ball."

"But you speak good English," said Bill.

"Yes," said the sentry, "but there's the accent."

"There ain't no harm in a bit of an accent," said Bill. "You're bound to have a bit of an accent like, considering as how you was born in what you may call foreign parts." And he added out of kindness of heart, "which is what might happen to anyone."

"It's that accent that I want to get rid of," said the German.

"And you'll give me chocolate?" said Bill.

"Every day," said the sentry.

"I feah," said Bill, "That my haccent is not very superiah."

"That's not what I want," said the sentry, "they don't talk like that, I know. I just want your own plain talk."

"You want ter talk like me?" said Bill.

"Yes," said the sentry.

"Why's that?" said Bill.

A sad look came over the face of the sentry, and at first he said nothing. Then he took a long breath, and looked at Bill.

"I'll tell you," he said. "When this war is over I hand in this rifle and these clothes, and I get no more pay and I have to look around and earn some money somewhere. See?"

"So you 'ave," said Bill.

"Well, we Germans," said the sentry, "trade all over the world. We shall have to do that more than ever if we're to build up what's gone."

"So you will," said Bill.

"I shall want to go to America, or Spain, and perhaps to your colonies, or out East even. And I'll want to trade with all manner of people and earn good money to bring home."

"I see," said Bill. "And you' find that accent a bit in your way, like."

"A bit," said the sentry.

"'Taint much to notice," said Bill. "We wanted so to win," said the sentry. "We'd thought it all out for years, and it seemed so hard not to win. And we thought that, if we frightened them enough, the Belgians would let us through."

"Frightened who?" said Bill/

"Well, the women, and the men, too," said the sentry. "We thought the Belgians would never stand it. And then we thought if we attacked fortresses outside the area of hostilities the English people would give in."

"Meaning Margate?" said Bill.

"Well, that and London," said the German. "We thought the population would never stand it, and so there would be less bloodshed in the end. Our people never wanted war with America. We thought the Lusitania would frighten them."

"What about the hospital ships?" said Bill. "And . . ."

"O, I know," said the sentry. "It's all part of it, I know. And it's getting worse every week. And when it's over there'll be nowhere for a poor German to go."

"Couldn't you try South America?" said Bill.

"O, it's no good," said the sentry. "It's no good. They know of these outrages there as well as anywhere else. It's no good, Englishman. One can't escape the telegraph."

Bill Simons had shuddered at the outrages that he had heard of as much as the most refined of us; no education that any of us gets makes us see any righter than Bill Simons did on elemental things like the fair treatment of women; yet he was feeling sorry for this sentry.

"Perhaps they wouldn't set so much store by them over there," he said. "They're accustomed to revolutions and such like."

"It's the same everywhere," said the sentry. "There's no escaping it. It's a kind of feeling of the whole world. It's a kind of awful invisible thing that's everywhere. It never says a word, but just sits there and judges you; and when it does speak it's the whole world speaking; and all saying the same thing. There's things it thinks you mustn't do, and it doesn't say a word but just lets you do them; and then it judges you to the uttermost ends of the earth. It's no good, Englishman. There's no escaping it. We've done the things that it holds you oughtn't to do. It's hard, but there'll be no place for a poor German after this. Teach me the English you talk, Englishman."

"Look 'ere," said Bill, "you're right as far as you go, but you take my tip. You go to your blokes what runs the frightfulness stunt, and you tell 'em to chuck it, see? Chuck it! And we aren't the people to hit 'em when they're down. Only, chuck it. Tell 'em I told you."

GERMANS REFUSE TO GO TO THE FRONT

Men Said They Would Rather be Shot First.

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 12.—German soldiers who would rather be shot than go to the front were seen by a Swiss doctor who has just returned to Switzerland from Germany.

"A few days ago," said this doctor, "I saw one hundred soldiers arguing with their officers. They objected to going to the front. At a given signal the men opened their vests, showing their breasts, and shouted, "Shoot, we are not going to the front."

Face Peeling Easy— Blonde or Brunette

"The blonde's complexion fades early, because her skin is extraordinarily thin and fine," says Mme. Lina Cavalieri. "The brunette's, as a rule is the reverse. The skin is thicker and has a tendency to an oily appearance."

For either the faded blonde's skin or the brunette's oily or sallow complexion, the best remedy is ordinary mercolized wax. Used every night this will give one an entirely new complexion within about a week's time. The wax gradually peels off the worn out surface skin, with all its defects, a little each day, without affecting the delicate underskin in the least. The latter will have the exquisitely beautiful glow of youth—indeed one may readily lose ten or fifteen years from her age, so far as appearance goes, by a course of this simple treatment. The wax, procurable at any drug store, is applied like cold cream.

Premier Lloyd George Says "The Worst is Now Over"

Casualties in Latest Advance Less Than One-Fifth of Total in the Advance of 1916.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MANCHESTER, Eng., Sept. 12.—"The worst is over," Premier Lloyd George declared here to-day in receiving the freedom of the city.

"The news is now distinctly good, really good," he said. "The tunnel is long and there are some steep gradients still to be climbed, but it is getting shorter. The worst is over."

The casualties in the latest advance were less than one-fifth of the total in the advance of 1916. The main difference between 1916 and 1918 is the unity of command.

Peace Treaty.

Premier Lloyd George said he was in favour of a league of nations, and that in fact a league already had been begun. "To end all wars," the Premier said, "we must impose a durable peace from our enemies. The Prussian military powers must not only be beaten but Germany herself must know, and the German people must know, that their rulers have outraged the laws of humanity, and that Prussion strength cannot protect them from punishment."

"The only sure foundation for a league of nations," the Premier said, was a victory for the Allies. Peace must be of a kind," he added, "that commends itself to the common sense conscience of nations.

"As a whole it must not be dictated by extreme men on either side."

Continuing, the Premier said: "We shall neither accept for ourselves nor impose upon our foes a Brest-Litovsk treaty."

SERGT. W. J. TURNER.

Sergeant William James Turner, who enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion, was wounded in the recent fighting in which the Canadian Corps pushed the Huns off the Hindenburg line. He has been admitted to hospital with a gunshot wound in the left leg. The information was received by his wife who lives at 55 Gothic Avenue, Toronto. Sergt. Turner enlisted as a private, and won his stripes on the field. He was transferred to the 20th Battalion with whom he was serving when wounded.

Flower Sunday at Mark Street Methodist Church

The services at Mark street Methodist Church will be of unusual interest next Sunday, September 15. It is flower Sunday and every child of the congregation is requested to bring a bouquet of flowers to the morning service to decorate a cross which is being prepared to receive the flowers, until the evening service, when every member of the Sunday School and congregation will take a bouquet to some sick or lonely person to brighten one hour of their life. The pastor will preach on subjects appropriate to the occasion. The members of the Sunday School are called to meet at 10.30 a.m. in the basement of the church.

A Terrible Indictment

London, Sept. 12. — (Canadian Press Despatches from Reuters, Limited.)—Characterized as a "terrible indictment" German's treatment of the natives of South-West Africa, is commented upon in the Morning News. The Daily Chronicle says: "Whatever the future of the other German colonies may be, it is impossible that Southwest Africa should be returned to Germany. Native opinion there in the territory added to the union would regard its restoration with sorrow and consternation. The crimes of their own sons definitely forbid Germany to enter into this region of Africa." The Daily Graphic says that after such an exposure the return of any colonies to Germany would make the allies partners in her unspeakable crimes. The Daily Telegraph holds that whatever former German colonies may be returned after the war, southwest Africa assuredly must not be.

Items of Interest From Lakefield

Woman's Institute Met at Mount Julian.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 11.—The Woman's Institute of Mount Julian, have added yet another link in their chain of patriotic work. They heard the call of the Navy League and responded nobly with $15. No call from the Empire fails to bring a good response from this little band of faithful women who set and example that the farmer's wives of Smith and Douro could follow with profit, both to themselves and their country.

A Causalty.

In Monday's casualty list appears the name of W. A. Lean as having died of wounds. Pte. Lean enlisted in the Apsley platoon of the 93rd battalion in the winter of 1916 and went overseas with them. Two years ago he was transferred to another battalion in France. He is a son of Mr. Isaac Lean, of Apsley. The Apsley platoon has made a good record for itself and has never failed in duty.

Navy League Campaign

Lakefield's contribution to the campaign for the Navy League was about $350. It is a creditable amdunt for a village that can hardly be classed as prosperous, having no large factories to give work to the men. The cause of the navy, that has stood for four years between us and our terrible foe, is one that should appeal to every one no matter whether in town or country.

Eggs and Poultry

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—The situation is unchanged and the egg market is firm. Receipts are declining. Toronto-Montreal jobbing prices unchanged. Winnipeg firm trade, paying forty forty-one, jobbing extras forty-seven, firsts forty-three. Chicago fresh firsts forty-one forty-one half, New York fresh firsts forty-four forty-seven. Poultry receipts lighter, prices unchanged.

MANITOBA OFFERS TO SELL COLLEGE.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 12.—It is stated that Manitoba Provincial Treasurer Hon. Edward Brown, and Dr. R. M. Blake, M.P., are laying before the Ottawa authorities a plan for the transfer of the Agricultural College in St. Vital to the Federal Government as a training school for soldiers. About $4,200,000 was invested in the St. Vital buildings by the late Manitoba Government, all of which will be returned to this province by the Federal Government if the deal goes through.

PETERBORO MOTORISTS ENDORSE PROPOSAL TO SAVE GASOLINE

Appeal From the Fuel Controller Is Received Here.

The Peterborough Automobile Association has received the following communication from the Ontario Motor League.

The Canadian Fuel Controller has appealed to automobile owners to eliminate all unnecessary use of their cars and to discontinue Sunday motoring until further notice.

The request is similar to that made by the United States Fuel Controller a few days ago for the same reason to prevent depletion of gasoline supplies. It is estimated by the U.S. Fuel Administration, in a statement appearing in the official bulletin of the United States, that the request if properly observed will effect the desired conservation in a few days.

The Ontario Motor League advises its members and motorists in general, to observe strictly this request of the Canadian Fuel Controller, and is confident that this will be done, thus obviating the need for formal regulations and provision for their enforcement.

Yours very truly,
ONTARIO MOTOR LEAGUE,
Signed) W. G. Robertson
(Signed) W. G. ROBERTSON,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Voice of The People

JUG-HANDLED

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I have, like others in the city, been watching with interest the new "cash-and-carry" movement. If the retail merchants are to make a success of it, they must make some fair concession to those who are prepared to carry their own parcels.

"Saturday Night" says:—

"It is estimated that the cost of delivery is approximately four per cent. of the total sales in an ordinary city business, and it is also estimated that about fifty per cent. of the sales are carried home by the customer. In other words, did no customers put their parcels under their arms the cost of delivery would be not four per cent., as it now is, but eight per cent. Or to put it another way, those who are prepared to carry, and do, are saving the merchants four per cent., but are in turn reaping no reward for their industry. One is buying just as cheaply as the other. If the merchants would cut their ordinary merchandise the four per cent. which it costs them to deliver it there would soon be a boom in the "cash and carry" system."

It seems to me that the fairer plan would be for the retail merchant to make a proper allowance on his bill for all "cash -and-carried" goods and to charge his four per cent., or what ever it costs, extra to deliver his goods. Then the method wouldn't be quite so jug-handled.

HOUSEHOLDER

Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—As a soldier's wife, whose husband reverted to the ranks to go overseas, I went to Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Patriotic Fund, regarding coal, and was told that if I paid my money I could get some coal. I then asked how much coal I could have, and was told four tons at $12 a ton. I left a cheque with Mr. Dobbin for $48. The coal ordered was two tons of nut and two tons of furnace. The coal was brought while I was away. Two tons of pea and two tons of nut were left in the cellar instead of the coal ordered. The man who delivered it told a neighbour that I would have to take that or I might get nothing. I have ordered furnace coal to mix with the pea coal to burn in the furnace. While at the coal dealer's I asked why coal was only $10.50 in Toronto and $12 here. The coal dealer said, "We have never charged $12, not even when it was bought from an independent dealer. We have never charged more than $11 for coal, and never more than $10.50 for pea coal."

I then went to Mr. Dobbin for an explanation, but was told there was no explanation. He said there were two thousand women who had purchased coal in that way and had never grumbled at $12 a ton, and that there were 2,000 more women on the books, and possibly publicity would injure those who had not received their coal. I do not really see why this matter should not be looked into by the city and an explanation given.

A Soldier's Wife.

Closer Control of Coal Output

Wider Power for Senator Gideon Robertson.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—Closer supervision and control of the coal output of Canada with a view towards securing maximum production, is forecasted here. It is intimated that a control similar to that exercised now by the War Trade Board over the steel output and production, will be exercised over the coal output. It is stated unofficially to-day that Senator Gideon Robertson, minister without portfolio in the cabinet, and labour's representative in the Senate, will be vested with power of control over the mines of the Dominion, and will exercise supervision over their operation,

TORONTO WOMAN GAVE UP ALL HOPE

Mrs. Gorringe Never Expected to be Well Again—Tanlac Restores Her.

"Positively the day I started taking Tanlac was the turning point in my life and I wouldn't be without this wonderful medicine for anything," declared Mrs. Ivy Gorringe, of 49 Perth avenue, Toronto, who is employed by Telfer Bros., the other day.

"Last Winter," she continued, "I went under a serious operation that was a severe shock to my nervous system so that when I left the hospital I was on the verge of a collapse. My strength was completely gone, my vitality was at a low ebb, and I did not seem to be able to improve at all. My appetite failed and the little I forced myself to eat did me no good for I fell off until I weighed only 90 pounds, and was little more than skin and bones. My skin was so pale and sallow it looked like I had no blood in me and I just can't describe how utterly worn out and run down I was. I gave up hope of ever getting any better and was so blue and despondent that I actually did not care whether I lived or not."

"I never was much of a believer in medicines of any kind, but when one of my friends who worried herself over my condition, begged me to try Tanlac, I decided to do so just to please her. Well, sir, it did me so much good that before I had finished my first bottle I was feeling like a different person. I have taken six bottles now and it is really astonishing the way that I have improved. I have a splendid appetite and my food is doing me good for I have already gained ten pounds since I began taking Tanlac. I have entirely recovered from that nervous, run down condition following my operation, and am actually in better shape to-day than I have ever been. I know there are others who are prejudiced as I was about taking medicines but if they will only give Tanlac a trial I am sure they will be convinced like I was that it is the best nerve tonic in the world."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd, in Havelock, by A C. Denike; in Lakefield, by the Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

INFORMATION

To the Editor of the Examiner.

I would like to know if a landlord can make a tenant pay the garbage bill when there was no agreement to that effect, when we rented the house, we were to pay for water and light.

TENANT

The matter of levying the garbage tax is at the discretion of the landlord. In some cases the tenant is obliged to pay and in others the landlord pays the tax and incidentally takes it out of the tenant in the form of rent. —Editor.

MEAT PRICE RAISED.

Cost of American Shipments Forces Action in Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Food Controller announced that the retail price of meat will be increased 2 pence a pound after September 22. The announcement explains that the increase is necessitated chiefly because of the heavier cost of imported meat from America and the rise in freight rates. The Controller also says that the Allies have been forced to purchase meat to an unprecedented extent from North America owing "to the urgent importance of utilizing all available shipping for the double purpose of bringing American troops to the battle front and supplies to the civilian population."

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday, 33 cars, with 340 cattle, 73 calves, 696 hogs, and 993 sheep and lambs.

The cattle market continues strong and active, with a good steady demand for all grades of cattle, butcher and feeding stock being equally in demand. Yesterday's offering of fresh cattle was light and with but very few odds and ends among the leftovers from the earlier markets, everything was cleaned up at good steady prices.

The run of sheep and lambs was a little on the heavy side for a week-end market, with the result that there was an easier ton as to prices, lambs averaging about 25c. lower than Wednesday.

Hogs were steady and unchanged at $19.50 fed and watered, but the feeling of the market is easier. Canadian packers have been advised by representatives of the British Government, that no further quantities of heavy bacon will be accepted for export. This means that hogs weighing 250 pounds are not required.

FILED RINGS FROM WOMAN'S FINGERS

Muscles and Joints Terribly Swollen —Rheumatism Disappears After Taking Tanlac.

"At the time I began taking Tanlac my condition was such that if I remained in one position for any length of time my joints would get so stiff I could hardly move," said Mrs. Martha Walker, of 262 Evelyn Avenue, Toronto, the other day. Mrs. Walker is a well-known woman of education and refinement, and her statement in regard to the benefits she has derived through the use of Tanlac will be of unusual interest to her many friends.

"About six years ago," she continued, "my health began to fail, my blood was bad, my circulation poor and I was in a dreadfully anaemic condition. I suffered from rheumatism and my limbs and feet were so swoolen that I had to wear shoes two or three sizes larger than my regular number. I felt bloated all over, even my eyes were puffy and I could hardly put on a pair of kid gloves without nearly ruining them. Why, four years ago I just had to have all my rings filed off my fingers. My flesh was so sensitive I could hardly bear the weight of my hand anywhere and I was almost in constant pain. My nerves were so frayed that I could hardly sleep at night and I was actually afraid to drive my car around.

"Although I tried all kinds of medicines nothing did me any good, but when I heard so much about Tanlac I decided to try it next. Before I had finished my first bottle I felt so much better that I kept it up till now my nerves are more quiet, I rest well at night and am stronger and better in every way than I have been in years. The swelling and soreness have almost left me entirely, I am wearing my regular size of shoe, I have put on my rings again, and I have been driving my car around all summer. I cannot praise Tanlac too highly and have already recommended it to several of my friends."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Food Board Flashes

How much food approximately speaking, do the peoples of the earth consume?

The total population of the world reaches a grand total of about 1,700,000,000 souls. Supposing they all sat down to a banquet! It would take 16 tables reaching around the globe to seat them all. For every ounce of food each guest ate, the international host would have to provide 53,000 tons of provisions.

Assuming that the average inhabitant of the earth uses two pounds of provisions a day, the total for the year would amount to a billion and a quarter tons. It would take a string of cars, carrying 30 tons to the car, and reaching eight times around the earth, to haul this material.

NEGRO WAR SPIRIT.

The war spirit of the Southern negro had ample demonstration in Charlotte in the enthusiastic farewell given by the coloured poulation to the outgoing recruits from Camp Greene. As the enlisted men marched trrough the streets they were accompanied by chereing throngs of coloured women, men, and children, carrying flags and filling the air with shoutings of patriotism. It was a scene that proved the negro's recognition of his responsibility in the war, and the cheering crowds that attended the recruits through the streets gave ample evidence to the loyalty of the colored people to their country at war.—Charlotte Observer.

TO SPEED UP COAL MINES.

With Winter Upon Us Government at Ottawa Wakes Up.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11. — Greater supervision by the Government of the coal output in Canada is under consideration by the Cabinet.

It is proposed to appoint a commissioner or possibly to confer upon the Fuel Controller necessary powers to speed up production in all the coal mines, and probably to exercise over them an authority similar to the War Trade Board in relation to the steel industry.

The general purpose would be to secure the maximum production at a time when fuel famines are threatened.

SPAIN'S "PRETENDER"

HE IS BEING HELD A CAPTIVE IN AUSTRIA.

His Sympathies In the War Are With the Allies, But His Followers In Spain Are Divided and There Will Probably Be a Split In the Carlist Ranks as a Result of Hun Propaganda.

SOME interesting news is received from a reliable source concerning a princely figure about whom more than ordinary mystery has been wrapped since the beginning of the war—Don Jaime of Bourbon, the Pretender to the throne of Spain. It happens also that the intelligence comes at a time when there is a Jaimist (or Carlist, as many people still erroneously call it) movement in a part of Spain, for one hears upon the best authority that a division of much consequence has occurred among the Jaimists of Barcelona, who are no unimportant force.

It has been the paradoxical situation since the beginning of the war that while the head and the essence of the Jaimista pretensions, being, of course, Don Jaime himself, is not only a warm friend of the Allies, but has actually worked in France on their behalf, the leader of the movement in Spain, being Senor Vasquez de Mella, is probably the most enthusiastic pro-German in the whole country, and day by day in his newspaper, El Correo Espanol, subsidized with German money, and from which Don Jaime himself has withdrawn all support, indulges in such wild and bitter invective against Britain and France as to cause the sheet to be regarded very often with some amusement. Senor de Mella unceasingly proclaims the moral, political, and other virtues of the Germans, the advantages that would accrue to Spain from the closest possible understanding with the Central Powers, and the necessity for Gibraltar to be delivered back to Spain again, which in his view can best be done through the medium of an ultimate German victory, and, while, since 1914, he has announced innumerable German victories that have never taken place, and has placed enormous and sensational headlines upon announcements of Allied defeats which were similarly fictitious, every real loss to the Allies such as the sinking of ships has been hailed with great outbursts of joy.

The Jaimist movement does not generally depend for its success upon the support of the most enlightened section of the population, though many strong and sincere men are attached to it, and so it happens that the Mella lead is very considerably followed and that Spanish Jaimists have had to be reckoned as very largely Germanophile. In Barcelona, however, in spite of the fact that German propaganda is exercised more vigorously here than in any other part of Spain, a pro-ally tendency among the Jaimists has been gradually gathering in force, and recently this took definite shape to the extent of an organized group being established. As soon as this was done a great impetus was given to the new movement, and now a decision seems imminent which will bring about the secession of the pro-Allies Jaimists from the main body. It is stated also that arrangements are in progress for starting a Jaimist club in Barcelona, limited to pro-ally, and a report of the whole situation has been sent to Don Jaime himself, and his opinion asked for. It is quite likely that this movement may be copied in other parts of Spain.

As to the intelligence concerning the Pretender himself, it will be remembered that in the early stages of the war he was in Paris, where he has a large ground-floor flat in the Avenue Hoche, and there he occupied himself closely with French Red Cross work, pursuing it at times with so much enthusiasm that, it is said, he incurred various dangers. However, he has estates and other interests of an important character in Austria, and finding after the war had been in progress for some time that these interests were being endangered, it became imperative, much as he disliked the idea, that he should pay a visit to that country. Accordingly the flat in the Avenue Hoche was shut up and the iron shutters to the windows have remained closed ever since, for once in Austria the most formidable difficulties were placed in the way of Don Jaime's leaving it. In the course of his journey he was for a short time in Germany, where the treatment accorded to him was very far from kindly or considerate, and when he arrived in Austria and went into residence at his own establishment there, the Castle of Frohsdorf, which is some 45 kilometers out from Vienna, he gradually discovered that he was to a great extent a prisoner. Limitations were placed upon his movements, and although no attempt was made to interfere with his frequent journeys to Vienna, he was given to understand that he could not leave the country. This happened during the reign of the Emperor Francis Joseph, on the instigation, it is believed, of Berlin. Under the new regime, however, he is still forbidden to leave Austria, and again it is certain that the orders in the matter come from the Wilhemstrasse. His personal situation has, however, very greatly improved since the Emperor Karl came to the throne.

For the time being he has abandoned his residence at the Castle of Frohsdorf, and lives in Vienna. This he does for two reasons. In the first place his habits, tastes and temperament always made any prolonged stay at Frohsdorf distasteful to him. He is a man of very modern tastes and prefers the brightness and activity of Vienna to the country scenes of Frohsdorf. It is said that he prefers the vibrating notes of modern life to the melancholy echoes of the past. Although Frohsdorf is rich in historical associations these do not in any way appeal to him. The castle once belonged to the family of Lichtenstein, then it was acquired by the widow of Murat and was subsequently the residence of the Duchess d'Angouleme, of the Count de Chambord, and of the last Bourbon of France. The rooms, the furniture, the pictures, and all about the castle, afford reminders of its historic past and the personages associated with it, and Don Jaime says frankly that this musty flavor is little to his taste. However, on going there from Paris on this occasion, he remained in residence for some time, making the journey to Vienna by automobile daily, the 45 kilometers being accomplished by a good car on a good road in less than an hour. Now, however, it is not possible even for a Pretender to make such a journey by automobile, and this is the second reason why Don Jaime lives altogether in Vienna.

If the embargo upon his departure from Austria remains, nevertheless life has been made far more agreeable to him than it was in the days of Francis Joseph, when many difficulties were willfully heaped upon him. The fact is that his relations with the Emperor Karl and his family are extremely cordial. Apart from matters of general policy, the young Austrian Emperor in many ways has no scruples about doing things of which Berlin could not approve, and the hospitality that he openly and continually offers to the Spanish Pretender is one of them.

A Queen Elizabeth Joke.

Queen Elizabeth liked her jokes, and, although her pleasantries were of a less sanguinary turn than her father's, she must have been even more regrettable than usual when disposed to be frolicsome. A tale may be found in one of Lord Essex's letters with regard to a new dress belonging to one of her maids of honor, over the possession of which the owner had been rash enough to exhibit some elation. The young lady, it seems, was several inches taller than her majesty, hardly perhaps quite a nice or loyal thing to be. Having desired that the dress should be made over to her custody, the queen first carefully selecting an extremely wet day, was pleased to put it on and trail it for yards behind her in the mud, the owner of the humiliated garment having to appear as delighted with the royal fun and condescension as the rest of the lackeys on.—London Tatler.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S CORSET COVER.

Something quite new and original in design is the corset cover illustrated in No. 8873. It will appeal to fastidious women, who object to the unsightly closing which always shows so plainly under a sheer waist, for it slips on over the head. It fastens on each shoulder by means of a tab which buttons over on the front. There is a casing at the waistline, with a wide elastic run through. The small peplum holds the corset cover neatly in place. The edges are turned in and hemstitched.

The lady's corset cover pattern No. 8873 is cut in five sizes—36 to 44 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 1⅛ yards of 30 inch, 36 inch or 40 inch material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

Inspires Men to Rise to Their Highest Level.

The word "inspiring" fits Foch peculiarly. He has the faculty of inspiring men to rise to their highest level. It is said that just before the Battle of Mons-Charleroi, Field Marshal French felt doubtful of the advisability of accepting battle. The relations between the French and British commands were largely unfeigned. It was necessary that Sir John French should be induced to fall into Joffre's plan, making his wonderful little army (the "old contemptibles," as they are known) a virtual part of France's army. Foch went to him. Never was a tact in manner more perfectly combined with firmness in purpose. He won French over completely, and thereupon hastened to take his command at the centre, where he was to fight and win, at Fere Champenoise, the decisive phase of the Battle of the Marne.

He exerts a veritable fascination alike upon officers and rank and file. His subordinates say his words are few, and that often he makes his meaning unmistakable to them without resort to speech by a mere gesture or by the way he bites the cigar which he is forever smoking (it is of the kind privates buy). Upon rare occasions his reluctance to speak has been overcome. An instance was last year, on September 6 at the commemoration of the Battle of the Marne, the day signalized by the famous order to attack, which Joffre, by a wonderful coincidence, issued upon the anniversary of the birth of Lafayette, Foch then held his hearers under a spell by the power of a natural eloquence, sober and lucid and forceful. As he described the battle on the battlefield itself, before an audience which included President Poincare, Premier Ribot, and other distinguished statesmen, Joffre, Marshal of France, stood near by following his description on a map.

The Russian Revolution.

If we were to take the revolution month by month and watch its growth and development, we would find it like a child which has set out to reach a certain point and, intent on its object, is walking along evenly and directly. The detours it makes are only to get around certain obstacles in its path, but not to leave its goal altogether. This is not surprising to any student of the Russian revolution who knows its deep-rooted definiteness and its self-consciousness, for the revolution does not date from the war. To think that the war caused the Russian revolution would be to mistake its whole point, which is this very definiteness and this self-consciousness, this religious absolutism, as it were. It was not an accidental thing which happened because of the war-weariness of the soldiers. It might be said that the revolution dates from the days of the Decembrists in 1825, when certain officers went out upon the streets of Petrograd and demanded constitutional reforms. Those were the echoes of the French revolution reverberating in Russia. The desire for freedom, for a new social order, was a constant and conscious fact to the Russian people. In each generation it went deeper down among them, so that it can be almost traced from the upper classes in the sixties to the Intelligentzia in the eighties and to the working-classes fifteen years ago. And now it has gone down deep to the peasants, those who were heretofore the dark people. It has embraced all.—Century.

Back From the Dead.

Howard G. Leighton, mentioned in a Canadian casualty list as having died on a battlefield in France, startled his sister, Mrs. W. C. Jones, by appearing at her home in Pembroke, Mass., the other day.

"I thought you were dead," was the sister's greeting.

"I thought so myself," the soldier replied.

Leighton, who enlisted at Boston with a Canadian regiment, said he was pronounced dead, and the body ordered removed for burial. As he was being taken away stretcher-bearers noticed signs of life, he said, and took him to a hospital, where he recovered. Notice of his death was conveyed to his family in March.

A Family Reunion.

At Fenwick recently Mrs. Rebecca Smith elebrated her 95th birthday anniversary, surrounded by 160 relatives, including children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. Of her own family still living there were present Mrs. Swartz, 90; Mrs. Piper, 85, and Mr. Benjamin Lane, 81 years of age.

Economy Begins at Home

Now-a-days Governments, Chancellors, bankers and business men talk economy, However, it is one thing to talk economy and another to put it into practice.

The Canadian Housewife

holds the key to the situation. Real economy may be practised by the housewife in food purchasing for the home. At very small cost she may obtain the finest cocoa that money can buy — a cocoa unexcelled as a food drink and unrivalled as a flavoring, that adds extra delight to hundreds of dainty desserts.

MUST DISBAND UNION.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Sept. 12.—The St. John policemen, who have been organizing a union, were warned by H. R. McLellan, Commissioner of Public Safety, against affiliation with any trades organization, and gave them forty-eight hours to decide, under penalty of dismissal. The men say they propose merely a local union.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy, lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

A Narrow Escape.

Tommy Atkins likes to pass a joke, even when he is hurt. "Coming through Ypres during hot fighting," says a Canadian soldier-author, "I passed a friend. 'You have a fine bruise on your forehead,' said I, pointing to a raw bump the size of a goose-egg. 'How did you get it?' I haven't an idea," he answered, 'unless a shell bounced off it. Some of 'em have come close enough, so one might have done it.'"

Has Polar Disease.

Vilhjalmar Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, who is now en route from Fort Yukon to Victoria, is just recovering from a mysterious malady to which Constable Lamont of the R.N.W.M.P. and many of the natives succumbed. The disease was epidemic last winter on Herschel Island.

Owners Must Pay Penalty.

It will be interesting to garden owners to know by a recent decision in the Hespeler court that when a dog scratches up a private garden, fenced or unfenced, the owner of the dog may be legally held liable for damages.

A Strange Appeal.

At Ingersoll recently a number of farmers were only dissuaded with difficulty from approaching the Duke of Devonshire with a request that he dismiss his constitutional advisers over their steadfast devotion to the M.S.A.

Lived Like Hermit.

At the London Conference recently Rev. J. K. Macdonald reported the finding of an aged minister, after 40 years' service, living in a single room and doing his own cooking.

GERMAN FIEND MEETS GRIM END

Pirate Who Sank the Lusitania Is Dead.

CASE OF POETIC JUSTICE

Lieut.-Commander Schweiger of the U-88 Ran Into a British Mine Field and Never Came to the Surface Again—Died Like Women and Children that He Murdered.

COMMANDER SCHWEIGER, who commanded the submarine which sank the Lusitania, is dead. His death occurred in September, 1917, but has only been admitted by the German Admiralty, according to reports received here.

Last September Schweiger in command of the U-88 was in the Bight of Heligoland with another submarine. Both U-boats submerged and the other commander felt a chain sweeping along the side of his boat and believed he had run into an unknown British mine field. A terrific explosion under water followed. The second boat rose rapidly and signalled for the other. There was no reply.

COMMANDER SCHWEIGER.

A vain watch was kept for the U-88 and she has not been heard from since. There is little doubt, the report says, that she sank.

This will seem to the civilized world to be one of the cases of poetic justice recorded in connection with the war. Although Schweiger was honored in his own country and received medals for his dastardly act, he will long be regarded as the personification of all that is worst in the German character. In future generations, some people whose heads are as soft as their hearts may try to excuse him by saying that he only obeyed orders, but the fact will always remain that he gloried in what he had done.

Stewed Crow a Luxury.

The ordinary crow if well stewed is a fine dish in Germany.

A 50-cent egg fried in butter that costs $7 a pound is a luxury.

Clothes made of cloth instead of paper are reserved for the folk with money and soap is merely a memory.

The non-combatants in the cities of Germany have become resigned to the death of children from malnutrition. The old people pass away as a matter of course.

Milk is sold only on a physician's prescription.

In short, the only way to survive in the Kaiser's realm to-day is to fight the Allies or make munitions.

In substance, this was the impression of the Germany of to-day as expressed by an American woman who left Germany on March 23rd last.

Miss MacAvoy and her sister, Mrs. Ida M. Utx, of Hoboken, went to Germany eight years ago to try to regain their health.

"We had been in Germany since 1910," said Miss MacAvory. "We left on March 23, just about the time the whole country was getting jubilant over the great peace offensive that was to end the war. News had come in about that time about the success of that horrible long-distance cannon that was hurling shell into Paris and everybody I saw was happy.

"They knew nothing about the army of Americans that was piling into France. Neither did we, because all this had been most cleverly kept from the German people. We spent most of our time in Dresden. No one there believed that America could possibly get actively into the war. They had been assured that the U-boats would keep American troops away from the continent, and the few Americans that were taken prisoners were merely a handful of adventurous spirits."

A POPULAR HERO.

Col. Joseph Boyle Saves Lives of Roumania Deputies.

Col. Joseph Boyle, a Canadian officer, from the Yukon, has become the popular hero of Roumania and wears the highest Roumanian decoration within the gift of the King for saving a number of Roumanian deputies from certain exile, and probably death at the hands of the Russian Bolsheviki, according to travellers reaching France from Jassy, the temporary Roumanian capital.

Soon after the Russian Bolsheviki broke off relations with Roumania last January, as the result of alleged anti-Bolshevik activities on the part of the Roumanian deputies, several of these officials were arrested at Odessa, following the invasion of Bessarabia by Roumanian troops. They were sentenced to exile to Sebastopol and were placed on board a ship to be deported. None of them knew what their fate might be and everyone was convinced they would never see their native country again.

Col. Boyle pleaded in their behalf with the Bolsheviki leaders and insisted upon their innocence. The Bolshevik authorities were deaf to his appeals, and would not revoke the sentence of exile. Col. Boyle then declared that if the Roumanian deputies were deported he would share their fate. A special steamer conveyed the deputies and Col. Boyle to Sebastopol, where, after a stay of several days, during which the party suffered many hardships, Col. Boyle finally convinced the Russians that the Roumanians were innocent and all were released.

Col. Boyle took them back to Odessa by the steamer on which they were deported to Sebastopol and accompanied them to Jassy, where he was given a great reception by the people and the Government. King Ferdinand awarded him the Crown of Roumania, the highest Roumanian decoration.

Col. Boyle is six feet tall, rugged and broad as the country he comes from. It was he who, when all other means of communication were impossible, carried from Jassy to Odessa the Roumanian peace terms with the Bolsheviki, thus preventing hostilities, which at the time seemed imminent.

To Escape From the Huns.

Pat O'Brien, the daring aviator who escaped from a train bearing him to a German prison camp, says in the American Magazine:

"I began to cough violently, as if the smoke in the compartment was choking me. So, when I opened the window again, as if I had to have air, the guards didn't interfere. I had been figuring out a plan for making the jump a quick enough one to prevent their catching me and pulling me back.

"I had some bread and sausage in a sort of knapsack I had made out of an old gas bag, and I acted as if I wanted to put this up in the rack. To do this, I stood on the edge of the seat and took hold of a strap. Pretending to sway with the train, I tested this strap and found it would bear my weight. So then with my bag and the precious food in it, I gave one or two lurches, as the train rocked, and then threw myself straight out of the window.

"I landed on my feet, but my head struck the ground at almost the same instant and I lost consciousness. It was only for a few moments, however, for I pulled myself together quickly and started to run off the right of way. The train was stopped half a mile further on, but by the time they came back I was lost in the darkness. Fortunately, I was so dazed that I had headed the wrong way—back into Germany. I say 'fortunately' because if they searched for me, they probably went the other way. By the time I changed my course I was able to make my way through a different section where they were less likely to be looking for me."

Lieut. O'Brien trained with the R.F.C. at Camp Borden.

He Strove to Please.

Lord Charles Beresford tells in his memoirs the story of an old Irish gamekeeper who always agreed with everything that was said to him.

Meeting the old man one day when the wind was blowing a gale, Lord Charles said to him, "It's a fine, calm day today."

"You may well say that, Lord Charles," replied the gamekeeper with hearty acquiescence, "but what little wind there is is terrible strong."

So He Might.

You see, if it hung out of his ear he might experience some difficulty in drinking.—Exchange.

A Moving-Picture Soldier.

Private Billings went over the top one morning, was knocked down by a German shell, stabbed five times, roled off a trench parapet, run over by two tanks and dragged three miles by a runaway mule, but came back fresh and smiling. Before enlisting he was a "stunt man" for a motion picture company in Canada. He says war is child's play.

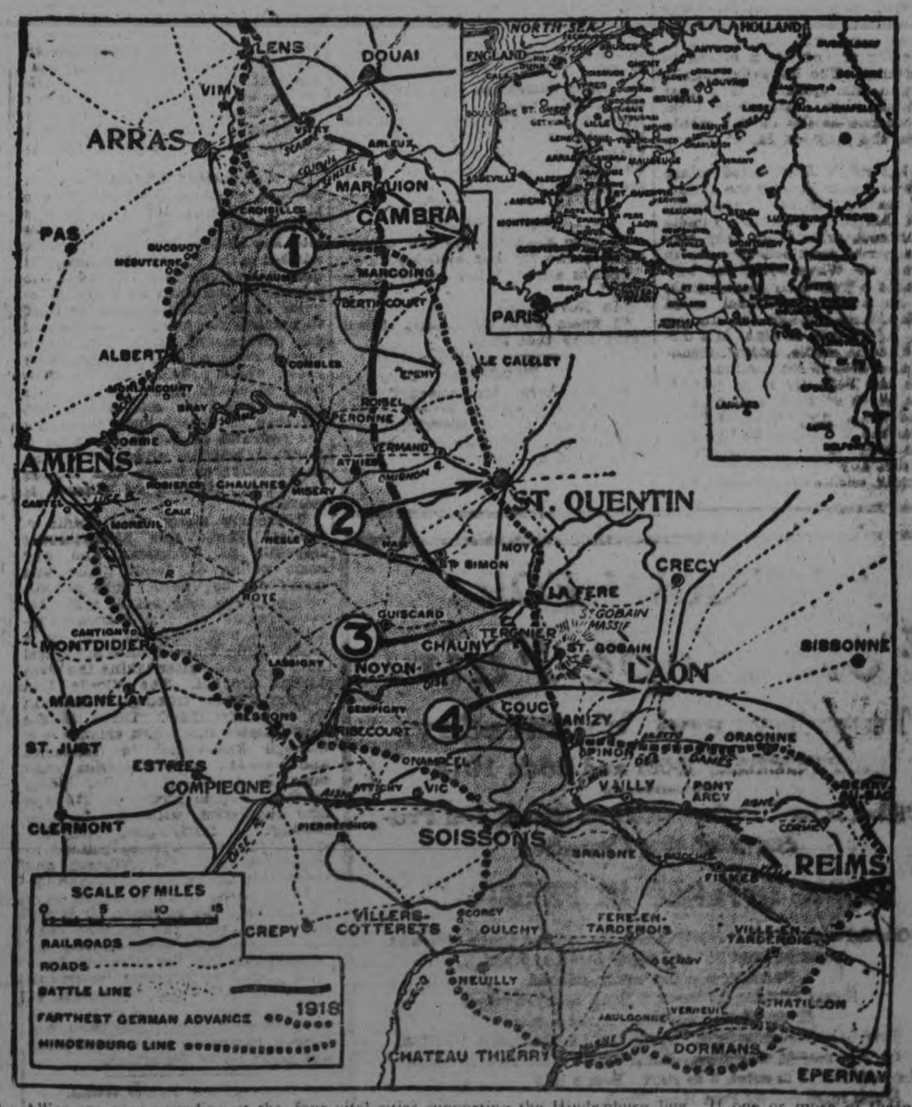
FRANK L. JENNE, The Semi-Ready Store, GEORGE STREET.



The Allies are now pounding at the four vital cities supporting the Hindenburg line. If one or more of these places falls the line will give way at that point and will invite a German rout. (1) The first city is Cambrai. Traffic against the Arras sector starts from this rail centre. The British are within touch of it. (2) The second important city is St. Quentin. It stands near the head of the Somme Valley and is the centre bastion of the Hindenburg line. The French and British are less than nine miles away. (3) LaFere, on the Oise, is near its fall. Ternier and Travercy, two of its suburbs, are already in French hands. When this strong city is captured the St. Gobain massif will be turned from the north. The hill is regarded as the key to the German positions. (4) The French hold their old trenches facing the Hindenburg line on St. Gobain hill and are able to bombard Laon, which is within plain sight less than ten miles away. Laon is a great rail centre and its capture would break the German resistance in this part of France.

Protective Coloring.

The vivid and beautiful markings the butterfly's wings are often a ale to those who would find in coloring of animals a means to visibility. The butterfly, thanks his gorgeous splendor, is a most spicuous object, especially from ve, whence chiefly danger would e in the way of insect eating ds.

The butterfly's illuminated wings m to be designated for the attrac- of mates, and have developed ough this potent principle despite dangerous prominence they give insect, who uses other means to nteract it. When flying the but- fly takes a peculiarly zigzag path, ch, as submarine-careful ships w, is a proper means for eluding ger. A butterfly in flight is a dif- lt object to strike, notwithstand- the slow rate of locomotion.

When the butterfly is at rest, it is its wings over its back, so that the drab, protectively colored er surface is visible. In this pos- the insect is of very low promi- ce from any angle.

The moth, unlike the butterfly, flies at night. Obviously, the bright coloring would be to no purpose in attracting mates. The moth is garbed in dull tints, which render it inconspicuous during the day, its period of rest. There is no need of hiding the upper surface of its wings; so a convenient means to distinguish moths from butterflies is the fact that the latter, when at rest, fold their wings above their backs, as stated, while the former spread them wings out flat.—N. A Republic in Turkestan CONSIDERABLE mystery surrounds the setting up of a republican form of Government in Turkestan, which was announced some weeks ago. Since then we have heard nothing of it, and at the moment are unable to determine whether the inhabitants of Turkestan acted on their own initiative in the step they took or whether they were inspired by German agents. It is to be assumed that they are friendly to the present Government of Russia, for it is announced that they have formed an alliance with Russia. Formerly Turkestan was a Russian province, though composed largely of Mohammedans. There was also a considerable Chinese population, and at one time Turkestan used to be spoken of as Russian Turkestan or Chinese Turkestan. Its boundaries were not exactly defined, but China and Russia never seriously quarreled over them. Whether Chinese Turkestan has joined with Turkestan proper in setting up a republic is not known. If any such ambition were entertained the present would be a capital time for putting it into effect.

In the Washington Star Mr. Charles M. Pepper says that the significant thing about the latest news from this remote region is that if such a thing as a republic really has been set up it means a Mohammedan republic and Mohammedanism and republicanism do not seem to be compatible according to Western ideas. The Mohammedan countries which have an existence as independent Governments or semi-independent Governments are few, but where they do exist they are autocracies in which the will of the ruling monarch is law. That is the condition in Afghanistan, which has a Mohammedan ruler, although under British protectors through the Government of India. But this protectorate in no way interferes with the laws and customs of the Mohammedans. When the ruler of Afghanistan blows offenders from the cannon's mouth, that is all in harmony with custom and no outside Government, whatever the nature of its protectorate, will seek to interfere.

When the Young Turk movement started in Constantinople, overthrew the Sultan and provided a constitution, all this was declared to be certain to fail because it was contrary to the fundamental ideas of a Mohammedan state. Mohammedanism in Turkey at that time was not very efficient and the Young Turks were able to build up a political machine which they turned over to Germany in the present war. Although in the beginning those who were sincere sought to adapt Turkey to Western institutions they were wise enough not to call their political machine the Turkish republic. In Turkestan apparently a different course has been taken. The new Government is declared to be a republic in alliance with Russia. What Russia there is to be allied with does not appear, but it may be assumed to be the Bolsheviki at Moscow. The nature of the alliance as understood in Turkestan also may be assumed to be that of an independent Government federated with another Government at Moscow. The interesting point in the news that came from Turkestan by way of Cologne and Amsterdam and Moscow is that there actually was a national congress and that it provided an executive body composed of eleven Mohammedans. This executive body being Mohammedan would in reality mean a Mohammedan republic.

It is of passing interest that in the account given of the setting up of the Turkestan republic the statement is made that a republican commission has been appointed to act as an adviser to the Emir of Bokhara. This does not appear to show undue confidence in the Emir as a republican ruler or in Bokhara itself as likely to practice the principles of republican government as they may have been understood by the National Congress, which provided the executive body of eleven Mohammedans. Mohammedans know one another better than Christians knew them, and the restraint placed on the Emir of Bokhara may be given significance as an effort to insure that Moslem fanaticism will not be allowed to prevail.

There are many other points of interest about this Mohammedan Republic of Turkestan and also some points of doubt. The first query will be whether it is genuine or whether it may not be a sinister development of the German-Pan-Turanian movement to set up a puppet Mohammedan state in Central Asia with the Kaiser taking the place of the prophet. The Middle Asia railway system traverses Turkestan in both directions. There is the Transcaspian line which extends east through Samarkand to Tashkent and there is also the line from Orenburg in European Russia, which reaches down to Tushnet. There is also connection with the Siberian railway. A fairly good telegraph system formerly was maintained in connection with the railways and there were also telegraph lines to the military posts, some of which were distant from the railways. It is not understood that the railway communications have been entirely interrupted or that the telegraph lines have ceased to transmit messages. Unquestionably the Bolsheviki at Moscow have had some communication and their leaders may have suppressed important news as to what was going on in Turkestan.

The deepest mine in the world is said to be the St. John Del Rey copper mine in Brazil, which has a depth of 6,000 feet.

STRATEGIC RAILWAYS.

Work Done By the Canadians Behind British Lines.

Behind the new fighting line since the Germans' advance in April there has grown up a network of strategic railways making a formidable system, which more than compensates us for the loss of those lines we had to abandon and destroy in our retirement. Almost from the day the enemy crossed the Nord Canal practically every battalion of Canadian railways troops has been working unceasingly at the task, some units acting as pioneers in the construction of the great defence line that causes the Germans to hesitate on this sector.

Little French villages that never hoped for steel links with the larger cities have now become, as if by the rubbing of some magic Aladdin's lamp, great junctions where trainloads of supplies come and go every part of an hour. The new lines run through the fertile fields of growing crops, but careful building has saved the Frenchman his harvest, but for the necessary strip of permanent way. There are alternate routes around towns, which the Boche might shell, and day by day stores of carefully-concealed ammunition dumps grow up which are fed by the strips of steel.

"Speaking from a strategical point of view," said a railway staff officer, "we are in a better position to-day than we were on the Somme. The hundreds of miles of new track have been built especially for military use and conform with the fighting front. All possibilities have been considered. Where, previously, we had to rely on civilian-built lines which wound tediously round the country by indirect routes, we now have a military system which takes out supplies in the quickest and most direct way to where they are needed. The latest German thrust gave us the first test of the system, and divisions were shifted with a speed that must have surprised the enemy."

In the same way some of the Canadian auxiliary troops have been working untiringly in the gun spurs behind the new front, from which the big howitzers pound the enemy positions. One battery from the Middle West has the record of construction, 12 of these in a week, and each one was cleverly camouflaged from the prying eyes of German airmen.

From the new railheads, many of which have been christened with Canadian names, here start freshly-constructed light railway systems that wind their way through little valleys still screened from the enemy to the fine, new reserve trenches which have not yet had to be used, and perhaps never will be. You cannot run trains over a line drawn in blue pencil on an ordnance map, and the railway engineers have to build scores of miles that might not be used. They must be there for an emergency.

The construction of the new British defences—railways play a prominent part — have been marvelously complete and have been so rapid that before the Germans could take breath for another stage of the attacks on this northern section, the fabric of a fortress faced them and grew into such menacing shape that they hesitated. Now, if he takes another fling at the middle road to the coast he will have to pay the same great price in blood. The "army behind the army" has done its duty, and built well—even better than it destroyed in the sombre days at the end of March.

War Prices.

An Indian in one of the Western reservation was in the habit of bringing to Mrs. Gray each spring several baskets of wild berries for which, from time immemorial, he had always charged fifty cents a basket. A few days ago he paid his annual visit to Mrs. Gray's back door. The maid took the berries and tendered the usual payment. The Indian shook his head. "One dollar a basket now," he said. The maid called her mistress and explained the difficulty. Much surprised, Mrs. Gray again offered the money to the Indian, who once more refused to accept it. "The baskets are the same size as usual, are they not?" "Yes." "Well, then, why isn't fifty cents a basket enough?" The Indian shifted from one foot to another quite calmly. "Hell big dam war somewhere," he announced. "Berries $1 a basket now."

Stenographers For The Civil Service

In order to meet the needs of the several departments of the Civil Service, a test will be held at the Central School, Peterborough, on Saturday, the 14th, September, 1918, for English stenographers and typists in the Civil Service of Canada. Examinations will be held in relays beginning at the following hours: 2.00 p.m., 4.00 p.m., 7.00 p.m., and 9.00 p.m. Intending candidates should present themselves at the examination hall on the day and at the hours mentioned and their names will be duly entered on the roll of candidates. No fee is required. The subjects of examination will be shorthand and typewriting only. Candidates must supply their own typewriters. The salary will be $600 to $1,000 per annum, according to the candidates' rating in the test and their previous office experience. This test is for temporary employment only, but permanent appointment may subsequently be secured by passing one of the regular competitive examinations for stenographers.

Science in War Time

THE other day two leading spirits in the Canadian Manufacturing Association asked these questions:

Can a beam of energy on the order of the X-ray be driven two miles horizontally upon the German lines?

Can the magnitude and intensity reach such proportions as to scorch and destroy living things in its path?

The answer was emphatically in the affirmative. Not only can the beam of energy be driven in a horizontal direction, but vertically downward from suitably equipped aircraft.

The same type of magneto-electricity used for wireless telephony is adaptable for this purpose. The number of wireless vibrations or cycles used for wireless telephony are near the bottom of the scale and cover only the "auditory range." The telephone vibrations, or waves, are diffused in different directions. By intensifying, increasing the quantity of current and concentrating its direction, a most intense heat may be obtained, to which that of a burning glass would compare as a candle to a house on fire.

The main point of discussion was the improvement of the design of propellers and flying surfaces of aircraft. The fact that no matter how we may improve the engine, the waste of power increase as greater speed is sought in aircraft, is fundamental to any significant advance or new departure in design of such constructions. The first and imperative requirement is greater efficiency in what the engine drives—the propeller and the surfaces of the body and wings.

For a moment consider the waste of power of the propeller entirely apart from the engine. All progress of the aircraft is obtained exactly in the same way as with the modern steamship; namely, from the thrust of its propeller screw, or wheel, all referring to the same instrument.

The engine furnishes, say, 200 horse-power to the propeller, while the plane goes ninety miles an hour If this were exerted, all of it, as "thrust" without loss, it would be a steady push of 833 pounds, at ninety miles an hour. But the fact is that under the very best conditions less than 108 pounds of thrust is realized. So we see that about seven-eighths of the engine power is lost in various directions, while only one-eighth, or 13 per cent. remains as driving or lifting power, which is the same thing, and this is exclusively confined to the propeller operations.

Further losses to which the 108 pounds of thrust are later subjected must not be confused with those incident to operating the propeller itself and producing the thrust.

To put the matter of propeller loss another way, if the power supplied to the engine were all utilized or transformed into thrust by the propeller, being 108 pounds in the case stated, an engine of only twenty-six horse-power would be required.

The saving of weight immediately assumes great importance. The 200-horse-power engine weighs upward of 500 pounds. The twenty-six horse-power weighs only sixty-five pounds. Again, as to weight of fuel: the 200-horse-power machine carries a weight of the engine, or 500 pounds, while for the twenty-six horse-power engine only sixty-five pounds of gasoline are needed.

Taken together, the weight of 200-horse-power engine and fuel is 1,000 pounds at the very least, while the twenty-six horse-power engine and fuel would weigh but 130 pounds, a saving of 870 pounds or more. To this can be added another vrey important saving, namely, a decrease in the structural weight of the plane itself due to the diminishing strains, vibration and wrenching effect of the larger engine.

In fact, the whole design of aircraft becomes subject to entire revision as soon as the great and unnecessary weight of engine and fuel is obviated. The reduction of weight and size of the body and wings of the craft reduces "head-on resistance" and swifter speed is at once obtained for this reason. The carrying capacity is not decreased, but on the contrary is increased at least to the extent of the 870 pounds saving in weight of engine and fuel.

The demand of exceptionally good propellers has been accentuated by the problem of supplying several new classes of aircraft designed on better principles.

Tea With the Prince.

If the London despatch intimating that the Prince of Wales is likely to marry into a ducal family is correct many a man in the trenches, where the young prince is so popular, will feel an almost personal interest. Evidence of the democratic spirit of the Prince of Wales are always coming to light. That he does go among the men in the trenches and talk to them as a comrade who can understand and sympathize is not merely talk, but actual fact. The other day a mother whose oldest son is in France and whose daughter is in Toronto, had a letter from her boy, in which he thanked her for the cake she had sent. "You will be glad to know, mother," ran the letter, "that the cake you sent me was enjoyed by the Prince of Wales. He blew into the dugout the other day just after it had arrived, and I had left the cake in the box. "That cake looks good," he remarked, "so I cut him off a piece, and the orderly made tea for us. There is no 'swank' about him at all, he is one of the nicest fellows I have met over here."

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

RAILWAY ENGINES

Speed of Fast Locomotives and How It Is Attained.

BIG WHEELS A NECESSITY.

But Equally Important Are the Steam Valves, the Grates in the Firebox and the Ability to Make Steam Rapidly. Other Vital Factors.

The average person thinks that the bigger the locomotive and the greater the diameter of its driving wheels the faster it will go, and in the popular mind these are the only reasons one engine can "run faster" than another.

The locomotive, athough one of the simplest and best known of machines, embodies numerous devices not visible to the eye of the casual observer which are most vital elements in its efficiency and speed. For example, much of the power of the big express engine depends upon the steam valves and the grates in the firebox quite as much as it does upon the mere bigness of the driving wheels. At the same time it is true that large wheels in ordinary fast running are a convenience and in the very highest speeds a necessity. It becomes necessary, of course, to lighten the load as the wheels are enlarged and increase the speed, which introduces the second phase of the problem—the grates and heating surface.

Fast engines, to continue their work for a long time at a stretch, must make steam very rapidly. To accomplish this the heat of the fire must come in contact with the water at a great many points. A large firebox involves a grate of large area to admit air to the fire—a difficult matter since but a small distance separates the wheels, the width of the firebox being thus limited, while the length must come within the limit to which the fireman can throw his coal.

A third factor is the counterbalance, the solid filling fixed between the spokes of the driving wheels opposite the connecting rods. This is to balance the weight of the cranks, parallel rods and connections and, in addition, the force on the wheels of the weight of the moving piston in the cylinder. Lacking this balance the wheels would roll too rapidly when the rods and connections were moving downward and too slowly when they were moving upward, thus causing a jerky motion.

However, as the influence of the weight is varied by the centrifugal force, which, in turn, is greater or less according as the speed is high or low, it happens that a counterweight which is suitable at a speed or forty or fifty miles an hour produces an injurious "pound" on the rails at seventy-five miles an hour.

It follows, therefore, that the weight must be heavier than the rods and connections because a part of its office is to balance the piston and other parts that slide horizontally and are uninfluenced by centrifugal force. As the speed increases the downward motion of the weight, as that part of the wheel rolls over to the front, makes the wheel with its load press down upon the rail with so much more force than it does when the weight is moving upward on the other side that the effect upon the rail is as if a heavy blow were delivered upon it with a hammer.

So to use an engine successfully at the highest speed it is necessary to make the counterweight lighter than would be correct for moderate speeds. The light weights are not necessarily dangerous at the lower speed, but their use would cause unnecessary wear and tear on the engine and the track and in some cases would even cause unpleasant jerks upon the passenger cars. For this reason fast engines are seldom built unless they can be used in fast service all the time.

Properly proportioned valve openings are absolutely essential to a fast engine. These admit the steam to the opposite ends of the cylinder alternately, as the connecting rod moves first forward and then backward, and in a fast engine they must admit a large volume of steam very quickly. The valves must be moved so as first to open one passage and close the other and then as rapidly as possible close the first and open the second.

It will be noticed by even the most casual observer that the opening to let the steam out of the cylinders into the smokestack is several times as large as that for admitting the "live" steam. But even with this it requires a considerable amount of power to force the steam out with sufficient quickness. This must be done in the fraction of a second.

There are many engines that can get steam into the cylinders quickly enough and that are otherwise all right for high speed, but which are not so arranged to get rid of this steam which has been used and is only in the way. It is this rapid expulsion of the "dead" steam that makes the vigorous puffs at the top of the chimney that seem to indicate that the locomotive is doing a tremendous amount of work. It should be remembered, however, that this noise is not the result of real work, but only of this after operation, which engine builders would avoid. There is a class of locomotives, those arranged on the "compound system," in which the puffs are so faint that the engine would seem to be doing nothing at all.—Washington Star.

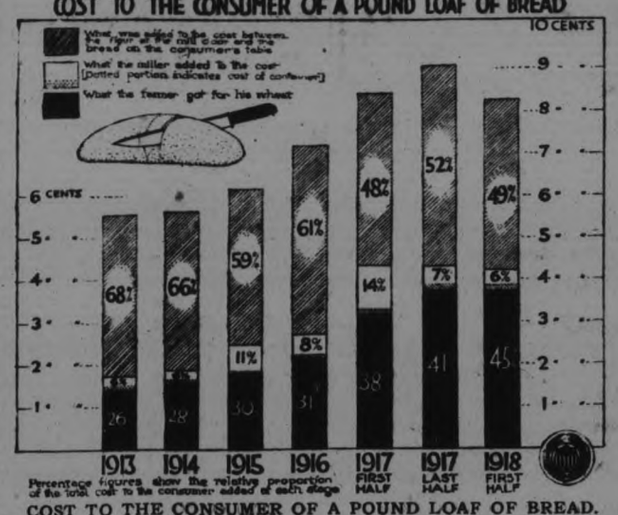
COST TO THE CONSUMER OF A POUND LOAF OF BREAD



Percentage figures show the relative proportion of the total cost to the consumer added at each stage

COST TO THE CONSUMER OF A POUND LOAF OF BREAD.

(Explanation of Chart.)

Since 1913 farmers have been receiving for their wheat a gradually increasing proportion of the price paid by the consumer for bread. The amount received by the wheat grower for his contribution to the average pound has increased from less than 1½ cents per loaf in 1913 to more than 3½ cents early this year. The proportion to the whole price is shown by the relative length of the black columns of the chart.

The middle portion of each column shows what the miller received for his milling costs and profit. This has been a somewhat variable factor, but is now at the minimum (6 per cent.) In this 6 per cent., however, is included the cost of the containers (bags, sacks, etc.), shown as dotted area which has increased very nearly in proportion to the price of bread itself. Bags now cost about 50 per cent. more than in 1918 and 1914.

The shaded portion of the column represents the expense of distributing the flour, making it into bread and getting the loaf to the consumer.

The chart shows that the farmer is now receiving a much larger share of the final price for his product than in the past, and that a considerable amount of "spread" has been taken out of other expenses.

DELEGATION FROM WEST.

Grain Men to Present Views to the Cabinet.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—A delegation of Western grain men is expected to arrive here to-morrow. They are to take up points which have arisen in regard to the transfer of wheat purchase to the Board of Grain Supervisors. Under the old arrangement of purchase by the Wheat Export Co., the business of internal distribution to the mills gradually fell under the company's control. The new system throws purchase for internal demands again open to dealers, subject to Government supervision.

It is in this connection it is understood that the delegation will present its views.

A Comparison.

The following was heard on a street car one very cold day in winter in a Canadian city. At a corner the car was boarded by a husky soldier in the picturesque Highland uniform—the kilts of which leave the knees bare. On the car was a young dude still in mufti, seated with his best girl. The girl cast admiring glances at the attractively uniformed "kiltie," much to the displeasure of her slacker escort. So he endeavored to make fun of the uniform by remarking, "I think that outfit is most ridiculous. That fellow's knees look as if they were frozen." The kiltie, overhearing the comment, glanced contemptuously at the dude's civilian clothes, then scornfully replied: "Well, young fellow, it is a sure thing my knees arn't as cold as your feet." The slacked got off at the next stop.

SAYS ANT IS "CHUCKLEHEAD"

Swedish Naturalist Now Comes Forward to Destroy Insect's Long-Established Good Reputation.

The ant has been greatly overrated, in the opinion of Rich Ege, a Swedish naturalist. Solomon set the fashion with his famous admonition to the sluggard, and the ant has been living under false pretenses ever since. For, as a matter of fact, it is a hopeless chucklehead, and to consider its ways is no way to become wise.

Mark Twain arrived at this conclusion many years ago, and science now joins hands with him in the person of Mr. Ege, who publishes the results of a series of experiments with ants. He disposes first of the insect's supposed uncanny power to recognize other tenants of its own anthill. Mr. Ege washed ants in ether, dipped them in liquid gained by pressing a number of ants from another hill, and put them back among their own friends, who promptly fell upon them and ejected them. He took ants 50 times larger than the inhabitants of a certain anthill, washed them and treated them in a liquid pressed from ants of that hill, and then placed them in it. The Lilliputian insects did not recognize the giants as invaders. Mr. Ege concludes, therefore, that the supposed remarkably sharp recognitional powers of the insects are simply a matter of scent and inherited reflexes.

Ants removed from familiar paths blunder blindly along, with no sense of distance or direction, until they strike a trail made by themselves or other ants. In many tests made by Mr. Ege the insects disclosed "no more intelligence than is to be found in the digestive processes of human beings." In other words, he found nearly all their acts are but movements by reflexes, unconnected with intelligence.

INDIAN SOUGHT THE EVIL EYE

As most tourists and travellers have realized, there are two kinds of Indians on the western reserves, one being those commercial spirits who seek the station platforms and frequented trails to sell their poses for whatever silver money they can get, the other those strong-minded but simple souls who believe the kodak has the evil eye and that to be winked at by it means very bad medicine indeed. Few can remember Indians who sought photographs for the sake of photographs.

Jimmy Simpson, guide, trapper and hunter in the Canadian Pacific Rockies, was riding across the Stoney Indian reserve, north of the C. P. R. main line, one early fall day, and had set up his little tent on the edge of the Bow river to spend the night. Like all good guides of the present day, he carried a kodak. He had scarce finished his evening meal when a tall Indian brave came from the brush and in sign language asked him to take up his kodak and follow him. There was a good light, for Simpson had eaten early and the short days had not yet come. A short distance up river they reached a tepee, and they had scarcely reached it when a squaw came out with a little papoose in her arms. The Indian posed, as seen in the picture and motioned Simpson to take them. Amazed, but willing, he did so.

The child was dying of consumption. By next morning it had passed away. The parents knew it was about to leave them, and that was why they sought the man with the picture machine. To-day, framed in beads and velvety buckskin the small reproduction is a treasured, revered household god. And round the neck of buck and squaw there are silver chains each holding a locket containing the child's face. For Jim Simpson was touched by the action of the savages and took pains to do what he could to soften their sorrow in the loss of their little one.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

For the Love of Pete

By IMES MACDONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mable Wells was as winsome as twenty, as buxom as thirty, and as wise as forty, and yet she was none of these. A woman would have said she was thirty-five—a man, twenty-five, but as a matter of fact she was none of these, either. She was entirely twenty-eight, admitted every year, month and day of it, and smiled when she did so, serenely and brightly smiled, whether you looked skeptical or doubtful.

In her graver moments, or hours, I should say, Mable was private secretary to the Honorable Peter Hobb, one-time senator in the legislature of the great state of Ohio, and for all time the richest man in Bellington. The Honorable Peter Hobb, although only forty-one, was also the most dignified man north of the equator and south of the North pole. He radiated dignity—he oozed it. He lifted his hat with the same precise lift every time he met a woman of his acquaintance, and bowed his head at just the right angle, with never a variation. And during the four years in which Mable had been his secretary he had never treated her other than as if she were a duchess at a diplomats' ball, with all the courtesy of a Chinese mandarin.

And yet notwithstanding all of this perfection of treatment on the part of her employer, Mable had disgraced herself. She had chewed the dignified hand that fed her, as it were, she had—but what's the use?

When a friendly, sprightly, here-I-am and here-I'm-not sort of a girl, as was Mable Wells, rises up in the office of her employer, shoves back the chair from her desk, slams a book down on its paper-littered top with a bang and yells out in disgusted tones right in the face of a dignified man like the Honorable Peter Hobb—"for the love of Pete! you make me sick," and then marches out of his office in the middle of the afternoon and doesn't come back the next morning you may know that something would be liable to happen.

"I just couldn't help it," she told her mother that night. "He just lets that nephew of his work him to a standstill. It will ruin the boy, and he's too nice a youngster to be ruined that way. The idea! With all those bills coming in every month and getting bigger all the time, and he never says a word!"

"But, Mable, just think what you said. His name is Peter, dear, and you said, 'for the love of Pete!' He'll think—oh, my, what will he think? Of course, you're fired."

"I don't care if I am," said Mable, spunkily. "The nerve of him asking me if I'd take Billy Hobb in hand and marry him just to make him behave—even supposing I could!"

But Mable's voice was as calm as a kitten's slumber as she answered the telephone at ten-thirty the next morning, and I regret to say that she slipped her hand over the transmitter and giggled, when she heard the voice of her employer on the wire.

"Are you ill this morning, Miss Wells?"

"Oh, no," blithely.

"Well—er—you were late—and—I—er thought you might be ill."

"I thought I was fired," said Mable. "Fired? Oh, no, and you see, I can't seem to find anything this morning. If you could arrange to get over as soon as possible, Miss Wells, I would appreciate it."

Thirty minutes later Mable entered the office and pitched into her work. There was a pile of bills to be checked off, and checks to write for each bill, besides a dozen letters. The bills were statements from Billy Hobb's creditors, and one of the letters was to Billy himself. The letter was of Mabel's own composition, and it was to the point:

"My Dear Boy:—Needless to say, I'm covering your accounts as usual. Also I'm sending you check for a hundred, which will be enough and more to get you home. I'm expecting you to begin work at the plant on the first of the month.

"As you know, if you had displayed any particular talent in any line at all I would be glad to extend our present arrangement to that end, but such has not been the case. As far as I can see, your only talent lies in spending money and feeding chickens.

"I want to have a good time myself one of these days, and if I'm ever to have it, you've got to be able to take things in hand here. In order to do that, you'll have to get in now.

"Your affectionate uncle."

The Honorable Peter looked over the checks hurriedly and signed them, but he signed the letters without looking at them at all, while his secretary smiled demurely as she placed them in the mail.

Peter Hobb had ignored the surprising flare-up of his secretary, and the days passed the same as before until the stiff formality and rigid courtesy of her long-time superior again got on Mabel's nerves. She had stood it for four years, and one afternoon she got frantic enough to fly.

"If he'd only swear, sometimes," she thought to herself, "or kick over the waste-basket. If he'd only let go of himself once, the pompous thing!"

And a smile trickled the corner of her mouth, and when a woman smiles to herself she's planning something, and when a woman is planning something, look out!

When she left that afternoon, the Honorable Peter Hobb, following his usual custom, arose from his desk and bowed to her stiffly.

"Good-night, Miss Wells," he said, gravely, just as he had done every week-day night for four long years.

"Good-night, Peter Prim, you stiff thing!" laughed Mabel Wells, as she vanished through the door.

And he stood there in perplexed wonderment gazing at the door that slammed behind her, until a grin slowly spread over his sober face.

"Funny thing—a woman!" is what he said. But what he thought was entirely different. It had to do with what his private secretary might be expected to do under a given circumstance. Take kissing, for example.

But during the next afternoon the Honorable Peter was out and his wayward nephew strolled into his uncle's private office.

"Hello, fair one!" he greeted Mabel familiarly.

"I'm glad you're here, Billy," said Mabel. "Do you know that your uncle's been trying to get me to marry you?" she laughed. "What do you think of that?"

"Honestly?" grinned Billy. "I always was a lucky guy." And forthwith he reached out and caught Mabel by the forearms.

"Behave yourself, Billy," she was laughing, when the door opened and Peter Hobb entered.

"Look here, Bill," he said, grimly, "if you must hug my private secretary, kindly arrange to do it after office hours."

"Don't be foolish, Peter," said Mabel, demurely. "He wasn't hugging me at all. He was only trying to, the fresh youngster. I am perfectly able to take care of myself as well as the proprieties of the office, thank you. Now, Billy," she said, squinting up her fine eyes and facing the nephew determinedly, "it's time you were helping your Uncle Peter. You will report to the foreman of the shipping department at eight o'clock tomorrow morning. Salary sixty dollars to start—a month, that is. And no fooling, understand me."

"Yours truly, boss," laughed Billy, as he bowed low before going out the door.

For a moment the Honorable Peter Hobb stared at his secretary in amazement, and then at the letter she had written to his nephew, the one he had signed without reading.

"He's a good boy," she smiled, "only you were spoiling him, Peter."

But Peter Hobb waved the subject of his nephew impatiently, and stood over his small secretary stiffly.

"A—a while ago, you know," he was saying, awkwardly, "I was—I guess I was jealous of the cub, Mabel, dear, I—I——"

"I knew, Peter. I—I knew you were," said Mabel Wells, shyly.

While from the door, where Billy Hobb had returned to enter his blond head for the last word, came a stern voice:

"Look here, aunty! If you must kiss my private uncle, kindly arrange to do it after office hours."

And some such arrangements were subsequently made.

HOW A YOUNG GIRL SUFFERED

And Was Restored to Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Told By Her Mother.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For three months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching so I didn't know what to do. I read in the papers about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained in weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. FINORE, 516 Marcy Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Gas on Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say the medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretion, or they can eat as they please in reason, and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid, and prevent the formation of gas, sourness, or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antacid than Bisurated Magnesia, and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestant. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully with out the need of pepsin pills or artificial digestants.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate, and as the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you have ever had on "What to eat."

THE MOST COMMON AILMENT

Kidney diseases are our most common ailments. When the kidneys fail to remove the inert poisons from the system, nature will attempt to get rid of them in some other way in the form of pimples, boils and other skin diseases which are due to the poisons remaining in the system. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will free the system of these poisonous acids, and you should have no hesitation in trying them.

Americans Penetrate One of the Most Vital Points in the Enemy Battleline

The St. Mihiel Salient is Obliterated —German Garrison in a Dangerous Position—London Press Comment.

ENEMY FEARS BLOW

(By Ed. L. Keen—United Press.)

BERLIN (Via London), Sept. 13.—"We are now standing on our new lines, which have been prepared," says an official statement. "During the night," the statement adds, "evacuation of (St. Mihiel) salient was completed."

London, Sept. 13. — Battered in from the South and West by the Americans in their first great offensive, the St. Mihiel salient is undoubtedly doomed. The only question is whether the Germans can get out their garrison in time to prevent its capture.

This salient was one of the strongest and most vital points on the whole front; the Germans had been fortifying it for four years. To-day the situation is similar to that which existed in the Soissons-Rheims pocket except that now the Americans and the French are pinching off the salient, working at a double quick pace. It is not believed that Pershing's objective is more than the capture of the pocket, which is nearly completed. With this operation developing so victoriously, however, there is a good likelihood of further American action in the Woevre region.

The allied advance on the Metz front is vitally important. It brings Briey (the) great mining basin of France) under the fire of long range guns.

The London morning papers pay high tribute to the Americans, giving the story of their offensive prominence over Premier Lloyd George's speech at Manchester.

"This is one of the great moments of the war," said the Mail. "Ludendorff has feared a blow in this quarter for weeks. The Kaiser screams with rage and alarm."

Sixty Guns Captured.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 13.—In their offensive against the St. Mihiel salient, the Americans have captured sixty guns, according to information from the battle front received here to-day.

The advance of the Americans into the St. Mihiel salient from the south has now reached a depth of eight miles, according to information from the front this afternoon.

The enemy is blowing up ammunition dumps at Sattonville (in the middle of the pocket). Latest reports of territory taken by the Americans indicate the neck of the salient has been narrowed to less than six miles. If two German divisions still remain in the pocket their escape is decidedly improbable.

"Squeeze Play."

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The new famous Foch "squeeze play" is being applied successfully in the American drive. The Teutons are literally being squeezed out of the salient, with St. Mihiel as its apex. Army experts to-day foresaw that quickly the Boche must pull out of that salients or face a catastrophe.

Pressure on both flanks of the salient has left the wedge narrower, and it now appears that it will be only a short time before the line is straightened out completely, running from Fresnes to Pont a Mousson.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Americans are reported to have captured Vigneulles, 7½ miles north of Xievray, through which the former line ran, also have captured Beney Heudicourt and the Boise De Thiaucourt. General Pershing's troops so far have captured 9,500 prisoners, and have taken sixty German guns. The Germans are blowing up the ammunition dumps at Hattonville and Dom Boux.

Savy Captured.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 13.—(3 o'clock despatch)—American attacks in the region of St. Mihiel are continuing successfully, the French War Office announced to-day. On the battle front west of St. Quentin French troops have captured the town of Savy.

Germans last night and early to-day were attempting to remove their artillery through the town of Vigneuilles under the stress of the American attack on St. Mihiel salient. They were meeting with greatest difficulty, however, being hampered by airplanes as well as by artillery fire. The enemy has already lost a number of cannon and trench mortars, beside a huge number of machine guns.

Advance Continues.

(By Fred H. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE METZ FRONT, Sept. 13.—The American advance is continuing today on both sides of the St. Mihiel salient, between the Meuse and the Moselle. Additional prisoners are constantly being reported. Rain is falling at intervals. The Germans are having great difficulty in removing their artillery from the salient, because of the bad roads. Among prisoners captured by the Americans was the German Count Schesyng. The American doughboys found him with his orderlies their baggage unpacked, waiting to be captured. Among the prisoners taken by the French were 350 Austrians.

Making Progress.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Despatches from the front report prisoners taken by the Americans now total 9,500. The Americans are making progress so rapidly that the situation is changing momentarily. They are reported to have captured Vigneulles.

"Debts of Germany Are Reaching Fantastic Figures"

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 13.—The postponement of a peace proposal and the likelihood of a fifth war winter weigh equally on all belligerents, and not on Germany alone, in the opinion of Friederich Von Payer, the Imperial Vice Chancellor of Germany, in a speech at Stutgart. Our state debts, the Vice-Chancellor said, are everywhere reaching fantastic heights, and everywhere we struggle against the encroachments on our personal liberties. Herr Von Payer admitted that the U-boat war had not worked so quickly and surely as had been hoped. He added that it was useless to dispute whose was the fault. The enemy, he said, was still unable to compensate their losses by new construction, and declared that the robbery of neutral ships almost without parallel by the Entente could not be repeated.

Additional Progress Has Been Made by the British Forces

Enemy Attempts Counter Attack, But is Repulsed—Advance Made in Flanders.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 13.—(Official). — German troops last night delivered an attack with the co-operation of airplanes on the town of Havrincourt, south-west of Cambrai, recently taken by the British. The attack was repulsed with great loss. Further south on the front opposite St. Quentin the British have gained possession of Holnon Wood. A German attack opposite Moeuveres, on the canal west of Cambrai, failed completely.

The statement reads:

"Yesterday English troops gained possession of Holnon Wood, driving the enemy from localities in which he offered resistance. Further north our line has been advanced to the east of the village of Jeancourt, which is now in our hands. In the course of the evening strong hostile forces, assisted by a squadron of low-flying airplanes, attacked our new positions at Havrincourt, and were repulsed with great loss. Opposite Moeuvres hostile infantry assembling for a counter attack were observed and subjected to a heavy and accurate fire by our artillery. The attack which developed subsequently was completely unsuccessful, the few Germans who reached our positions being killed or taken prisoner.

British troops have captured the town of Jeancourt, in the St. Quentin sector, north of Vermand. In Flanders the British made progress, pushing ahead west of Auchy in the Labassee region.

Progress was made by our troops during the night to the west of Auchy-Les-Labassee.

Amsterdam, September 13. — The Belgische Dagblatt reports an apparent civil evacuation of Lille. It also says the Germans are constructing a number of auxiliary bridges across the Meuse.

Heavy Casualties.

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 13. — Germans in force continue stiff resistance above Gouzeaucourt, throwing back the New Zealanders' advance south of Dead Man's Corner. In this encounter the enemy troops exposed themselves to heavy casualties.

Under a hurricane bombardment from trench mortars, and supported by the heaviest machine guns, the Germans attacked a post near Vermand to-day. The British garrison is reported holding out.

PRESS COMMENT ON KAISER'S SPEECH TO KRUPP WORKERS

The Time is Far Past for Fine Words, Says One Paper—"Far From Being a Happy Utterance."

Special to the Examiner:

ZURICH,, Sept. 13.—Adverse comment on the Kaiser's speech to the Krupp workers was printed in the "Muenchner Nachrichten" and the "National Zeitung," according to despatches here to-day.

"The Kaiser's interpretation of the war will hardly stand good before the judgment of future historians," said the "Muenchner Nachrichten."

The "National Zeitung" said: "The time is far past for fine words, even from the Kaiser's eloquent lips."

Pleading Tone.

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 13. — "Does the Kaiser feel his throne is no longer firm?" the news "Nieuws Uandendaag" asked to-day, commenting in Wilhelm's speech to the Krupp workers.

"The almost pleading tone of his speech is a significant sign of the position of Germany in these critical hours. It is far from being a happy utterance for the promotion of peace."

Situation is Serious.

Special to the Examiner:

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 13. — "Our position is the most serious in German history," copies of the Cologne "Zeitung" received here to-day declare.

"We fight the whole world with only our own strength. Suggestions that we evacuate Belgium avail us nothing."

FRANK JENNE Says:

Economical buying is getting the best goods at the lowest price, and not buying the lowest priced goods regardless of value. Safe buying is knowing that you will be satisfied before you accept any goods. You know that the demand for goods exceeds the supply—which is the chief cause of high prices. Woollens have been particularly affected by the rise in price. Therefore do not save in price to lose in value. "Semi-ready" suits are of the best material —at the lowest price. "Come to me."

CANADIANS ARE ENGAGED

Quebec Troops Drove the Enemy Across the Nord Canal and Returned With Prisoners

DIGGING IN

(By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

WITH CANADIAN FORCES IN THE FIELD, Sept. 13. — The enemy did not hold for long the bridgehead he established the night before last this side of the Nord Canal at Sauchy-Cauchy. Quebec troops raided this post last night and not only drove the enemy across the canal, but carried the war into his own territory, returning with prisoners. Under the worst possible weather conditions, our troops are holding the extremely difficult salient formed by the Sensee and Nord Canal and are digging themselves in. Not content with cross shell fire from the north and east the enemy has shelled villages in this sector, including Excourt, Rumaucourt and Saudemont. Had it not been overshadowed by the brilliant offensive of the past month, the gallant defensive work in this triangle, in which Quebec, Eastern and Western Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta troops are engaged, as well as former mounted units, would rank as a major instead of a minor operation.

Government is Firmly Decided to Dissolve Prussian Diet

(Canadian Press Despatch)

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13.—The Government is firmly decided to dissolve the Prussian diet, if no agreement is reached in the franchise reform question according to the Berlin Lokal Anziger. Chancellor Von Hertling, however, will shortly summon various party leaders for a conference, the article continues and every effort will be made to find a solution to the question. It adds that the House of Lords will be given full opportunity to consider the question despite attempted terroristic methods, plainly referring to the social democratic party's published demand that the Diet be disolved immediately. It appears likely that a decision will not be reached for a fortnight or more.

Payer Believes Belgium Can be Restored Without Restrictions.

Special to the Examiner:

ZURICH, Sept. 13.—The immediate dissolution of the Prussian Chamber has been demanded in a resolution adopted by the Socialists, according to despatches received here to-day from Breslau.

Ground for Depression.

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 13.—Speaking at a public gathering in Stuttgard, the German Vice-Chancellor, Von Payer, expressed the belief that Belgium can be restored without any restrictions, despatches reaching here to-day say. "The real ground for our depression," he said, referring to recent reports of unrest in Germany, "is our belief that prospects of peace are being increasingly postponed, and that the possibility of war through another winter must be faced by all belligerents.

"I believe Belgium can be restored without indemnitities and without restrictions."

Censor Holds Back Names of Towns Captured.

(Canadian Press.)

Paris, September 13. — (Bulletin.) — It is declared here to-day that American troops have completely smashed the St. Mihiel salient but the censor will not permit the announcement yet of the names of towns and territory captured.

14,000,000 MILLION MEN REGISTERED IN THE STATES

Washington, Sept. 13. — Yesterday's registration of men between 18 and 45 for military service, was eight per cent above the advance estimates and may have added close to 14,000,000 men to the man power roll, according to the reports to Provost Marshal General Crowder to-day.

Advanced 4,000 Yards

Eager Troops Broke Through First Trenches of Hindenburg System.

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press.)

With the British Armies in France, Sept. 13. — An electric thrill ran the length of the new British front at the news that the Americans had attacked on a big scale far at the other end of the long line. The word was passed from mouth to mouth, and by wire, from the back areas to the first line trenches.

"Good for the Yanks!" said many a Tommy and many an officer. Regardless of the fact that there was no information as to the success of the attack, all seemed to assume that the battle was going well.

CAPTURED VILLAGE.

In the region before Cambrai, the Yorkshire troops, New Zealanders and others, have pushed through 4,000 yards of the Hindenburg line. With rain pouring down, thunder attempting to rival the roar of the guns, and lightning vieing with the flashes of the batteries, the British swarmed out of the edge of the shattered Havrincourt wood and despite the treacherous footing on the chalky, muddy slopes, they overran the first trenches of the Hindenburg system, advancing to the long stone wall surrounding Havrincourt Chateau, and Crest Hill

They found different obstacles when they captured the same territory last fall, but knowledge of the ground aided them in the advance. They smothered the German machine guns and went on, stopping only when the village of Havrincourt was completely taken. Thursday's operations have freshened the German resistance in the neighborhood of Gouceaucourt, which is of doubtful value, and presage an earlier withdrawal there and further south.

UTTERANCES HAVE NOT BEEN CENSORED

Press Will Be Asked to Exercise Caution.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 13.—That no ban was issued against the publication of the utterances of Rev. Kennedy Palmer anent the Guelph Novitiate is the statement made by the Chief Press Censor of the Dominion. Mr. Palmer is free to express his views to the western people, and the papers are free to publish these views and the telegraph wires to carry them east. It is stated, however, that something in the nature of a "caution" will be issued to the papers by the Winnipeg representatives of the Censor Department. But nothing in the nature of a ban has been ordered by the Chief Press Censor.

ENEMY PREPARES TO EVACUATE THE CITY OF LILLE

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 13. — Numerous fugitives from the city of Lille are reported by Belgian newspapers to be arriving at Malines and Antwerp, according to despatches from Amsterdam to the Central News Agency. Apparently Lille is being evacuated by the Germans. The British forces in their advance yesterday to Havrincourt, south-west of Cambrai, penetrated the German positions in some places for a depth of 2,000 yards.

Weather Forces Directors to Alter Their Programme—Miss Stinson Will Make Special Biplane Flight To-morrow—Grand Stand Performance is Good.

THE FLOWER SHOW

Despite the unfavourable weather yesterday, the afternoon gate receipts at the Exhibition amounted to $340, which is more than satisfactory for the first day. The evening programme had to be cancelled owing to the continuous rain, and this morning's prospects were none too bright. Shortly after dinner another passing shower threatened to mar to-day's prospects, but it quickly emptied its contents, and the directors breathed freely again. At half-past twelve the street cars were packed. Many farmers were in the crowd, and the citizens were flocking southward. If the weather man would only give the citizens and Fair directors a chance to get together this year's Exhibition would realize something of the success it deserves.

To-Night and To-Morrow.

The grand stand attractions pleased the crowd yesterday afternoon. This programme is uniformly good, and is better than the usual show in front of the stand. To-night there should be a big crowd out. Miss Stinson will give her first flights (weather permitting), the fireworks' display will be given, likewise the grand stand show and band concert.

To-morrow should bring out a bumper attendance. By a special agreement made at the Empress this morning, Miss Stinson will do her air stunts between 3 and 3.30 o'clock. The horse races and other features, including the usual judging of driving and riding horses, will all be included.

Last night's rain was a heart-breaker. It poured as steadily as if it were preparing to float the "Crystal Palace"; the expected crowds were held in their dugouts by the untimely barrage, and the directors locked up everything early and went home with recollections of the year in which the Fair drew the unsual visitation of snow. From President Denne down to the last director there were no signs of funking. They faced a possible deficit for which they would be personally responsible as calmly, not so cheerfully, as if the first day had paid all the expenses, and left the proceeds of the other two as so much "velvet" for the effectuation of the plans they dream about all the year round. Mr. Herb. Forster made his camp bed in the secretary's office about half-past nine and prepared to spend the night, assured of sleep, lulled by the soft playing of the rain on the new roof. That was the close of a day far from perfect, but this afternoon intermittent splashes of sunshine promised better things.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

In spite of the disagreeable weather conditions with the rain drizzling down at times, and falling in a steady downpour at others, a large part of the advertised programme was carried out in front of the grand stand.

The cancelling of the aeroplane flights by Miss Katherine Stinson was a big disappointment of course—disappointing not only to the crowd, but to the directors, and to Miss Stinson herself. The Curtis bi-plane, upon which she does her circus stunts, was all tuned up for the afternoon flight, and was the centre of attraction. However, the weather grew steadily worse as the time of the performance drew near, and finally as the planes of the machine were saturated with rain and a strong side wind was blowing, which would have made an ascent from the exhibition grounds a difficult matter, Miss Stinson was reluctantly forced to call off the flight.

Rain also interfered with the grandstand performance, including the act that was to have been put on by "Raffles." The "grave" in which "Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

RIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13TH, 1918.

A PEACE OFFENSIVE.

e military victory of her armies is connection with war events have t Germany's strategy is patent.

"It is now the purpose of the Gern army," he writes, "to check or e of the present campaign for eight eks at the outside. At the end of time German diplomacy—using formula of Kuehlmann, now re-ted by Burian, and by every Gern commentator, that no military ision is possible—will point to still roken German lines and demand a ference—a negotiation or discus-n around the table."

uch a peace offensive if inaugurat-by Germany is already doomed to ure—a failure as absolute and come as the fiasco which has crowned huge offensive of the German arm-this summer. Lloyd George's
doubt of this fact.

"To end all wars," announced the ritish premier, "we must impose a urable peace on our enemies. The russian military power must not ly be beaten, but Germany her-lf must know, and the German ople must know that their rulers ve outraged the laws of humany and that Prussian strength canot protect them from punishment."

THE SAILORS' FUND.

eterborough has no particular rea-to feel proud of the showing so made in connection with the Navy gue fund. Despite the energetic ef-s of the committee, who have been ing no stone unturned to ensure success of the campaign, the sum ar secured represents only about half of the objective aimed at.
is a disappointing result. The it of the appeal was so unquestion-
, the urgency of the need of funds reat, that a more hearty response expected from the citizens. It is e feared that many who could eashave given substantial sums subscribed less than they should , while hundreds of others who d afford to make some contributo the fund have given nothing.
ere is still a chance for Peterbor-h to redeem itself, and it is hoped by the time that the final res have to be made that the ob-ve will be reached. It is possible many citizens who have not been vassed are anxious to contribtheir bit towards the success of campaign. Mr. W. H. Dunsford, of Bank of Commerce, will receive ributions from any who have not n called upon by the collectors.

e have been so many calls that tizens have grown weary of giv-
But frankly have many citizens eterborough given to patriotic ob-to an extent that they really feel sacrifice? And if they have, do not think that the sailors must times grow weary, too, weary of g the peril that lurks beneath the ce of the sea, the constant men-of the Hun, pirates who murder ged seamen as cheerfully as they shell open boats filled with women and children? To the everlasting credit of the merchant sailor, however, it may be said that weary as he doubtless sometimes becomes there have been no cases recorded where a sailor has refused to sign on for a voyage, even although some of them have been torpedoed half a dozen times. Off to the sea goes Jack, carrying the food and the munitions that keep our armies in the war. Death may be waiting for him—15,000 of his comrades have been murdered in four years—and if he is killed by Hun shells or sent to the bottom by a Hun torpedo there is no pension for the wife and little ones left behind, but off he goes anyway.

For four years has Jack been carrying on, and to show their gratitude the people of Peterborough subscribe $5,000—about 25c. a head. It is not a record that we should feel particularly gratified about, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the amount may be increased. The objective was none too large and there should be no stopping until it is at least reached.

A DOUBLE SAVING.

By saving gasoline the people of Canada will be saving money. Both are needed for war purposes and it is therefore of the greatest importance that the Fuel Controller's request for the doing away with unnecessary motoring on Sunday should be generally complied with. If all the pleasure cars are left in their garages on the coming Sunday there will not be only a quarter of a million barrels of gasoline conserved, but the actual cash saving is estimated at $150,000.

At this time, when we are being urged to avoid all unnecessary expenditures, surely there could be no more simple contribution to this end than the eliminating of joy-riding. A vast amount of money will be required by Canada to carry on her share of the war to the end, and this money can come only from one source—from the Canadian people. It is the duty therefore of every citizen to eliminate as far as possible the spending of money on luxuries and to save as large a proportion of earnings as possible in order that the necessary financial reserves may be available when the country requires the use of these funds.

The Fuel Controller's request furnishes an admirable way for motorists to embark on a campaign of saving. By reducing the use of their cars to a minimum on week days and not operating them at all on Sundays they will be money in pocket and will at the same time afford those interested in the oil industry an opportunity to secure a reserve supply and avoid shortage that may become serious if the conservation programme is not faithfully carried out.

"GOD HELP US!"

(Cleveland Press.)

Falling back before the slow moving but ceaselessly advancing hosts of British, French, Americans, the German foe prays to God for help.

"God help us!" screams the frightened Baron von Ardenne, Hun general.

They stand deep in the blood of slaughtered babies, non-combatant men, women, nurses, wounded and beg for God to help them.

They stand convicted of crimes unmentionable and pray for God's help.

They wallow in scenes of their horrible depravity and cruelty and plead with God for help!

They bring to the world the most awful of all wars and hope that God will help!

They violate their most sacred pledges and call upon God for help!

They tear down altars and demolish churches and expect God to help them!

They kill clergymen, and violate the sisterhood of the church—and pray to God for help!

They steal the graven images from cathedrals and cast them into cannon, yet pray for God to help!

They enslave a captive people and beg God's help!

They torture prisoners and innocent women and children—but pray to God for help!

And they are not repentant, yet pray for God's help.

They are not willing to end their riot of barbarian lawlessness but pray for God to help them!

The God we have come to know and worship is NOT the accomplice of the murderer, the robber, the ravisher, the Hun!

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Yanks are coming.

While Ludendorff is trying to plug the holes in the Hindenburg line, General Pershing has given him something else to worry over.

Yesterday's downpour, while it dampened the Exhibition visitors, provided a good alibi for the vendors of lemonade furnishing a reasonable excuse for the weakness of the beverage.

"Hatred manifests itself only among people who feel themselves beaten," says the Kaiser. Well, the Germans, judging by their ruthless bombing of hospitals, murdering of merchant sailors and sinking of hospital ships must feel satisfied that they are thoroughly defeated.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Bringing Patriotism Home.

There are people whose patriotic talk is most fervid and who are extremely hard on "slackers," yet whose patriotism is not equal to the self-sacrifice of one teaspoonful of sugar at a meal.—Hamilton Herald.

The Duty of All.

It is for masters as well as men to think of their country first. Fair play, tact, and readiness to see other points of view, are necessary if labour troubles are to be avoided. At heart, every worker in the land wants to win the war. It is for him to refuse to nurse small grievances. It is for employers and officials to avoid small irritations.—London Daily Express.

A Coming Day.

We are calmly waiting for the time when we may summon all our dignity as an ultimate consumer and tell the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker that "on account of the peace" we'll be danged if we'll pay such prices.—Regina Post.

What is Necessary.

The German people must be given an object-lesson. The mere cessation of hostilities and the readjustment of the map will not settle the war nor satisfy civilization's sentiments. There must be an outward and visible concrete and convincing demonstration of triumph — a crowning pageant which will show the wide world that the menace of Prussianism has been removed for all time.

Worry at Potsdam.

The Hohenzollern family is putting up a hard struggle to postpone the day when the Krupp shops will quit paying dividends.—Washington Star.

Wasted Effort.

One of the most poignant aims of Hun propaganda is to arouse distrust among the Allied peoples. They still tell Canadians that England has let us shoulder the main burden. It is to laugh.—London Free Press.

An Unsurpassed Record.

Correspondent Livesay's story of the record of the Canadian corps within the past month is a story of marvellous achievement. It is a record which may have been equalled but has not been surpassed by any other corps on any front during the war.

Voice of The People

Peterborough,
Sept. 12, 1918

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—I have like others of the city been watching the way the mail has been collected and am not surprised at the Labor Union condemning the way it has been handled.

I was going down George street, to-day the 12th and I met the mail cart at one of the boxes thirty-five minutes ahead of time and three boys standing on the steps of the cart and I would judge by the size they were not over ten years of age, one of the boys being in the box of the cart I expect holding down the mail. I hope the postmaster or the authorities will take the matter up.

Yours Truly,
ONE WHO HAS SUFFERED.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—Possibly some remark might be in order with reference to the complaint made by Mrs. J.C. Gamey, of 592 Aylmer street, (wife of Pte. J. C. Gamey, on service overseas), that the coal delivered to her house was not as ordered.

Mrs. Gamey came and pleaded that as her professional engagements as nurse took her out of the city that she had not been able to get her coal wants supplied by any dealer. I consented, as I have been glad to do for any of the women on the fund, to try and get some fuel for her. She wished nut and furnace coal. Four tons. As to what was delivered and sizes is a matter for the dealer. He no doubt did the best he could. Assorted sizes are now the rule where any can be had.

Mrs. Gamey paid in a cheque for $48.00. Representing four tons. An upset price of $12.00 per ton accepted from the women, and where the coal costs less additional coal is delivered to make up the money amount. That is explained to all, and to Mrs. Gamey as well, and on that understanding the order was accepted.

Looking at the receipted coal delivery tickets, which I have, I see that Mrs. Gamey received 4,465 lbs. of pea and nut, and 4,363 lbs., of stove and pea. Stove coal is an excellent furnace size. She had ordered two tons of nut and two of stove. So she received for $48.00, 8,828 lbs., or going up to four and one half tons. To be precise four and two-fifths tons. This works out at a price of $10.90 per ton, and not at $12.00 per ton, as Mrs. Gamey, hastily and, wrongly, states. People should be careful and verify.

So far in the delivery season we have been fortunate, with the kind assistance of dealers, to whom credit should be and will be given, and who have at some inconvenience given the service, placed in the homes of the men on service approaching $3,000.00 worth of coal. The remonstrance and fault finding as made by Mrs. Gamey is the first instance of any dissatisfaction.

I am sorry that Mrs. Gamey is dissatisfied. Very sorry that I took the trouble to get her the coal, and particularly sorry when so many others, hundreds, would gladly welcome the relief of knowing that they had secured four tons of coal in the present straightened supply circumstances. But what would you have.

Yours etc.,
F. H. DOBBIN.

HOUSES ARE IN DEMAND

Cottagers are Returning to the City and Many Are in the Market For Houses.

With the return of the cottagers from the summer resorts the housing problem for the winter is becoming decidedly acute and judging by the houses the real estate men have on hand there is no solution to it. The agents report from five to seven houses on hand but nearly all of these are very small houses at from $5 to $15 a month. The agents say that directly there is a report that a house will be empty it is snapped up before it comes into their hands.

Buying and selling in real estate is very slow at present.

FINE RESPONSE TO AMERICA'S WAR SUMMONS

Thirteen Million Men To-day Flocking to Register Under Draft Law—First to Fight Being Picked Too.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—While American soldiers at the front in France stood ready with French and British forces for what may prove the greatest battle of the war, thirteen million other Americans registered yesterday for military duty and gave the most inspiring demonstration of patriotism in the nation's history.

There was no delay in starting the machinery by which the man power of the country will be made available to bring the war to a speedy and triumphant end. Out of the tremendous bulk of men who responded—with every race and creed represented—there will come soon from camps at home three millions or more fit for warfare eager to go overseas.

Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder's final message—"the registrars are at their posts awaiting you"—was answered. The country's man-power was ready, for it swarmed about the registration booths soon after daylight and kept up at an unending line through the day.

Yesterday's fighting census will determine the stature of every man, just as it will pick those first to be called. The work of mobilization, it might be said, already is under way, for district boards will select men over 19 and below 37 to comprise the big contingents included in the October draft calls. This means that many available soldiers will have barely two weeks at home.

The drawing to fix the relative standing of 13,000,000 will not take place under three weeks perhaps, but meanwhile district boards will start at once numbering serially all of the cards filed out yesterday. Questionnaires immediately will be sent to men of the 19-37 class, while older men will be classified later.

By Saturday night Gen. Crowder confidently expected to have the exact figures showing the total registration. This may run above or below the approximate estimate of 13,000,000, but careful study placed that as substantially correct.

The same good order that prevailed on June 5 a year ago for the first registration was looked for, with a greater number to be registered.

"Breakers Ahead" Here To-day

The management of "The Grand" regret that the feature drama, "Breakers Ahead," did not arrive in time for the performance last night, but are pleased to advise patrons that it arrived this morning and will be shown to-night and to-morrow, matinee and evening. In addition to the regular vaudeville performance, the Dancing Beatties, now showing before the grand stand at the Exhibition Grounds, will be an added feature at the programme to-morrow (Saturday) evening. There will be no advance in prices, which will remain at 10c and 15c.

SIMEON ARNOTT WAS FINED $8.10

Simeon Arnott of Janetville, who ran over little Agnes Costello last Saturday, severely bruising her was fined $8.10 in Police Court this morning for not keeping as close to the curb as possible on that date. The charge of negligence was not pressed by the police.

Schooltime is Children's New-Ribbon Time

Quite naturally, because a girl of 10 or 12 years of age requires any quantity of new ribbons and they want the kind that will stand up—that when they make a bow it will stay tied—one that will keep its stability without continually trying to place it into position.
Just such ribbons as these in plain or moire effects are here in abundance. Quite a number of floral effects and borders also to be found. In widths to 7½ inches.

For the Woman Who is Very Critical Concerning Workmanship, Qualities, Material and Style

New Coats That Reflect Superior Qualities at $25.00

Desirable stylish coats—perfect from every angle. Please examine the workmanship, note the perfect stitching and the superior quality of materials as well as colors. If you intend your coat to last throughout this season and well into the next, these are sure to appeal at once.

One of the New Coats at $19.50

The coat is a particularly good value. And we want to emphasize this point just as forcibly as possible because smart, becoming, stylish coats at $19.50 are scarce these days. Made of a heavy wool coating in plum, brown, navy and grey. A new collar is arranged in a large convertible style and made of plush. A new pocket and belt.

Girl's Serge Dresses at $3.75 to $9.00

We shall admit that because of the increased cost of materials and labour these serge dresses for girls do cost more than last season. However, you expect that.
The point, then, that is of greatest interest to you is that at the price paid you will secure the very best possible value.
We can say, and be very emphatic in our statement, that the dresses at present costs do represent the best possible garments you can obtain at their prices.
The colors are blue, brown, green and maroon. Trimmings include braid, embroidery and other ideas. Some are designed along the middy blouse style. Most of them have plaited or plain skirts.
They are such good fitting and good looking dresses that no mother would think of making one home at the price.

The Fall Dresses Are Novel, Unique & Decidedly Attractive

Styles that are expressive of the moment. Designs that further impress upon all, the superiority of American fashion authorities.

It is probably because of the very conditions existing that such wonderfully novel and attractive modes have been developed.

Here you find a draped effect—there a draped idea to conform with the fashion tendencies of the season. Another design will show the effect of an overskirt—another shows fur trimmings and so in the entire assemblage, one model after another presents many attractive features that will surely interest the fashion-loving women of this city.

The season's best and most favored fashions are ready for your viewing and your approval. Come.

Another Express Strike Threatens

CANADIAN CO. EMPLOYEES DEMAND ACTION AT ONCE.

Halifax, N. S., September 13.—Employees of the Canadian Express Co., who have a number of grievances which they have been unable to adjust, will strike. The Minister of Labor was asked by the Canadian Express employees to establish a board of conciliation some time ago, but their application has not been granted. The strike of the Dominion Express employees and the extra burden of work for Canadian Express men as a result, has brought about the decision to strike at once.

A. R. Mosher, grand president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad employees, in a statement to the press to-day said:

"The employees regret exceedingly that the public must be inconvenienced, but the worst is yet to come if the government does not act quickly.

"Let the government appoint a board of conciliation or commission to investigate disputes such as are now causing trouble, as did the government of the United States. That will end the present strike and avoid a more serious one

SOLE AGENT FOR PETERBOROUGH

United States Takes a Hand

Seized Munition Plant for Refusing to Accept Federal Mediation.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13. — The Government will brook no interference with work in war industries, President Wilson announced to-day in a notice served on labour and industry. He called upon striking munition workers at Bridgeport to return to work immediately under threat of a boycott against future Government employment of any kind and the loss of right of appeal from draft on industrial grounds, and announced the Government seizure of the Smith and Wesson Company, Springfield, Mass., for refusing to accept Federal mediation.

SYSTEMATIC DESTRUCTION

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 13. — How the Germans systematically destroyed the town of Ham was described by Madame Verrier, according to despatches from the front to-day. She is a native of Ham. "The Germans emptied the houses of furniture at noon on September 4th, and ordered every one to evacuate," she said. "Fifty inhabitants remained. In the night we heard what we thought was grenade fighting, but discovered it was the explosion of incendiary bombs. The whole town was aflame. The Boches had placed bombs in the houses and attached wires to set them all off simultaneously.

"The Cathedral in Nesle was blown up by Germans in a similar manner."

Mr. G. N. Gordon Has Been Retained

New Phase in Milk Question.

A rumor is on foot that Mr. G. N. Gordon has been retained to take proceedings against milk vendors to enter an agreement to fix the price of milk at 15 cents a quart, charging them with combining in restraint of trade.

Mr. Gordon, asked to-day if the report was true, would not deny that he had been retained to take these proceedings. It is understood that a number of labour men are interested in the matter and have consulted Mr. Gordon with the object of his taking proceedings under the Criminal Code which provides a penalty of up to $4,000, and not less than $200, or two years imprisonment, for anyone who is found guilty of conspiring or agreeing with another to unreasonably enhance the price of any article or commodity.

If such proceedings are instituted, it will cause considerable interest and will probably be akin to the proceedings taken against a number of plumbers in Toronto, some years ago, when fines of $1,000 were imposed.

Up to the present the milkmen have given no indication of increasing the price of milk to the consumer. According to the opinion expressed at the meeting of the milk producers and vendors a few evenings ago, their chief concern is to regulate the distribution and limit the "spread" between the price received by the producer and the price exacted by the distributor.

Want Office Eliminated

No Need for Minister of Railways and Canals, Says the "Citizen."

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.— In the course of an editorial counselling care and caution in the selection of the personnel of the proposed new National Railway Board, the Ottawa "Citizen" this morning protests frankly against the inclusion of the Hon. Dr. J. R. Reid as a member of that board and intimates that when the Board is appointed there should be no further need for a Minister of Railways and Canals.

Command of Siberian Force

(Special to Examiner.)

Montreal, Sept. 13. — The Montreal Gazetter referring to the rumors that the command of the Canadian Siberian expeditionary force will be given to Colonel Bickford of Toronto, with promotion in rank, says: "On the face of the case it certainly appears the better policy to give command of the Siberian contingent to officers already holding high rank, and whose merits have been established by service in the field."

FACTORY CLOSED DOWN FOR FAIR

MAYOR C. H. DUNCAN.

His Worship Mayor Duncan,

Any municipal information that I can give is at your service.

Yours truly,

One Rollicking Day on the Toll Roads

Cabinet Ministers Nearly Broke on Morning "Joy" Ride.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—Members of the Ontario Government, including Sir William Hearst, the Prime Minister, laughingly called it an outrage.

Officials of the Eastern Ontario Good Roads Association cheerfully retorted that it was grim retribution.

This exchange of opinion developed Wednesday morning, when Premier Hearst, Hon. T. W. McGarry, Hon. Dr. Preston, and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson were taken with a party of local gentlemen in five cars on a motor trip over the Ottawa district toll roads. As 80 per cent. of the toll roads in the province are in the vicinity of Ottawa, it was a memorable, costly, and educative excursion.

At the Richmond toll gate R. H. McElroy, M.P.P., "fished out" a two dollar bill and paid for the whole party. After that everybody sat tight and made the Cabinet Ministers pay the tolls. One Minister settled at Merivale Road, and another at the Prescott Road. And so the diabolical exaction continued, until it seemed as though the Government would go broke and have to walk home on the ties. Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, paid the final toll at the Middle Road gate, near the Experimental Farm. It amounted to six cents.

"This is too much fun for one day," said Hon. Mr. McGarry, as he carefully counted the four coppers change receieved from the woman at the toll gate. "Let's go home."

By such ingenious methods the E. O. G. R. A. is burning its propaganda into the inner consciousness of the Ontario Government.

GRAIN MEN WANT TO HAVE CHANGES MADE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—While the regulations governing the grain trade are, in the main, satisfactory to Canadian dealers, a number of points remain to be adjusted, according to Westerners now in the city, to take up the matters in question with the Cabinet. There are now in the capital Messrs. Hugh N. Baird, George Fisher, and F. J. Anderson, all of Winnipeg, and they will be joined by other prominent dealers, who will approach the authorities concerning the

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRH, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease may be driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula, which is used etxensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favourable climate conditions.

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint used in this way acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a tonic action that helps to obtain the desired results. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh or head noises or is hard of hearing should give this treatment a trial.

BEES WERE GETTING ALL SUGAR THERE

None for Woodbridge People, 5,000 Pounds for Bee-Keeper.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—That the town of Woodbridge was completely out of sugar while lying at the station of 5,000 pounds consigned to a bee-keeper to feed his bees, was the startling statement made at a meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association who met to discuss the sugar situation.

"The sugar situation is serious," said W. C. Miller, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association.

J. Houston, of Wallaceburg, president of the Dominion Sugar Company said all they had in sight was one cargo of raw material and then they would have no more until the beet crop ripened. Manufacturers all over the country are waiting for the sugar beet crop and until it comes the sugar market will be tight.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

Harvest Festival Service Held in St. John's Church

Rev. A. MacNamara Was the Speaker for the Occasion—Church Appropriately Decorated.

PRIDE OF SACRIFICE

"When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the Lord thy God for the good land which he hath given thee."

The foregoing from the ninth chapter of Deuteronomy, was the text of the Harvest Thanksgiving sermon at St. John's church last evening. The church was tastefully and appropriately decorated with the fruits and grain of the field, the pulpit decorated with the lilac, and the singing and music in harmony with the object of the service.

THE MUSIC.

Mrs. W. G. Perks sang a selection from "The Creation," "The Marvellous Work," supported by the choir. The solo in the anthem, "Sing to the Lord of Harvest," was sung by Mr. H. W. Morphet. Canon J. C. Davidson, Rev. W. H. White and Rev. Jas. Price, took part in the service.

Rev. A. MacNamara, of West Toronto, who preached from the foregoing text, is a returned chaplain from France, who has been mentioned in despatches by Sir Douglas Haig.

DAY OF STRESS.

It is no small thing to live in these days of stress of service, of conflict, and of death, said Rev. Mr. MacNamara. Whether we believe it or not, it is quite true that we are participating in a mighty convulsion, which marks the close of one period and the beginning of another. We may be proud and thankful, as never before, that we are British subjects—a time when we are fighting to the very death for justice, for righteousness, yes, for peace. The war has at least done this. It has brought us face to face with the real, the fundamental facts of life. We have been enabled to gain a new value and a new vision of the land God has given us. We have gained also a wider vision of Canada's responsibilities.

VIAL OF FREEDOM.

The vial of freedom is nourished always by the crimson, red blood of sacrifice. Many times we ask ourselves these questions: Have we any debts? What does it all mean? Why are we in this conflict? Have we anything in common with Belgium? The answer—the world is very much smaller than we at first realize. No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself. This can also be said of nations. Does it mean any personal sacrifice on your part? Does it mean economy? Do you think it is worth while? We, as a nation, owe a huge financial debt to our motherland.

THE WORLD'S FREEDOM.

Is there any reason that you can give that our sons should not stand shoulder to shoulder "over there" for the world's freedom? There is a two-fold obligation resting on us as a people. To the red man, the Indian of the forest—let no Christian of this land turn a deaf ear to give the Gospel of Christ to the red men of this land, who were its real owners; also the pioneers of this land—those who blazed their way through the virgin forest. We owe a still greater debt of gratitude to God who has given us this great land. We have not yet been brought to our knees in our acknowledgment of God. As we lift up our voices in thanks for our harvest, let us remember our debt to Him, the Giver of all things. We are proud — and justly proud—of this great land of ours—and yet we should ask ourselves if we are worthy subjects of this great Empire? There is a day coming—a day of harvest—when the angels shall gather those whom God has chosen and made His own. Shall it be a day of shame for you? In these days we need to learn something of a sacrifice. Remember that this sacrifice going on out yonder is not wasted. We look upon the outward appearance, but God looks upon the heart. Let us learn something of the pride of sacrifice. We look back to what the Lord has given us, and what He is giving us, with thanks in our hearts.

WOMEN MILITARY AVIATORS EMPLOYED BY THE GERMANS.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 12.—That the Germans are using women as military aviators is indicated in a report that in a machine recently brought down by the Americans the pilot, who was killed, was a woman. The captain of a company of the 167th Infantry says the pilot of a German plane brought down near Sergy, August 28, by Lieut. Miller Thompson, of the American Air Force, was a woman.

Saturday Afternoon Will Be Real Feature of the Exhibition

he was to have been buried in a packing box, and from which he was to have extricated himself, was turend into a pool of water, and this portion of the programme had to be abandoned. "Raffles," however, contribed a most entertaining and clever straight-jacket and handcuff act. The rain which made the straps and ropes slippery made the feat of releasing himself from a straight jacket an arduous one, but "Raffles emerged triumphant after a hard struggle.

The other vaudeville features were clever and bright, and were well received.

The dancing Beatties, two clever child dancers, scored a big hit. Their performance, considering the age of the artistes, is a marvellous one, and they were heartily applauded by the crowd. A trio of comedy acrobats performed many amusing and clever tumbling feats, while the two Fritches were splendid in their wire walking specialty. The grandstand performance is well worth seeing.

THE HORSE RACING.

While neither race on the card was finished yesterday afternoon, the crowd saw two good heats in the 2.15 class and one in the 2.50 class. There are some crack horses here for the races, and the programme this afternoon and to-morrow should be well worth seeing.

The 2.15 class is on the cards to finish this afternoon. Dream Light, a smooth-going bay stallion owned by Dr. Benson of Belleville, won both heats yesterday. The old campaigner, Furioso, owned by W. H. Edgerton of Coulson gave the Belleville flyer a fively battle in the first heat, while Miss Charlotte M. made the running in the second, Furioso refusing to score properly, and getting practically left at the post. The wind-up to-day should be a corker.

The results yesterday—

Dream Light	1	1
Furioso	2	4
Miss Charlotte M.	3	2
The Indian	4	3

Five horses started in the 2.50 class, only one heat being run off, with the following result:

Jim Elliott	1
Helen Patch	2
Sedalia	3
Bobby Hill	4
Wiry Jim	5

Mr. Corbett of Farm and Dairy acted as starter.

The track was very heavy and of course grew steadily worse during the afternoon.

The 57th Band, under the direction of Lieut. Gliddon, helped to enliven things with a good programme.

The Flower Show.

The exhibition of flowers this year is one of the most encouraging features of the Fair. This is the only floral competition held in Peterborough, and it is interesting to recall that it has undergone a big development from the days when the flower section of the Exhibition was hidden away in a little corner of the old building. Several of the directors saw the opportunity of improving this department, and under their fostering care, the show of flowers gradually branched into big tent proportions, and it is evident to-day that there is scope for further growth as there is also need of increased room.

Mr. W. H. Ford of Toronto, was the judge of the flowers and vegetables. In the professional class Jordan Brothers won six first and two second prizes. For the fifth year in succession they took first for the best group of greenhouse plants, and this year's group is an exceptionally attractive one. It is an imposing exhibit, well arranged and showing a nice selection of flowers and plants. It is built up of ferns, including Boston, Teddy Junior, Teddy Roosevelt, Maiden Hair Scotti and Elegantissima, also Crotons, Coleus, Rex begonias, the dainty flowering maple, the tall auricaria in the centre with rubber plants close by, Jackwanis, the blue leafed Shandchies, Nobilis, Anthricnus, and other plants, including the dark red Chinese wool, a flower, and Rubrum lillies.

The blue flowered Jacaranda is one of the striking plants in this group. It is understood that they are not merely for exhibition, but will be for sale at the Jordan retail store and greenhouses.

Mr. C. W. Clees Work.

This display was arranged by Mr. C. W. Clee, of the Jordan greenhouses, whose work is evident in all this company's prize-winning exhibits. Their Coleus, of which there are thirty specimens, are marked by vivid colouring, the Begonias are in a class by themselves, and the fern group is large and likewise a first winner. Their floral design has also been awarded first money.

The Peterborough Floral Company's winnings include second prize for the greenhouse group, a showing that compares favourably with the winner. Their geraniums and floral basket also bear the red cards of first place. The decorated supper table is a feature of the Peterborough Floral Company's display and as usual claims the attention not only of the ladies but of the entire crowds that pass through the flower exhibit's tent.

In the Amateur Class.

In this section Mr. G. W. Downer has again carried off a big share of the prizes, and deserves special mention for his asters, and also his basket of flowers, in both of which he won first prizes. Mr. J. H. Callander took the gladiolus first from W. H. Young, but the latter leads in pansies and roses. The best table bouquet is shown by Mrs. J. L. Wood and the hand bouquet by Miss S. A. Barnard.

Two Suggestions.

The interest in this department of the Fair is growing every year, and the directors should facilitate its extension. In the first place there should be individual places for the exhibits, adopting in the amateurs' section the idea that is carried out in the professional class, but on a smaller scale. The flowers are crowded, simply because there is not sufficient space. Again, the exhibits show the owners' names. These could be added immediately following the judging, without any difficulty and certainly would add to the interest this department always arouses. The public glances over the flowers but without the personal touch that should attach to such competitions. It should be a simple matter to write the exhibitor's name on the tag bearing the secretary's number.

DISTINCTIVE EXHIBITS

A very marked proficiency characterizes the mercantile exhibits in the Main Building this year. Increased effort is shown in the attractiveness of these exhibits, as well as in the fuller representation of the goods displayed, all manifesting the better taste and artistic skill of the decorators. This was one of the gratifying features of our Industrial. Every available space in the Main building was taken up, and throughout the grounds varied exhibits were to be found with attractive and enterprising displays.

It was generally admitted by those in charge of the special exhibits that the publicity given to their goods was well worth the trouble and expense of exhibiting. The results, both in sales and in good prospects secured, proved the Peterborough Industrial to be a far-reaching means of advertising.

HEINTZMAN & CO.'S EFFECTIVE PIANO EXHIBIT.

The representatives of Heintzman Hall, Royal Bank Building, corner of George and Hunter streets, have put up an outstanding display of pianos, Victrolas and other instruments. The high position and prestige of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co. piano today is an evolution of the past sixty years. And it can be said that because of their excellence, these pianos have obtained a pre-eminence that marks them among the unrivalled of instruments. One of the best local evidences of the firm's progress is the remarkably rapid success of Peterborough's Heintzman Hall, under the management of Mr. B. H. Britton. This alone may serve as a proved tribute to the popularity, as well as the excellence of, the Heintzman & Co. piano.

The samples chosen for this exhibit were a beautiful "Classic" upright grand in fumed oak; an "Ionic" upright grand, in mahogany; and a magnificent $850 Heintzman Player piano in mahogany.

The reputation made by Ye Olde Firme Heintzman & Co. piano is due above all else to its remarkable individuality of tone—whilst it is none the less noted for its beautiful touch and durability. The judgment of the best musicians—those who have to use a piano—is deserving of the best attention; and the concert stage artists for solo execution show their appreciation by specifying the Heintzman piano.

The appreciation and preference for the Heintzman & Co. piano for concert work is proof that it is superior for giving the best results in the domain of Opera Houses and Concert Halls, proof of which was lately shown by the installing of a powerful "Classic" Heintzman & Co. piano in the Grand Opera House by the Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons.

In addition to the pianos exhibited there were also shown several handsome types of Victor Victrolas, and Baby Grand Sonoras. The handsome cabinet effects of these popular phonographs, "clear as a bell," won the attention of crowds of visitors.

The exhibit was in charge of Mr. Chas. Gentleman, Heintzman Hall's enthusiastic salesman and musical devotee, assisted by other members of the local staff. The firms city showrooms, Heintzman Hall, Royal Bank Building, corner George and Hunter streets, are open evenings. A hearty welcome awaits all visitors here.

ELEGANT EXHIBIT BY RICHARD HALL & SON

One's admiration for the "Home Beautiful" in home furnishings will find plenty of scope for expression in the elegant exhibit made by Messrs. Richard Hall & Son of this city. It takes the form of a model living room, designed by the expert home decorators in connection with this firm. As a splendid setting of an instructive character, it is a demonstration of what modern taste can do to in unique and harmonious home decorating. The ladies, especially; could not help admiring the arrangement of this modern type of living room, because of its attractive design and colour scheme. It is a picture that will likely be reproduced, at least its intrinsic features, in some of our homes.

The advantage of Richard Hall & Sons as a shopping center whose home decrations have become a strong characteristic, have frequently been brought out. Great care is taken to import a high tide of assortments, keeping them in the channel of sound qualities.

The furniture and furnishings composing this pictured modern living room possess the rather new and striking feature that no two pieces are alike. It is not now thought strictly up to the minute to furnish in suites, but in separate luxuriously upholstered pieces in fancy coverings, such as will appeal to correct decorating. For instance a handsomely decorated window is shown, with a rich soft Beiznet lace curtain and a blue Italian velours with Italian renaissance trimming. Other pieces are: a luxuriously upholstered Chesterfield is seen with a rich grey covering of Italian tapestry in soft rose and delicate shades of grey colours. A chastely designed lounge upholstered in seal brown velvet, with cushion and Italian motif. A decorated white enamelled arm chair in black satin and Italian decoration An Italian arm chair in blue; a Rosewood centre table; two handsome rugs, Persian reproductions, with a combination of rose and other delicate colors. A large floor lamp with blue and gold trimmings, and a reading lamp. A pretty fire place is seen with an ivory mantle and electric grate; as well as a series of four wall candebabras diffusing a soft and agreeable light. The floor is covered with a dark linoleum in oak pattern and the walls are done in pumpkin shade of wall hangings with the ceiling in white. The walls are carefully decorated with a series of pictures reproductions of world famous paintings and were specially framed by Mr. R. J. Soden in a very appropriate and artistic manner.

Peterboro Casualties

Mrs. Eva Robinson, 266 Sherbrooke Street, received notice that her brother, No. 3055667 Pte. David Ross Nichols, has received a gunshot wound in the right arm on September 3rd. Pte. Nichols enlisted with an Eastern Ontario battalion.

Pte. McMahon Wounded.

Pte. John Francis McMahon, 359 Rogers Street, was admitted to a hospital on September 6, suffering from a gunshot wound in the hand. Mr. John McMahon received the news this morning. Pte. McMahon enlisted in Toronto over two years ago. He has a younger brother, Gunner James McMahon, of the Cobourg Heavy Battery, who is at present stationed in Halifax.

EXPLANATION TO THE PUBLIC

The Duffus Garage Will Have No Exhibit at the Peterboro Exhibition.

Owing to the Industrial Exhibition Board disappointing the Duffus Garage by depriving them of the space which had been definitely allotted to them some weeks ago, and depriving them of it without notice the day before the Exhibition placing them in what they consider a most undesirable location, they will have no exhibit at the grounds this year.

We have, however, at the Duffus Garage, a special exhibit of Ford cars comprising a Ford Sedan, Coupelet, touring car and Roadster, together with a Ford one ton Truck with a special cab and stake body, also a Gray Dort Special touring car and Gray Dort Standard.

We also have on exhibition a Ford Tractor and two Oliver ploughs which we brought in by Express from Windsor, and Mr. Taylor of South Bend, Indiana, representing the Oliver Chill Plough Works, is here for the purpose of demonstrating these ploughs. He is on his way to the big Tractor demonstration at Cobourg next week.

We hope to have a tractor and these ploughs working on a farm near Peterboro at the beginning of the week. We also suggest that all those interested in tractor operations and different kinds of farm implements, make sure that they find time to visit Cobourg some time between the 17th and 20th of this month.

Discharged Men to be Treated Here

Dr. Edward Wood Has Been Appointed for the Local Work.

Discharged soldiers will be medically treated in Peterborough henceforth instead of in Kingston. This announcement was made by Major E. Latta, of the Unit Medical Division, Kingston, who has completed the arrangements for the treatment of the local men. When necessary they will receive hospital treatment here, and Dr. Edward Wood has been appointed for this work. Discharged men requiring treatment should report to him. Returned men who are undergoing re-educational training are also entitled to all medical treatment for accident or disease during the period of their re-education. This change will be a decided convenience for the men living here. The appointment of Dr. Wood is a deserved recognition of his ability, and an assurance to the discharged men that they will be well cared for.

Mr. Smith will not accept a salary. "The work will be serious enough," said he to-day. "So much so that the less said the better. I shall do the best that I can, and say as little."

DRUG HABIT GROWS IN UNITED STATES.

Drastic Anti-Narcotic Law Recommended by Probe Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Habitual use of morphine, cocoaine, heroin and preparations containing other narcotic drugs has increased rapidly in the United States within the last two years, and a drastic anti-narcotic law must be enacted at this session of Congress to check the wholesale spread of the habit. These are the conclusions made public yesterday by a special treasury investigating committee, together with a partial report on the number of drug addicts actually under physicians' treatment in the States.

The investigations of the committee, which is headed by Representative Rainey, of Illinois, showed that thousands of drafted men have been dismissed from military camps after it was found they were drug-addicts and that this number included many who systematically developed the habit after being drafted in order to ensure their dismissal. This condition is one reason given for the urgency of immediate remedial legislation.

STEEL UNLOADED BY FORD TRACTOR

Thursday afternoon there was unloaded at the new Duffus Garage two carloads of steel rods without the assistance of manual labour to any extent whatever except to hitch. The steel was drawn off the car by a Ford Tractor and placed at the building with no apparent effort, in fact it was found impossible to stall the engine. Considerable time and money was saved by this method of unloading which proves in a most satisfactory manner the practical use to which this tractor can be put.

WEDDING BELLS

ROBINSON--PAYNE.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at "Inglewood," Lakefield, at five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, September 10th, when Edna Alice, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Payne, became the bride of Mr. John Roy Robinson. The Rev. D. E. Johnston officiated. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father. She looked charming in a gown of white satin and georgette and wore a bridal veil with a wreath of orange blossoms and a corsage bouquet of roses.

The wedding march was played by Miss Myrtle Payne, sister of the bride.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome music cabinet, and to the pianist a pearl necklace.

After supper the happy couple motored to Peterboro en route to Kingston, the bride travelling in a taupe gabardine suit with hat to match. On their return they will reside in Lakefield.

OBITUARY

JAMES G. BATESON.

James G. Bateson, a well known resident of the town died suddenly at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Thos. Arnold, Sussex street, Lindsay.

The deceased, who was aged 88 years and 7 months, retired Wednesday night apparently in good health, but the call came in his sleep.

The late Mr. Bateson went from Baillieboro to the Lindsay district forty years ago, and took up farming in northwestern Ops. Several years ago he retired from farming and resided with his son-in-law, Mr. T. Arnold, from whose residence the funeral will take place this afternoon.

R. D. WALSH.

The funeral of the late R. D. Walsh, who died in Chicago, Ill., on Friday, the 6th inst., took place on Tuesday morning last from the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brown, 5th concession of Dummer, and was attended by a large number of relatives and former acquaintances. Requiem mass was conducted in St. Paul's church here, by the Rev. J. J. McCarthy, P.P., following which the remains were interred in Asphodel cemetery.

The late 'Col." Walsh, as he was familiarly known, was a son of the late Richard Walsh and Elizabeth Ford, who were among the pioneer settlers of this locality.

He was a veteran of the civil war and had been a resident of the United States since 1861. As a young man he followed railroad construction work and, it is said, that he graded all the roads running into Chicago, besides many of the city streets. His practical knowledge thus acquired brought him into touch with promoters of some of the largest industries, with whom he was held in high favour.

He was the accredited founder of East Chicago and Indiana Harbour—one of the geratest manufacturing districts in the west—of which he was the first town president and afterwards mayor and alderman.

He was a devoted Catholic, a whole hearted citizen, and responded liberally to every claim upon his charity, hence was held in high favour by his acquaintances.

His wife, whose maiden name was Honorah Curtin, also their three children, predeceased him by many years. He lived to a good old age, the declining years of which he spent in St. Margaret's Hospital for the Aged.

He always cherished a warm feeling for Canada and particularly this section where he passed his early days.

He is survived by one brother and three sisters, viz.: John Walsh, of Asphodel; Mrs. David Kelly, of Dummer; Mrs. Fife, of East Chicago; and Mrs. Haines, of Corry, Penn.— Norwood Register.

A Political Storm is Gathering in Britain

Threatened Coal and Shipbuilding Crisis Are Blamed Upon the Cabinet.

QUESTION OF UNIFIED CONTROL

LONDON, Sept. 13.—"Two black clouds are gathering," says a London paper, "a coal crisis and a shipbuilding crisis." Behind them are the elements of a political crisis.

Charges that the War Cabinet is responsible for this parlous state of affairs because of its short-sighted and unstable policy are openly made by The Manchester Guardian and Daily Chronicle, both of which papers have loyally stood by the coalition Government, while reserving the right of independent criticism.

The War Cabinet, it is alleged, undertook obligations to allies and to neutrals which it could not fulfill and regardless of conditions that it ought to have foreseen. Instead of safeguarding the supply of coal which is a most vital raw material for the war the policy of the War Cabinet made reduction in output inevitable.

Before the present year the miners furnished over 380,000 recruits for the army, and last spring 75,000 more skilled men were withdrawn. The War Cabinet, which frequently changes its policy on the man power problem, is now endeavouring to comb skilled miners out of the army. Unless it adopts very stern measures, it will not succeed. The army does not willingly give up fit men, and some of the men do not want to give up the army.

"Will the War Cabinet," asks The Chronicle, "realize its respousibilities before it is too late? The present crisis has been brought about chiefly by the panicky action of the War Cabinet following upon the German March offensive. The proper relation of the claims upon us for men and material was upset. It must now be readjusted."

"Nobody will blame the Government for taking desperate measures at the moment of the German March offensive," says The Manchester Guardian, "but were they not continued when they were no longer necessary? Was not the military crisis of the moment, so far as that was one of men, tided over when the American Government agreed to brigade its troops with the British and French armies, and the military crisis of the future solved when the American Government undertook to send men across at the rate of 250,000 a month?

"These decisions of the American Government were entirely new factors, and they have completely transformed the military man-power situation. Nevertheless, the Government is still carrying out many of the panic measures which were adopted under stress of the events of last March."

"Governmental reluctance to review its past and the War Office desire to maintain as big an army as possible are advanced as an explanation of persistence in a policy which is no longer justifiable. It is no business of the War Office to adjust competitive demands of various national needs and still less to assess the contributions of the various nations. That is the business of the War Cabinet alone in so far as the former points is concerned, and of the War Cabinet in consultation with the Allies in regard to fixing the limit of Britain's military contribution of the common cause at the point where it can maximize its total contribution.

"The present distribution of Allied effort is faulty and wasteful. Fault and waste are most glaringly illustrated by the coal and shipbuilding crisis, which are reacting immediately and gravely upon the whole conduct of the war. The initiative, therefore, rests with the British Government, and it would be a dereliction of duty on its part if it omits to review the distribution of its war effort in the light of the transformation brought about by America's gigantic partnership."

Generally speaking, it is believed that remisness in expanding and putting into practice the theory of unified control is at the bottom of the present difficulties, which imperil the whole foundation of the Allied cause; for while the British population will this winter suffer from lack of fuel and light, their sufferings, as The Chronicle points out, will be small compared with the misery in store for the French and Italian people.

In Italy the production of munitions is already suffering from shortage of coal. Italy requires 600,000 tons of coal per month for war purposes, and it is not getting it.

The official price for English coal in the great city of Milan is $70 a ton, and in many parts of the country it is already $100 a ton.

The forests are being denuded, including the sacrifice of olive trees, a source of national wealth.

American insistence on the necessity of unified control is well known over here, and it is increasingly recognized that the respousibility of opposing it is a heavy one which will be severely judged when accounts are made up.

By comparison with this great issue it is merely amusing to find the Star arguing that the coal and shipbuilding crisis are both "direct consequences of the combing out stunts conducted by the Tamsworth press."

"The British people," says the Radical organ, "are tired of Government by stunts. The Government failed to see the man-power problem as a whole because they have been slaves of the stuntmongers."

MR. J. E. L. GOODWILL.

At the concluding session of the 35th annual assembly of the Sovereign Great Priority of Canada, which was held in Belleville yesterday, Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill of this city was elected to the Priority. St. John's, N.B., was chosen as the next place of meeting.

ALLIED ADVANCE SAVED CZECHS

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 12.—The Japanese military staq has been informed that the Czechoslovaks hold the railway from Olovyanna to Penza. Olovyanna is in Transbaikalia, about 400 miles east of Lake Baikal, while Penza is on the railroad, a little more than 600 miles south-east of Petrograd. The distance between Olovyanna and Penza is nearly 2,000 miles.

It is now apparent that the unexpected climax in the Czechoslovak break through was due partly to the Allied advance toward Khabarovsk which caused the transfer of large Bolshevist forces from Lake Baikal toward Khabarovsk, and the weakened front collapsed under the Czech pressure from the west, and General Semenoff's pressure from the east.

The opportuuity is now presented of the Allies taking advantage of the strategical points in the hands of the Czechs to move into the heart of Russia, where considerable reinforcements from loyal Russian elements are certain, and striking a stunning blow at Germany. It is necessary, however to move quickly, for it is believed Germany will make the greatest sacrifices to hold conquered Russian territory.

GROCERY MARKET FOR THE WEEK

Supply of Currants in Sight for Canadian Markets.

Currants for Canada are a possibility this year, says Canadian Grocer. A new order issued by the British Government gives free importation to the United Kingdom on condition that all currants arriving in England are delivered to the Food Control Board at fixed maximum prices, according to grade. Under this arrangement definite advice is given of one shipment of 2,500 tons, with further shipments of 7,000 tons expected to follow right away.

Quotations are being made for new crop in expectation of shipping opportunity on about a relative basis to Canada. Prices will be high and may prove prohibitive here, as lowest grade will have to retail for at least 30c per pound.

Latest advices from the Allied Purchasing Board are to the effect that purchase of salmon commandeered for the British Government would not be more than usual percentage, estimated at 75 per cent. of pack. It is also intimated that it is not the intention of the board to commandeer full quanaities of the higher grades, which means there will be some available for the Canadian market. However, in respect to sockeye, owing to the short pack, there is a possibility that they will take over full pack of that grade.

What China Can Do To Help the Allies

Has Already Given Splendid Service in Labor "Over There," and Also Assisted Stem German Tide.

EAGER TO PUT MEN IN THE FIELD

NEW YORK—On its surface the movement to lend money to China presents some of the aspects of international comedy, says a writer in the New York Times. The sum commonly mentioned in Washington despatches is $200,000,000, which is just about the amount the United States is spending every day in this war. Yet never was there such a pother over what is, in world finance, a bagatelle; never did the mountain labour so to give forth a mouse.

But beneath the surface stirred something graver than comedy — something which involved a diplomatic about-face for this country, and the promise of moving developments in the Far East. For the United States, contrary to precedent, now offered to put itself squarely behind the lenders; and Frank L. Polk, Acting Secretary of State, in his official announcement not long since regarding that attitude, partly explained the reversal of policy when he said that "this Government has felt a special interest in the desire of China so to equip herself as to be of more specific assistance in the war against the Central Powers."

We are not accustomed to think of China even as a possible factor in this conflict. Prior to the foreign intrusion upon her in the nineteenth century, she had all but forgot the arts of war. The soldier was despised there. That man was a hero who, like "pious Aeneas," displayed conspicuous filial devotion, but did it peacefully. And so the world, forgetful that this good-natured and industrious race was not known as warlike simply because it was not quarrelsome, still regarded China as no fighting nation, and, therefore, of no particular account in whipping Germany.

Eager To Put Men In Field.

Of late years the bitter necessity of armies and armament has been borne in on China, but that made no difference; the old opinion prevailed in spite of it, and found verification in the fact that China had sent to France no Military units. How was the world to know that Lieut. Gen. Tang Tsai-fi, Vice Minister of the Chinese Chief of Staff, had established military headquarters in Paris, that Chinese officers were at the front, and that at home 40,000 of China's sturdiest troops were awaiting eagerly the call to active service? How was the world to know that this peaceful people had a standing army 900,000 strong — forty-five divisions, nearly three-fourths of them well-equipped and well drilled, according to European standards—versed in the use of the spitfire machine gun?

It can be said that China is eager to put into France 200,000 stalwart soldiers. She is only waiting for the necessary money and the necessary ships. Let those who are furrowing their brows over manpower statistics consider that fact, and the further fact that those 200,000 would hail from the world's vastest national reservoir of humanity, a population more than thrice that of the United States. If ever a flow of men starts from China into France and Siberia, Berlin may as well quit computing man-power.

It is to be expected that Berlin will sneer at the Chinese, just as Berlin belittled the American menace, but with more foundation in fact. For there are whole provinces in China which have never heard of this war, and even when they have learned what it is and where it is, and why it is being fought, they may be expected to move slowly. Of all countries none is more reactionary, none shrinks more from change.

But account must be taken of China's immediate danger from Germany since Russia collapsed; of the fact that China learned something of German rapacity when Berlin, upon the pretext of the murder of two missionaries, seized the Bay of Kiao-Chau — a possession wrested from her, since the war began, by the Japanese — and of the fact that the Chinese learned something of German savagery during the Boxer rebellion. So that, although rent by civil war, China knows the greater danger from without, and by reason of that danger may hope to quiet her warring factions. The menace of German penetration may act as a counterirritant. A cable from Peking says Pao-Kuei-ching, the Tuchun of Sei LungKiang, has been appointed commander of the expedition to Vladivostok, and that French and Annamite companies in China have already set forth.

China is Russia's nearest eastern neighbour, and for 570 miles of its length the Trans-Siberian Railroad traverses Manchuria. There is not likely to be joint intervention without China. Her forces will accompany the Japanese and other Allied troops whenever a military expedition may be undertaken. Germany's predacious eye has long been fixed on her territory, and "Berlin-to-Peking" is a watch-cry as seductive to the Geschaeftsmann's ears as "Berlin-to-Bagdad."

China's navy, a substantial and considerable fighting arm, is not Tell Your Wife Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift corns or calluses off with fingers.

Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing and wearing torturous plasters. Yes! Corns lift out and calluses peel off as if by magic, says this Cincinnati authority.

A quarter of an ounce of freezone costs but a few cents at any drug-store. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be so loose that it lifts off.

Freezone dries instantly. It does not eat out the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating the surrounding skin. Omen should keep it on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

CATTLE MARKET

The cattle trade has been uniformly strong and active all through this week. Monday's market started off with a rather heavy offering of about 5,000 head of cattle, but with even such good supplies on hand the demand was sufficient to practically clean up the market, very few being left over. Prices held steady to strong, with the choicest killers most in demand at slight advances over the previous week. Early in the week a choice bunch of steers of export quality sold at $16. Extra quality cattle were comparatively scarce throughout the week, but such as were available met a good demand at strong prices. Medium and even the common grades of killing cattle were in good stead demand, and prices were easily maintained at the prevailing high levels.

Butcher cows of all grades were in good demand. Bulls of good quality were also in demand.

There was a good demand for stockers and feeders all through the week, the strong market for butcher cattle tending to stiffen prices for feeders with a little fat on them.

Milkers and feeders, choice quality, continue in good demand.

Sheep and lambs have held firm, lambs scoring slight advantages, but weakening again in the closing market.

Hogs steady all week at unchanged prices.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 510 cars with 7,965 cattle, 880 calves, 4,067 hogs, 5,001 sheep and lambs, and 1,201 horses.

City Cattle Market—29 cars, with 300 cattle, 958 sheep and lambs, 168 hogs and 115 calves.

QUICKLY CURED BY
DR. FOWLER'S
EXTRACT OF
WILD STRAWBERRY.

Mrs. J. Fawcett, Hopewell Hill, N. B., writes: "I am writing you of my experience with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Last summer I was taken so very sick with cramps and pains across my stomach that I sent for the doctor. He said I had summer complaint and gave me some medicine, but it did me very little good. As I was reading your B. B. B. Almanac, I saw Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry advertised, so I asked my sister to go to the store and get me a bottle, and before I had taken all of it I was a well woman, and have not had the slightest return of the trouble since. I cannot say enough for your valuable medicine, and always keep a bottle in the house."

You run absolutely no risk when you buy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, as it has been a standard remedy on the market for the past 72 years. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting it, as the cheap imitations are dangerous to your health. Price, 35c. Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Japanese View of the War

LIEUT.-GEN. HORIUCHI, a Japanese officer who participated in the Tsingtau campaign and who is known as a military critic, has published in the Kokumin a critical study of the causes and effects of the universal war. Military men are rarely diplomatic, and enjoy a freedom in the expression of their opinions not usually indulged in by men in public life. The conclusions arrived at by the lieutenant-general are in some respects rather too dogmatic and sweeping but a brief synopsis of his article is given here as showing the angle of vision of some of the military leaders of Japan. The general writes:

"The present hostilities in Europe are at once destructive and constructive. As the war presents to the world lessons of various kinds in the formation of a new civilization, materially and spiritually, it is certain that the present war will bring in its wake a revolutionary change in the world's affairs. What strikes us most forcibly in this respect is that racial rivalry is assuming a more and more acute aspect.

"In ancient days men led very simple lives, their intercourse being confined to a limited circle. Their sphere of intercourse has, however, gradually widened, until they have come to live a national life as at present. Racial awakening was an unheard-of thing up to the eighteenth century. When a great Persian army invaded Greece some faint idea of the necessity of Hellenic unity against the foreign invaders appears to have been suggested to some Greek minds, and yet they were not sufficiently awakened to such necessity, as is evidenced by the fact that even the eloquence of Demosthenes failed to make them offer a strong front to the troops of Philip of Macedon. With the rise of Napoleon, however, national spirit came into being and led to racial awakening. The whole of Prussia was trampled under foot by Napoleon, and Berlin was under the menacing and vigilant control of a French Governor-General and his troops. Fichte, however, set all these adverse circumstances at naught and courageously expatiated upon the necessity of an awakening of the Germanic race, thus paving the way for the unity of the Germanic Federated States. Some time afterwards, Italy also rid herself of the Austrian yoke and established the kingdom of Italy, breaking down the power of the Vatican.

"Thus it will be seen that racial awakening was a prominent feature of the nineteenth century. Things are now gradually tending towards a combination of nations of the same race, so as better to assert racial activity, politically and economically. Fichte's words that the most original and natural frontier is neither a mountain nor a river, nor a sea, but the boundary of the national oil . . . are actually visualized as the world current of the present age. For it is superfluous to point out that the present hostilities were brought about by the collision between the pan-Slavic races and pan-Germanic races in the Near East, combined with a rivalry for predominance between Britain and Germany. In a word, the present war is the outcome of racial rivalry, and this fact has been confirmed by America's participation.

"It is undeniable that protection of humanity and destruction of Prussian militarism, for the sake of the world's peace, are among America's reasons for entering the war, as clearly set forth in Presidential proclamations. In my opinion, however, a more powerful reason for the entry of the United States into the war is to be sought in a rivalry for racial existence. The Americans have been described as an amalgam of races; but, as matter of fact, the Anglo-Saxon race forms the backbone of the nation. The American Ambassador to Great Britain recently said that the responsibility for maintaining the peace of the world rested upon the shoulders of the English-speaking nations. This may be interpreted as a suggestion that the Anglo-Saxon race holds in its hands the keys to both peace and war. Speaking frankly, this utterance admits of the interpretation that the Anglo-Saxon race entertains an ambition to dominate the world. If so, it becomes a fair presumption that America's participation in the war is based upon racial connections. This opinion is strengthened by circumstances, because after the United States declared war on Germany, Americans of British and German extraction became at dagger's-points with each other in their desire to adhere to the interests of their respective original races.

"The Chinese and Russian have the closest relations with the Japanese race. We may put out of consideration the Chinese, for nobody will deny the imperative necessity of Japan cultivating more intimate relations with them. The revolution and fall of the Romanoffs may be partly due to serious shortcomings in the Russian national character or to the autocratic Russian administrators; but a more careful study of the Russian situation convinces me that the star of the Slav race has been gradually on the wane since the days of Peter the Great.."

Gen. Horiuchi concludes with the statement that, although the Japanese are credited by the rest of the world with being a warlike people, their natural answer to such a charge would be that the Spartan spirit must be kept alive to save a nation.—East and West News.

HUNTER-POET DEAD.

Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley Had Adventurous Career.

Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley died suddenly at his home at Somenos, near Vancouver, on July 9th. He was one of the best known poets in British Columbia.

Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley was born in Devonshire, England, sixty-five years ago, being a descendant of the noted British family of which Lord Clive, who established British rule in India, was a distinguished member. He was a captain in the British army and later in the royal navy and came to British Columbia thirty-five years ago on a big game hunting expedition.

His letters descriptive of his trip at that time were published in the British press and were later published in book form.

Sir Clive's son, a lieutenant-commander in the navy, was the first Canadian-born Britisher to be killed in the present war. He was killed in the battle of Falkland Islands. Deceased was a personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, who knew him as a big game hunter. He was a noted poet and was given the title of Knight Bachelor a year ago in recognition of his contribution to Canadian literature. He was the author of several books.

The late Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley's career was one of conservative and thrilling adventure. In his youth—he was then Capt. Clive Phillipps, the Wooley being added upon the death of a relative whose will made it a condition of his inheriting—he accompanied the famous Capt. Fred Burnaby on his ride to Khiva on a seret service mission for the British Government. For later years he distinguished himself as the champion swordsman, boxer and rifle shot of the British army, and for several years acted as charge d'affaires at the British Embassy in Russia. Thereafter he took a commission in the navy, which he held until personal interests, upon the death of a wealthier relative, induced his withdrawal from the service. Big game hunting next claimed his attention. Africa, India and the Farthest West in turn claiming his attention. For some time he was the close companion of F. C. Sellers, the lion king, later being associated fraternally with Sir Rider (then Mr. Haggard), in several of whose works he figures under a fictional name as one of the principal characters. Settling down, as he confidently believed, in England, he was for a time the editor of the Badminton Magazine, and afterward the originator of the Badminton Library, the authoritative encyclopediae for all British sportsmen, several of the principal volumes in which are from his pen. An ardent Imperialist always his natural poetic genius had during the past thirty years been displayed almost continuously in preaching the gospel of preparedness for the war which ten years ago he predicted confidently to a derisive or indulgent people. In his collected verse under the title "Songs of an English Esau" are some of the most stirring Imperialistic poems of the age, the gem of the collection being perhaps "The Sea Queen Wakes." In the field of fiction he has been an active worker, a new book bearing his name appearing almost annually until about five years ago. "The Chicamon Stone," and "Gold, Gold in Cariboo," are favorite romances in which the charm and atmosphere of the British Columbia mountains are admirably caught and communicated. Latterly Sir Clive has been playing his own important role in the machinery of war organization as chief censor for Western Canada.

Chinese In France.

The men of the Chinese labor companies in France have their own ways of doing things, none of which appears to surprise the Westerner more than the easy camaraderie to be observed in the matter of money, says the Christian Science Monitor. Visiting a shop several of them together, if some article is too expensive for one purse the buyer will, without hesitation, plunge his fingers into that of his neighbor and take what he needs. The owner of the purse made no recrimination, does not think of doing so. Surely the trenches of France and Flanders are a wonderful school for manners in which East and West come to sympathize with the other fellow's point of view.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Newcomer

By LINCOLN ROTHBLUM

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Behind every blind on Maple square, pulled in the face of the warm afternoon sun, lingered eager eyes straining to see all that was to be seen as the brawny teamsters unloaded the newcomer's household belongings.

Moving in Maple square, it must be understood, was an event. With the exception of the Santleys, who had left as mysteriously and precipitately as they had come (and the talk about which had not yet subsided, though it was two years past), goings and comings were rarities. In fact, the absence of "For Rent" signs had become a source of great pride to all the householders on the square, and it is little to be wondered that the slim girl who stood so resolutely on the bottom step of the former Santley home should cause such agitated interest. Mrs. Gregory, wrapper-clad, was already regretting that some married couple "with two or three children and likely to remain permanently" were not taking the premises.

As the piano was laboriously unloaded, each watcher came to the conclusion the newcomer was a piano teacher, come to turn Maple square into a workshop. The girl, unconscious of the hostile sentiment aroused as if by a single connecting circuit, entered the house and could be seen through the large bay window making some effort to create order out of the chaotic jumble of chairs, boxes and barrels. As Grocer McCann's two boys mounted the steps, a dozen housewives decided their larders needed replenishing, and Grocer McCann, knowing his trade, did a half-hour's rushing business, his tongue only slowing up when he made change.

"Yes, Mrs. Gregory," he went on, weighing out a niggardly pound of dry limas, "she walks in here 'round eleven this morning (seems as if she must've got in on the ten-fifty) and gives me a good-sized order; asks to have it delivered. I was for marking the bill C. O. D., but she up and pays me. That's what I'd call a business woman.

"Shall I wrap up some of them prunes for you, Mrs. Gregory?" he broke off as he caught that unfortunate lady in the act of sampling one, "I just opened the box."

Mrs. Gregory nodded unwillingly. "And are your two boys helping our new neighbor?" she asked.

The grocer walked over to the counter on which he exhibited his stock of cheeses. Raising the glass cover, he waited, knife in midair. "Yes," he finally answered, as the knife descended with unswerving accuracy on fifteen cents' worth, "she asked me if I knew a couple of fellows who'd help her set up the beds and get things sort of straightened out."

He paused to wipe the knife on his apron. "She offered to pay well; 'n' Ed an' Ben 'll be needin' the extra money with school startin', so I sent them over. She's a right smart woman, and knows a deal about groceries —more as a great many of married folks."

Mrs. Gregory tried to look haughtily offended. Cupping the bags of limas, prunes and cheese in the crook of her left arm, and gathering her skirts together with her right, she swept out of McCann's Cash grocery, secretly vowing never to set foot in there again; only on his special Tuesday sales, when, it must be admitted, he sold, without any qualms of conscience, nineteen-cent cans of peaches marked down to twenty-nine.

The weekly meeting of the Maple Square Ladies' club had an unusually large attendance, compelling Mrs. Gregory, at whose home the club convened that week, hastily to dispatch her small daughter via the back door for the loan of additional china with which to accommodate her guests.

Mrs. Chandler, president, and very conscious of her new green silk dress, rapped for order. Mrs. Chandler liked to rap for order. She felt the gavel lent her dignity. The gavel had been donated by Mr. Chandler on his wife's installation into office. Thrice elected president of the Main Street Business Men's Association, he understood parliamentary law and how such things should be conducted.

But today, neither gavel nor green silk dress could hush the buzzing voices and shortly a very ruffled Mrs. Chandler announced the meeting adjourned. Mrs. Gregory, emerging from the kitchen with the china hastily garnered, commenced to distribute her stock supply of cream-cheese-and-nut-sandwiches, "so satisfying and easy to prepare," as she once confided in an unguarded moment.

It was Miss Tucker, richer in dollars than in sense, who fired the first shot. "We all forgot to suggest our new neighbor for membership; a committee ought to be appointed to call on her."

Mrs. Chandler did not like the spinster—she had not liked her, in fact, ever since that lady had looked with too favorable eyes upon her only son Walter. "You live next door to our new neighbor," she commented, glancing up; "have you called on her?"

Miss Tucker wagged her head with negative emphasis. "Since that Santley episode——" and she paused dramatically.

"I must agree with you," Mrs. Chandler assented. "I am particularly averse to unattached females at all times. Walt's last letter was all about some vampire who has him in her clutches."

Miss Tucker, forgetting she was included in the category of "unattached females," joined in the general laugh, All knew Mrs. Chandler's husky son and his doting mother's war on luring vampires.

The cuckoo's four o'clock warning sent the Maple Square Ladies' club scurrying to their respective homes, where soups and stews boiled and stewed to a rapid demise.

Mrs. Chandler, obliged to pass the newcomer's home, had decided to walk past head up. She would have walked past nose up, but an unkind Providence had endowed her with a plebian nose, persistently downcast. Out of the corner of her eye she could see the unwelcomed neighbor rocking on the porch. She was aggravatingly pretty, in white dimity as she rocked and crocheted, industriously whistling a catchy tune. It was a warbled trill, Mrs. Chandler afterwards was sure, which made her step on the orange peeling, and the run of notes was still in her ears as her pride and person fell. It all happened so quickly, she never could determine how she found herself, nightgowned and doctored, in the home of this "person." It was Dr. Nutting, himself, who was murmuring something about "absolutely not to be moved." Incoherent thoughts, sharply interrupted by ugly pains in the leg, furrowed her brow.

"Now, don't let it worry you," a soft and very gentle voice was saying. "Doctor says it's a serious fracture, and you must not be moved; but you're ever so welcome." The bright smile and clear, blue eyes confirmed the words.

In the many weeks that followed, Mrs. Chandler came to love her pretty and competent nurse; she had no daughter of her own and experienced for the first time novel appreciation of little acts of tenderness and consideration.

"Perhaps you've been wondering," she abruptly began one afternoon, "why none but my husband has come to visit me here. You see the folks 'round here don't take kindly to new people, and we were all so disappointed in the Santleys, who last rented this house, we felt we had to be careful about the next tenant.

"But," she added, vehemently, "when I get on my feet again, I'm going to tell the Maple Square Ladies' club that you're better than all of them put together. Why, you're the first girl I've ever met that I'd want Walt to marry."

The girl blushed and her eyes glistened.

"You know," Mrs. Chandler continued, proudly, "Walt's my boy—and I'm hoping you'll blush like that when he sees you. He's coming home soon."

Autumn had come to Maple square and found Mrs. Chandler well on the road to complete recovery. Propped up in a cozy armchair before the large bay window, she watched in excited anticipation the children shuffling through the fallen leaves swept into the gutter. She was thinking of her son, expected that day, and of the debt she owed this girl who had taken her into her home and heart. Truly she had learned goodness was more than living straight—it was loving gentleness and generous kindness.

"Look," she cried out, striving to rise from her armchair, "there comes Walt! Call to him before he passes by! Quick!"

And Mrs. Chandler was due to another shock as she saw her stalwart son enfold the newcomer in his arms —just as if he had done it many times before.

* * * * * * *

"Sure, mother," he was explaining once again, "didn't we know how you distrusted all girls? So we hit upon the plan of Little Sweetheart coming here first—for I knew she'd make you love her."

Mrs. Chandler smiled through her tears. "She's done more than that, Walt."

The Heart of a Range

BY its fire-box the usefulness, efficiency and durability of a range is measured — it is the heart of the range.

It must be scientifically proportioned to the whole range,

—It must be both heat-resisting and heat-conserving.

McClary's exclusive process semi-steel linings, fitted to expand and contract at different degrees of heat, has the tough durability that makes for long life under constant usage.

And the close-grained texture and toughened hardness of that semi-steel resists the permeating destructiveness of fuel gases.

Then the fire-box is built wide to give maximum utilization of the fire body and it is just the right depth to maintain a steady, dependable body of fire—under perfect control.

No part of the Pandora Range has been given such close study by its makers as the fire-box, because the fire-box is the most important and most difficult problem in building a perfect range.

Must Bring Body to Port.

The first litigation over burial at sea has been decided, according to Case and Comment. The decision holds that a steamship company which embalms the body of a passenger who dies on a voyage toward his home country is bound to transport the body to port and deliver it to those entitled to its possession for burial, and is liable in damages in case it buries the body at sea. The court said:

"At the time of the burial at sea the body could have been carried to port without injurious effect. Had the steamship been passing through the harbor of New York and approaching its dock, it could scarcely be said that the defendant would be justified in casting the body into the water, from whence it could not be reclaimed, thereby depriving the next kin of the solace of giving the body a decent burial."

Unfortunate "Seconds."

One of the superstitions of Emperor William II relates to the "II" in his title. He fears that some time he may be compelled to share the fate of other "Seconds," of whom a long list could be easily compiled from the pages of European history.

Among a few of the unfortunates was Richard II and Edward II, Napoleon II, Louis II of Bavaria, Alexander II and Nicholas II of Russia and Abdul Hamid II of Turkey.

Soviet Food Control Breaks Down Utterly

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 13—The American refugees from Moscow reached Stockholm to-day— twelve days after their departure from the Bolshevist capital. They were met by Sheldon Whitehouse, the American Charge d'Affaires, and a party of Americans and Europeans who were anxious to learn the lot of friends and relatives in Russia.

When the Americans left Russia they say flour sold at $1.25 a pound and it was seldom obtainable at any price. The price of sugar was $3 a pound—and the staple was scarce at that.

Starvation had become so prevalent in Moscow that late in August the Food Commission was forced to remove all regulations on citizens and permitted them to enter the city with sixty pounds of food each. This step, it was asserted, was an admission of the absolute failure of the food Commission, which had no bread, and was forced, through the pressure of the rebelling citizens, to let the people take the food supply into their own hands.

Wheat and other grains were not available, as the peasants in the grain sections still under Soviet control refused to feed the cities. Potatoes and other vegetables were selling at 25 cents a pound. They are the chief food supply of Moscow and Petrograd.

The workmen of Moscow and Petrograd factories cannot obtain food from the commissions, which have advised them to shoulder rifles and take the grain away from the peasants. The advice has seldom been heeded, as a majority of the workmen regard the peasants as brothers.

Wholesale charges of the Bolshevist newspapers that the bourgeoisie are wholly responsible for the food shortage no longer quiet the hungry laborers, whose faith in the Bolsheviki is waning appreciably. The promises of Leon Troszky, the Foreign Minister, to quell the Czecho-slovak rising and tap the supply of wheat no longer are generally credited.

Russia, the refugees say, has a bumper wheat and rye crop in virtually all the grain sections. Much of the grain has already been harvested bu the Bolsheviki have neither the organization nor the transportation facilities to obtain bread for the starving cities, which scarcely can be expected to drag through a breadless Winter without turning against a Government whose policy has lost the wheat districts.

Russia Needs More Troops

Winter Near at Hand and Many Things Must be Done Before Its Arrival.

ARCHANGEL, Sept. 13 — More Allied troops are urgently needed if the Russo-Allied campaign in northern Russia is to be carried to speedy success, in the opinion of virtually every officer and civilian observer here.

The Russian winter will soon be at hand, and before that time it is hoped to reach the hard pressed Czecho-Slovaks, establish a front against the Germans, and open an uninterrupted line of communication from Vladivostok to Archangel through Vologda. The available forces have been sufficient to defeat much superior numbers of Bolsheviki, but it is pointed out that the necessity for more troops is not so much a question of maintaining the front as of impressing the peasants and convincing them that sufficient power is at hand to ensure final victory.

The peasants for the most part are extremely friendly to the Allies, and anxious to aid in the movement, but fail to join the army because they are apprehensive that the Russo-Allied forces are not sufficiently strong and that the peasantry which aided the Russo-Allied movement would be slaughtered if by any chance the Bolsheviki were victorious.

The Russo-Allied leaders feel certain of important results if the forces at their disposal are sufficient. When they reach the thickly populated provinces there are large Russian forces organized and waiting to join them, but while they are manoeuvring through the thinly populated swamps of the north the chief reliance must be upon the Allied troops themselves.

The Austro-German direction of the Bolsheviki forces is daily increasing in scope. Near Kotlas there are known to be 20 German officers organizing the artillery.

What China Can Do

needed by the Allies, it happens, because the "Grand Fleet" is securely corked in the North Sea; and it is not available, either, because Admiral Ching, commanding it, has thrown in his fortunes with the southern revolutionists. It should be explained that the two factions are at odds on a technical constitutional question, not an issue involving property rights nor direct political spoils; so that this conscientious internal strife, hinting at a stubborn Scot stuff in the Oriental makeup, speaks volumes for their qualities when aroused.

Fine Work As Labourers.

China's response to the Allied call for workers was an earnest of what she can do in the way of fighting men. Not the Canton coolie type were they, but bronzed six-footers frim Northern Shantung and Chihli, capable, any one of them, of carrying 200 pounds ten miles, able to work harder and longer than the sturdiest continental peasant. China sent 135,000 of them as readily and easily as a New York subway contractor would order out a gang. Tagged with metal identification disks, shaven of their queues, 3,000 of these superb physical specimens were sent to Mesopotamia, others to South Africa, still others in greater numbers to France; all in military order, with their own regimental organization, drilling in obedience to commands in English. And the Germans got an inkling of their temper during the offensive in Picardy last spring when, caught by the Teuton onrush, some of them stemmed the tide until French reserves could turn it back. These alien labourers of old Cathay, born of a civilization which was ancient when Germany was the home of Genseric's barbarian hordes, flung aside their shovels, seized the nearest rifles, and fought for all the world like a bunch of American engineers.

But China as a military factor is prospective. The loan would but open the sluice-gate. Consider what the nation already has done and is doing in the war. Chinese hides and leather are reducing an acute allied shortage. Chinese coal, sent when the fuel famine came to the Western Hemisphere, is being burned along the Pacific Coast of the United States and Canada. That need surprise no German, because Germany knows what China's wealth in coal amounts to.

Supplies Are Running Low

Tin Takes a Spectacular Drop—Using Scrap Iron.

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets for the week ending Sept. 12, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News says:

Canadian buyers are "over the line" in goodly numbers this week. In some cases the quest is machine tools and supplies, in others it is the making of some better arrangement on the part of jobbers for the securing of mill deliveries on sheets, etc. As a matter of fact, business in Canada that has to do with the turning of wheels is good, and is going to continue so for some time to come.

There are big business houses in Montreal and Toronto that right now would be glad were Ottawa to rule out some of the business that is passing through their hands. They fear that the tremendous orders that are being placed will deplete their warehouse stocks to the point of exhaustion, and they realize that the chances of filling their floors again are very poor.

Some of the concerns that took on American 9.2 orders recently have already made their first deliveries. This is record time, and it was possible because the firm had been on the large shells before, and had simply to revert to it after finishing six-inch orders. A large amount of fuse orders are being turned out here on Washington specifications. The Canadian War Mission at the American capital is confident of having the shops of Canada kept working to capacity on good business.

Trade is Willing.

The order from Ottawa that the War Trade Board would control the supply of iron and steel in Canada, and direct its disposition, is not new or alarming, and the trade is quite willing to accept any ruling along this line. As a matter of fact the steel industry and the pig iron, too, has been under the direction of Ottawa for some time. They have, according to their own statement, been working "in close touch with the authorities," which is another way of saying the same thing.

Tin has taken a rather spectacular drp. A few weeks ago it was heading for the $1.50 mark, and $1.25 was the trading point for some time. Sales were made this week around the $1 mark, and dealers seem to incline to the view that a lower level may be arrived at now that the decline has set in. They claim that deliveries are freer. As a matter of fact the price of tin has been largely a fictitious one, and manipulation rather than absolute circumstances has had much to do with the meteoric career of the selling point.

Reports from various foundry centres in the Dominion indicate that plants that are on war work or work that is considered necessary to the upkeeping of agricultural prod. are getting a fair supply of pig and scrap iron at current prices. On the other hand shops that have no rating in the eyes of the government are having a hard time of it in getting enough pig iron. They are using a mixture in which scrap figures on a fifty-fifty basis, and this is considered by experts to be a dangerous practice, as it is almost impossible to get results at that point unless the scrap pile has been well analyzed and sorted beforehand.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 13.—A July issue of a New York magazine, the front page of which was embellished by a large coloured picture of Emperor William entitled, "What's to be done to the Kaiser?" and surrounded by reproductions of numerous persons outspoken and even unfriendly suggestions seems to have infuriated the German Minister here, for he sent a request to the Foreign Office asking the Swedish Government to sequestrate every copy that can be found in order to prevent the news stands from displaying the striking page for the amusement of passers-by.

However, by this time practically every copy has been sold. The Foreign Office sent a copy of the picture to the Minister of Justice asking him what he thought about it. His reply when made will not necessarily be made public.

The Plain Truth about Shoe Prices

LEATHER is scarce and is growing scarcer. A large part of the available supply must be used for soldiers' boots. Importations have practically ceased and we are forced to depend upon the limited quantity of materials produced in Canada.

The cost of everything which goes into a pair of shoes is high, and is going higher. Workmen by the thousands have joined the colors, and labor is increasingly hard to get. It is not merely a matter of high prices, but of producing enough good quality shoes to go around.

These conditions are beyond the control of any man, or any group of men. They fall on all alike. No one is exempt—neither the manufacturer, the dealer, nor the consumer.

You must pay more today for shoes of the same quality than you did a year ago. Next Spring, prices will be higher still.

These are hard facts. They will not yield to argument. They cannot be glossed over. We cannot change them, much as we would wish to do so.

But you, as a wearer of shoes, can help to relieve them if you will exercise prudence and good judgment in purchasing. See that you get real value for your money. Spend enough to get it, but spend nothing for "frills."

See that the manufacturer's trade-mark is stamped upon the shoes you buy. High prices are a temptation to reduce the quality in order to make the price seem low. But no manufacturer will stamp his trade-mark upon a product which he is ashamed to acknowledge. Remember this, and look for the trade-mark. It is your best assurance of real value for your money.

German Casualties Severe in Yesterday's Operations Along the British Front Enemy Officers Were Ordered to Hold Captured Positions at All Costs—Prisoners Appear Gloomy Over the Situation.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—The fighting along the new British line in the Havrincourt-Gouzeaucourt sector yesterday was confined mainly to mopping up operations, which were being conducted at various points by the aggressors. Havrincourt village was being bombarded fiercely by German artillery, however, so that the enemy might make another thrust any time in an attempt to regain positions about Havrincourt, which they had been ordered to hold at all costs. More than 1300 prisoners were captured and the German casualties were severe. The fighting yesterday was bitter, especially in its final stages, as the British reached high ground. Captured German officers state that they had been ordered to fight to the last ditch and that they carried their instructions to the letter at many points. Some officers taken yesterday appear to be very gloomy over the situation from their standpoint. They state that the German high command had staked everything on the battle of the Marne, which failed so completely.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(Official). — French troops began a new attack at dawn this morning on the side of the Ailette River and below the Aisne River and the Vesle River. The attack was in the direction of the Forest of Coucy, at the southern end of the St. Gobain Massif, where progress was satisfactory, this morning. South of the Ailette River, the French captured Mont Desiages and the villages of Allemont and Sanoy.

FRENCH ADVANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 14. — German counter attacks against the French advancing on the Ailette River front appeared to have been weak, although the front line was strongly held. The German prisoners say they had orders to hold at all costs. In their attack south of the River Aisne the French also made satisfactory progress and captured prisoners, but details are lacking. The advance of the French threatens to turn the flank of the German defensive positions on Chemin Des Dames, and it also endangers Laon.

Suit Against Corporation

City of Toronto Overlooked Change in Act—Other Municipalities Affected.

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 14.—The Corporation of the City of Toronto has been summoned to appear in Police Court for an infraction of the Factories Act in not having a fire escape upon Toronto's two and a half million City Hall Building. The Ontario Factories Act, as amended at the last session of the Legislature, brings all municipal buildings under office building class requiring equipment with fire escape apparatus. The City of Toronto overlooked the change in the Act, hence the prosecution. It is understood other municipalities in Ontario will be proceeded against for the same offence against the Act.

Coal Sells at $160 Per Ton

One Mail Delivery in Fifteen Months in the McKenzie River Area.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—Coal at $160 per ton, only one mail delivery in fifteen months, and the complete absence of railway transportation, are some of the outstanding features in connection with the missionary work in the McKenzie River area, as described to the General Anglican Synod last night by Bishop Lucas.

"I hear them talking here," he said, "about the shortage of coal and the high price of fuel. Our missionaries often go thirty miles with dog teams to dig out cotton wood to burn. In the diocese of more than 600,000 squire miles, ten times the size of England, there is no railraod transportation."

FRENCH START NEW ATTACK

New Attack is in the Direction of Laon.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(12.15 p.m.). —The French this morning started a new attack astride the Ailette, and between the Aisne and the Vesle, according to information from the front.

This attack is in the direction of Laon, south and west.

Nothing to Report.

The collection of vegetables shown by the Vegetable Growers' Association and shown at the Exhibition has been donated to the Navy League it was stated yesterday, and will be sold by auction. There is at least $100 worth of vegetables in that display. Two of the gardeners who were credited with contributions in these columns, failed to respond, and their names have been erased from the printed list at the Fair grounds. The Association's members went to considerable trouble to gather the best vegetables for this display, and also worked long and late on Thursday arranging them.

The Americans Have Obliterated the Famous St. Mihiel Salient

Number of Prisoners Increased to Over Thirteen Thousand—Allies Face the Enemy Along a New Line in Some Places Twelve Miles North of Their Old One.

ALL OBJECTIVES WERE ATTAINED

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE METZ FRONT, Sept. 14. — Having defeated and routed the Germans at all points in what was once the famous St. Mihiel salient, America's victorious first army to-day faced the enemy along a new line in some places twelve miles north of their old one.

The Americans driving across the heights of the Meuse from the west cut through the pocket seven miles to Vigneulles, where they met the other American forces smashing in from the south, thus completing the closing of the sack. Our front now runs through Norroy, Jaulny, Xammes, St. Benoit, Hattonville, Hannonville and Herbeuville. All the territory behind that line is under control of the Americans.

Objectives Attained.

The number of prisoners and guns taken as Pershing's troops swept on increased with great rapidity. All our objectives were attained, according to schedule. "We're going strong," was the report from a certain already famous division regarding the progress of its attack shortly after the offensive opened. From the start of the drive it was evident the prisoners would number thousands. When 5,000 to 7,000 had already been counted, reports came into headquarters from all directions telling of groups of 200, 300 and 500 more on their way to the rear. (Pershing's latest official report gave the number of prisoners counted as 13,300).

Field Guns Taken.

Eighteen hundred prisoners, including eight officers, were taken when Thiacourt fell. Eighteen officers were included in another bag. Numerous machine guns have been seized. One infantry detachment charged and captured an entire battery of field guns which were firing on them. Two-inch cannon were also taken, indicating that the gun haul is undoubtedly heavy.

One tank captured a battery of field pieces, five machine guns and 75 men. Sergeant Graham sat on top of the tank during this operation. Some German batteries when they fell into the hands of the Americans were still in their camouflaged positions. The Germans had not had enough time to attempt to remove them.

Banks Looted.

Refugees are being sent back from several towns after remaining in them during the four-year German occupation. Secretary Baker, General Pershing and General Petain entered St. Mihiel shortly after the enemy had fled from it. The inhabitants greeted them with enthusiasm. They said the Germans had carried off a large number of men and boys aged 16 to 45. The two banks in the city were looted by the enemy. Practically all the houses were plundered. Inhabitants said the Germans have squeezed them for a contribution of a million francs.

The "Little Paris."

So fast did the Americans travel when they hit the German line that all objectives designated for the first day were reached early in the afternoon. In that short time the salient was pushed in four or five miles along its whole front. The effect of Pershing's victory is to free Nancy, the little Paris of France, from the menace of German guns for the first time since 1914. It also opens the important Nancy-Verdun railroad, greatly strengthening Allied communications.

Prisoners reported they had been ordered to permanently hold a line north of Pannes, if possible, otherwise to withdraw to the Hindenburg line positions. Shortly after they received this command the Americans captured Pannes.

Tank Crews.

Despite the mud the American tank crews made an excellent showing on their first appearance. They preceded the infantry attacks at several different points. They were smashing through heavy belts of barbed wire and crawled over German trenches that stood for four years. Afterward they aided in mopping up the numerous captured towns.

Allied supremacy in the air was quickly won and remained ours. A heavy rain poured but in spit of this the French and American airplanes dominated the sky. When the Boches attempted to send up two observation balloons they were quickly shot down.

Shelling Back Areas.

As the German lines began giving way explosions were heard in the rear. They continued all during the first day. Most of them were due to the accurate firing of our artillery. All night American batteries kept up their incessant shelling of the enemy's back areas. In the west side of the salient, where a sharp wedge was wriven into to meet the main assault coming up from the south and east, steady progress was made through the most difficult fighting country and against strong resistance. The effect of the German defeat was felt even on the eastern side of the Moselle River, wher enemy troops were forced to evacuate the bend in the stream. American patrols occupied abandoned trenches. By the strategy of the American attack, the Germans were obliged to evacuate Montsec without a fight, to keep from being cut off. Montsec is a huge peak dominating the entire territiry. French patrols climbed to its summit after the enemy fled. It was reported that quantities of supplies were found intact and it was expected many guns would be discovered there.

Cold Pelting Rain.

As they fell back the Germans started big fires in Pannes and in Vignuelles Wood, where they had supplies they couldn't remove. Fighting in the pocket was far different from [illegible] Americans encountered. [illegible] messages in 1914 and 1918. [illegible] spy system. [illegible] every chair, 329 George street. 4d-60.

The country itself is most difficult for fighting, with high peaks, lakes, marshes and the roughest kind of terrain. But none of these obstructions stopped the Americans.

When a certain American brigade was engulfed in silence, it developed that it was going ahead so fast telephone and wireless men were unable to keep up with the infantry. On our right near Moselle, the Americans encountered some difficulty in clearing out the woods, and there were occasional stiff fights along the heights.

ATTACK WAS EXPECTED

American Success Cannot be Explained Away as a Surprise in Germany—A Rich Prize.

SACRIFICED TROOPS

(United Press Despatch.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Sept. 14.—It is unquestioned that several days ago that it was imminent. Thus the American success cannot be explained away as a surprise even in Germany, where the public is insistently told the Americans are worthless and that "nothing is to be feared from those Barnums."

Wherever the Americans swept forward it was a case of the better man winning. It will be one of Germany's most bitter pills that the Hun higher command did not spare its troops in the effort to halt the Americans and French. Undoubtedly the Germans feared less for Metz than for the Briey and Longwy ore basins, from which Luxembourg and the annexed portions of Lorraine, nine-tenths of Germany's iron is obtained. These districts give the enemy a total of sixty million tons. Without these mines they would have only 7,000,000 tons, lacking occupation of the Briey Basin Germany could not have fought so long. The possession of Briey, Longwy and Trionville is absolutely necessary to Germany if the Teutonic troops are to be kept in the field. If any of those districts are placed under Allied gunfire, Germany will be crippled by just that much.

For this reason, they madly flung troops into the breach in an effort to arrest at any cost any thrust in the direction of their cherished mine fields.

Foch's first objective in the American offensive was apparently only the pinching off of the salient. Beyond the base of this pocket there is a very powerfully defended country—line after line of trenches, and beyond that, ring upon ring of fortifications, all about Metz. Foch knows his game and the Allies know he will play it masterfully.

Gate Receipts for First Two Days of Fair Were Close to the 1917 Figures

Receipts Larger Than Last Year

Mr. Felix Brownscombe reported this morning that the attendance on the first two days of the Exhibition was 2,070 less than the figures for the corresponding days last year. The totals are as follows:

1918	10,052
Decrease	2,007

Receipts Encouraging.

The official report from Mr. Brownscombe shows that although there has been a decrease in the attendance up to last night, there was actually an increase in the receipts of $600, largely due to the increase in the admission charge from 25c. to 35c.

The attendance this morning was exceedingly promising and this afternoon may set up a new attendance record.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Associated Press to-day issues the following summary:

Americans are continuing their advance after eliminating the St. Mihiel salient. From Pagny across the Moselle river from German territory the new front extends in almost a straight line to the vicinity of Hattonville, where it advanced slightly toward the northwest to Fresnes. This reduction of the front line from some forty to twenty miles, places at the disposal of the Allied commanders an enormous force of men for future operations in this sector, or on other fronts. Having accomplished the task of wiping out the salient the offensive movement continues to push forward, and a further straightening of the line is probable.

COMMAND POSITIONS.

The Americans at this stage of the drive command positions favourable for the direct invasion of German territory, if such a course should be decided upon. Although the important German fortress of Metz is in no immediate danger its outlying fortifications are within range of the American heavy guns. At Pagny, in their haste to get out of the salient with as little los sof men and military supplies as possible, the Germans left the railroad from Verdun to Commercy, Toul and Nancy virtually intact. The capture of this line of railway adds greatly to the facility of troop movements towards Verdun, which has been a great handicap to the Allies in the past. On other fronts the Allies continue their pressure against the German lines. Cambrai and St. Quentin are in danger of being outflanked by the British and French. West of St. Quentin French troops have occupied the village of Savy, and northwest of the town the British have gained ground after local fighting with the enemy, in which prisoners were taken. The British also have made progress southwest of La Bassee and are pressing forward on Auchy-Les-La-Bassee. Further north German attacks on new British positions at Havrincourt were repulsed with heavy losses.

Citizens' Loyal Support the Silver Lining to Almost Unbroken Clouds of First Two Days—A Heartening Compensation for Any Ultimate Deficit That May Obtain.

MISS STINSON'S FLIGHT

The Exhibition's gate receipts for the first two days were only slightly less than the total for the corresponding days last year. The figures were not available last night, requiring a final checking, but Mr. Felix Brownscombe, the Directorate's cashier, stated that the deficit would be trifling compared with the depreciation the Board had feared as a result of the unrelenting rain. But the citizens gave new proof of their loyalty to the Fair by braving the threatening and discouraging weather. Yesterday afternoon's attendance was surprisingly large, considering the deterring squalls that undoubtedly kept hundreds at home, both in the city and country, and consequently spoiled the turnstile record that would surely have been made under the customary weather of the first half of September. There is no denying the fact that the directors were in the dumps over the practical failure of the first day, upon which they were depending for a new source of revenue, and the gloom of Friday exhausted their reserves of patience and all but extinguished the last glimpse of hope.

Real Encouragement.

But the citizens loyally rallied, drawn first by the attractions and then perhaps by the desire to assist in retrieving the Exhibition's success. When the first counts from the gates came through with promises of at least a near success, financially, the directors came back to life again, and at the close of the day President Denne said: "We're going to pull through in spite of the rain," and T. H. Hooper whistled a bar or two of "'N Everything."

"Look at that crowd," remarked Mr. Beattie, the father of the children whose dancing act made a big hit in the grandstand performance, "with people that stand by you like that you can't lose. They're right with you," and in this support in the face of dampening, disagreeable weather, the directors discerned unmistakable proof that their efforts to give Peterborough a first class Fair were appreciated. It was a moral compensation, that was even more heartening than big gate receipts in royal weather.

Miss Stinson's Flight.

After having to cancel her two flights on Thursday owing to the unfavourable weather conditions, Miss Katherine Stinson, the famous aviatrix, engaged by the directors as a special attraction for the big exhibition, was determined that the crowd should not be disappointed last evening, and although there was a disagreeable drizzle of rain at the advertised starting time, the daring girl flyer went ahead with her thrilling performance.

It was the big moment of the fair—the event that everybody was waiting for. When the bi-plane was wheeled down to the east end of the infield there was a rush from all parts of the ground and it was only with difficulty that the field could be cleared sufficiently to allow Miss Stinson room enough to get a take-off. It was well after seven o'clock, and the sky was heavily overcast with low-flying clouds when Miss Stinson climbed into the bi-plane and the exciting flight was under way. Bumping across the rough ground the machine quickly gathered speed and took to the air. For a moment it looked as if it would not clear the trees on Park street, but Miss Stinson guided her craft in a quick upward swoop that carried her clear and then was away on her journey. Travelling to the west at top speed and climbing higher the plane swoop-

VAST NET CLOSING IN ON RUSSIA—Allied, American and Czecho-Slovak forces operating from the north, east and south have begun to close in on the Bolshevik strongholds in European Russia and western Siberia like strands of a far flung net, tenuous but unbreakable. From Pensa (1) in European Russia on the Volga, across to Vladivostock (7) the line of the trans-Siberian railway has been cleared and is now in anti-Bolshevik control following the capture of the territory east of Lake Baikal (3). The western Czecho-Slovaks captured Verkhneudinsk (2) and then moved rapidly eastward, arriving in the Baikal region they operated in three columns, the main one following the railway, a second crossing the mountains to the south and capturing Selinginsk (4), the third driving northward around the great lake and finally taking Kiakhta (5). A union of the Czechs on the Onon river (6) was followed by the occupation of Chita and the final clearing of the railway. In the north on the Murman coast the Allies are making good progress and their control of Kola and Archangel blocks the Russian Arctic littoral to the German forces occupying Finland and menaces any army they may recruit there.

THE PLATOON SYSTEM.

There are so many points in fav...our of the platoon system in the fire department, as urged by Chief Grange and anxiously looked for by the members of the brigade, that the city council should lose no time in investigating the merits of the plan, and coming to a decision as to whether or not the additional cost of the scheme would not be more than paid for in added efficiency in the department, and a better feeling and esprit de corps among the men.

Under the platoon system there would always be ten men on duty at the fire hall, with the others available in case of a fire. Under the present system, there are oftentimes when the full complement are not on hand because of the absence from the hall of men at meal times. If the new plan were adopted the men would only be on duty for twelve hours a day, instead of twenty-four, working in two platoons, one on duty in the day time and the other at night. The system in vogue now makes practical slaves of the firemen; the platoon plan would give them half their time to spend at home, as the policemen do, while at the same time they would always be on hand when they were needed.

To make the new system possible it would need the addition of three or four new men to the force, thus adding to the expense of the department, but against this there would be a more contented and efficient brigade.

THRIFT FIGURES.

Canadian Courier has some interesting figures on the power of thrift, as expressed in money. These statistics show in concrete form just what results can be obtained by putting a little away each month and with the necessity of an increase in savings in Canada to meet with requirements in the figures are timely.

Says the Courier:

This one shows what you can do with one-tenth of your income earmarked for savings. The time chosen is ten years; the rate of interest four per cent. It makes no difference what the wages or salary is. Wages and salaries are all one thing anyhow, and we shall soon have to discard "salary" except for civil servants. The wage list in the table starts at $100 a month, which is pretty nearly an average, and scales down to $25.00, which is about the lowest wages paid. And here's what one-tenth of any wages from $100 to $25 a month will do in ten years if it's put where it can earn its dues:

Monthly Wages.	1-10 Deposited	Amount saved with int. in 10 years.
$100.00	$10.00	$1,475.00
75.00	7.50	1,106.00
60.00	6.00	885.00
50.00	5.00	737.60
45.00	4.50	663.00
40.00	4.00	589.00
30.00	3.00	442.00
25.00	2.00	368.00
25.00	2.50	368.00

The essential importance of saving money at this time with a view to helping Canada to carry on her war work cannot be over emphasized. Statistics show that a vast amount of money is being expended on unnecessary things. In the face of such a condition the people of Canada should realize that a thorough policy of economy on the part of every citizen will be necessary to raise the millions of dollars that will be necessary to finance Canada's war operations.

FROM THE FIGHTERS' VIEW-POINT.

It is all very well for Arthur Henderson, Philip Snowden and other English Labour leaders, who have been talking and intriguing, while millions of their fellow countrymen have been fighting, to plead for the opening of peace negotiations as soon as the Germans have retired from France and Belgium. These men, safe at home, know nothing, except by hearsay of the crimes committed by the Huns. They have not suffered much, if any, and it is easy for them to be magnanimous and forgive their enemies and bargain with them for peace. But the soldiers who have fought the Huns and have been face to face with the horrible and beastly work wrought by them—how will they feel about the peace policy of Henderson & Co.? It is easy to foresee that they will claim to have something to say in the matter; and they should have. Will they be satisfied to see Fritz permitted to retire quietly back to his homeland left unscathed—the German people to be without personal knowledge of what war is, the sort of war which they have joyfully imposed upon their neighbours?

It is not likely. They will desire and demand that the Huns be not only whipped, but punished, too—not the fighting Huns only, but also the nation which sent them forth and backed them up and condoned all their crimes.

American soldiers have been in the fighting only a few months, and have been comparatively little of the beastliness and barbarity of German war methods; yet even they are hardening towards the Hun, and developing a wholesome thirst for vengeance. They have seen at close quarters his work at Chateau Thierry, which they captured. What the enemy did at Chateau Thierry was almost decent in comparison with his deeds elsewhere in France and in Belgium, but it was enough to sicken and disgust all the Americans who witnessed it. Among the Americans was Rev. Joseph H. Odell, who is attached to the Y. M. C. A., and is special correspondent of the New York Outlook at the front. Mr. Odell testifies as follows to what he saw a few hours after the Americans entered the town.

They were ordinary Boche regiments which held Chateau Thierry, and when their evacuation of the place became obviously necessary they set about to destroy and pollute everything within reach. Remember, this is not hearsay; I went into Chateau Thierry on the heels of the Americans advance, and saw things with my own eyes. Every vandalistic, Hunnish, fiendish, filthy thing that men could do these Huns did in Chateau Thierry just before they left. The streets were littered with the private possessions of the citizens thrown through the windows; every bureau and chiffonier drawer was rifled and its contents destroyed; in the better-class houses the paintings were ripped and the china an dporcelain smashed, furchina and porcelain smashed, furriers were shivered into a thousand fragments; mattresses and upholstery were slashed; richly bound books were ripped; in fact, there was hardly a thing in the city left intact. The houses of the poor, in which the German privates had been billeted, were just as badly pillaged and devastated as the homes of the well-to-do. The church, grand enough for a cathedral, had not been spared. Its paintings and altars and crucifixes, and stations of the cross had been ruthlessly battered and defiled. Yet even this does not tell the story—a story which cannot be told to people who respect decency—for the Germans left tokens of physical and mental obscenity in every house I visited, and I entered scores. If all hell had been let loose in a choice suburban town for half a day, it could not have put its obscene and diabolical mark on a place more unmistakably than the Germans put theirs on Chateau Thierry. I stood amazed that there should be so much unrelieved vileness, such organized beastliness in the world.

Is it reasonable to suppose that decent men who have been witnessing scenes like this for the last four years will patiently submit to having their representatives meet the representatives of the Beast on terms of amity and equality and bargain for peace? We don't believe it. That is not what they have been hoping for—it is not what they have been fighting for.—Hamilton Herald.

Food Board Flashes

It does not pay to evade the food laws, as a good many Canadians are finding out to their cost. All violations are being followed up with summary punishment and within the last few months a large number of eating houses, candy manufacturers and bakers have found themselves closed up or with their licenses suspended for a time.

It is the duty of any woman who is cognizant of violation of any of the food laws to report it immediately to the provincial or municipal police.

"Live In A Worry

invites death in a hurry." Worry wastes nerve force at a tremendous rate. The more exhausted the greater the tendency to worry.

Then how is one to get out of this vicious circle? By building up the nervous system with the aid of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

As the nerves are strengthened you forget to worry and find yourself resting and sleeping naturally.

Food cannot be kept too clean—especially in hot weather.

Trapped as Spy at Work, Woman Telegraph Operator Fights to Destroy Paper

Miss Wando Krutzinger, Arrested in Main Postal Office, Makes Dash for Window—Confesses to Giving Enemy Information About Munition Shipments.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—After a desperate struggle in the operating room of the Postal Telegraph Company, Broadway and Murray street, agents of the Department of Justice arrested Miss Wanda Kreutzinger, forty-two years old, of No. 1,324 St Nicholas avenue, whom they declare to be one of the most dangerous German spies in the United States.

The woman was arrested as she sat at her telegraph key on the twelfth floor of the building. Her struggle with the Department of Justice agents in the presence of 500 men and women operators was due to her endeavour to destroy a paper which she was scrutinizing at her desk when they suddenly confronted her and informed her that she was under arrest. She is accused of attempting to supply information to the enemy about shipments of munitions.

For six weeks Miss Kreutzinger had been under the constant surveillance of agents of the Department of Justice, under Charles De Woody, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation for this district. When the five agents left his office to arrest her, Mr. De Woody warned them to be careful that she did not destroy any papers.

Watched Her at Work.

When the five government agents reached the twelfth floor of the telegraph they did not speak to anybody but walked in the direction of the telegraph desk, at which Miss Kreutzinger was busily engaged sending government messages to the company's various offices in what is called the Eastern division.

They watched Miss Kreutzinger for ten minutes, during which time she disposed of several government messages, when suddenly they saw her shut off the telegraph key and then carefully pull from her bodice a small sheet of paper of the kind the telegraph company uses for recording messages. As she started to read the paper she furtively glanced on each side of her to see if other women operators wer observing her actions. She was deeply engrossed in the paper when the five agents pounced on her.

One of them seized the hand which held the paper, but the woman, screaming and fighting like a tigress, managed to free her arm and, breaking away from her captors, started on a run across the floor in the direction of a window opening over Broadway. The agents were close on her heels, and when they seized her this time they twisted her arms so that the paper, which she had torn in small pieces by this time, fell to the floor. Then she was hurried, struggling all the time, to the elevator.

Continues Her Struggles.

She continued to scream and struggle all the way down to the main office of the company, where she received her hat and coat and was hurried in an automobile to the office of the Department of Justice.

When she was taken before Chief De Woody she was defiant. She said she came to this country from Posen, Germany, twenty years ago and that for the last sixteen years she had been employed as a telegraph operator by the Postal Telegraph Company. She said she worked most of that time in the Chicago headquarters of the company and that she came to this city about five years ago. She declared she had registered as an enemy alien.

Beyond that information she would vouchsafe no further information until Chief De Woody confronted her with a man, who it is understood, was taken into custody at the telegraph company's building at the time Mrs. Kreutzinger was arrested.

Then the woman, who is small, frail and has gray hair, became hysterical, threw herself on the floor and began to tear her hair. Mr. DeWoody's aids prevented her from doing harm to herself and after several of the woman agents had calmed her she consented to tell something about her connection with spy activities in this country before and since the United States entered the war.

Consented to Turn Spy.

She said that between 1914 and 1915 she was approached by a representative of the German government in this city, who seemed acquainted with the fact she was an expert telegraph operator and, because of that fact, had been assigned by the Postal officials to handle military, naval and administration messages to and from the munitions centres in Connecticut. She consented to turn spy, she said, at the first meeting.

She said that, having a good memory, she seldom copied the messages, but usually memorized each of them. Every evening at the conclusion of her work she met a representative of the German spy system, sometimes in the shadow of the Federal Building, in City Hall Park, where she repeated from memory messages she had sent or received during the day. Sometimes, when a message was too long or contained complicated phraseology, she copied it, she said. She said she conveyed this information to several Germans connected with the spy system in the city, and that they were all introduced to her by the man who first broached the scheme to her.

When President Wilson declared war on Germany, she said, the representatives of the German spy system disappeared and she did not supply any more information until about six weeks ago, when she was introduced to the man who confronted her in Mr. DeWoody's office after her arrest.

"Would Be for Fatherland."

She said that man was introduced to her by the German whose name she did not remember, and that he told her any information she could give him would be for the Fatherland. Thereupon she resumed her spy work on the government messages, which she admitted she knew would be of value to the German cause.

At that point she decided not to say anything further about herself, refusing to give any information about the Germans to whom she delivered the messages in 1914 and 1915. On that particular feature of the case Mr. DeWoody refused to give any information, but it is known that government officials at the time were aware of the fact that she was a part of the German spy system in this country. They did not interfere with her because it was expected that all of those connected with the scheme eventually would be drawn into the government dragnet.

It was reported that the government ever since the war began has been careful not to let Miss Kreutzinger handle information which might lead to the sinking of a transport or a munitions ship. Such messages as she was permitted to send or receive were of no value to the enemy, because the dates were changed.

Von Bernstorff's Activities.

It is known that back in 1914, when Count Johann von Bernstorff, then German Ambassador to this country, was extending the German spy system here, he assigned Captain Franz von Papen, then Naval Attache of the embassy, to the work of enlisting in the spy system German sympathizers employed in the offices of the telegraph companies. It is understood that Von Papen managed to draw into his spy system at least one of the important operators in each of the large cities of the country, and, in several instances they were women.

The work of gaining access to these spies was actually brought about through the activities of Dr. Bernhard Dernberg and Heinrich F. Albert, "paymaster" for the German spy system, who worked through various German church and social organizations. After they had been induced to play the part of spy the operators communicated with von Papen, who assigned them to the representative of the German spy system in their particular city.

Whether Miss Kreutzinger was connected with Captain von Papen's spy system in this city, could not be learned. It was said that the government officials are jealously guarding all information on that point lest it interfere with further arrests of German spies in this country.

At No. 1,324 St. Nicholas avenue, the address given by Miss Kreutzinger, it was learned that she lived with a Mr. and Mrs. Sellers. The address is an apartment house. The elevator operator said that little was known there about Miss Kreutzinger, because she seldom spoke to any of the other tenants. Mr. and Mrs. Sellers received a telephone message late in the afternoon and they hurriedly left the house. It is understood the telephone call came from the Waverly Home, in West Tenth street, where Miss Kreutzinger is being detained pending further investigation.

WONDERFUL BILIOUS REMEDY ACTUALLY PREVENTS ATTACKS

There are two great causes of biliousness—they are constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken, they are not only correct constipated bowels, but act upon the liver as well.

Quite unlike ordinary medicines which purge and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the conditions which cause biliousness, and thus permanent cures are effected. No person who occasionally uses Dr. Hamilton's Pills will ever suffer from the headache, bad stomach or mild but thorough in their action; do day.

The Safeguarding of Peterboro's Milk Supply

The safeguarding of a municipal milk supply is as important, if not more so, than the safeguarding of the water supply.

A municipality would be more justified in enforcing the pasteurization of all milk than they would be in requiring the filtration or chlorination of their contaminated waters.

While we may feel sorry for those who are not able to keep pace with the advances of sanitary science, yet our sympathy cannot be permitted to warp our judgments in the efficient safeguarding of the public health.

There is only one method by which the dangers of the various communicable diseases can be eliminated from our milk supply—that is—

Scientific Pasteurization

A milk pasteurized at twelve cents a quart has the highest possible public value, because of its Safety, Decency and Price.

The Best Milk to Buy is Pasteurized Milk

Every bottle of milk sold or delivered by The Peterboro Milk Products Ltd.

Is not only PASTEURIZED, but CLARIFIED as well, safeguarding its patrons from all Raw Milk dangers. But many of our citizens do not appear to realize the value of such health protection. Remove the element of chance and let us start your Milk Supply, and don't procrastinate any onger.

TO ADVISE SURRENDER IS DEATH IN ARMY

All Troops Ordered to Kill Any Man Who Tries to Stop a Battle.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 14.—American troops of all units have been instructed to kill on the spot any one who in time of battle urges surrender or attempts to persuade them that further resistance is useless.

These instructions, which originated with a certain division and have now been universally adopted because they proved so popular, were made necessary because some one in American uniform during a German attack on Fismette on Aug. 27 ran among the troops, calling upon them to cease resistance, and declaring that the officers advised surrender.

The instructions point out that these statements were absolutely false, and add:

"The person who spreads such an alarm is either an enemy in our uniform or one of our own troops who is disloyal and a traitor, or one of our troops who has become a panic-stricken coward. Whoever he is should be shot on the spot. In battle there is not time to inquire into the identity or motives of persons who create panic or disorganization or who advise surrender."

"It is the duty of every officer and soldier to kill on the spot any person who in a fight urges any one to surrender or stop fighting. It makes no difference whether the person is a stranger or a friend, an officer or a private."

The instructions conclude with the statement that a German soldier was found mortally wounded far inside the American lines at Fismette. He had lived for a long time in American and spoke English well, and possibly he intended to get an American uniform and create doubt or disorganization among the men.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-

MANY DEER LICENSES.

So far the Department of Fish and Game at the Parliament Buildings has sent out to the various game wardens about 20,000 deer licenses. This week 2,000 moose licenses have been issued. The cost of a license this year is $3, as compared with $2 in former years, but the privilege is extended to the hunter to two deer or moose instead of one. The number of deer licenses issued this year is regulated on demands of previous years.

TO every home there comes a time when every thought, every hope, every prayer for the future centres on the recovery of one loved one. In that hour of anguish, every means to recovery is sought—the highest medical skill, trained nurses, costly treatment. Does the price matter?

* * * *

It may be so great as to stagger the imagination—a sum beyond the possible.

But does anyone ask, "Can we do it?" Money or no money, they do it. And somehow they pay.

It may mean doing without things they think they need. It may mean privations, sacrifices, hardships. They make unbelievable savings, they achieve the impossible, but they get the money to pay.

* * * *

To-day in this critical period of our nationhood, there is imperative need for MONEY—vast sums of money. Only one way now remains to obtain it.

The nation must save, every community, every family, every individual Canadian must save.

If anyone says "I cannot save" let him consider to what extent he would pinch himself to relieve the sufferings of a loved one at home; and surely he would not pinch less for our fighting brothers in France.

Without suffering actual privations, nearly every family in Canada can reduce its standard of living, can practice reasonable thrift, can make cheerful sacrifice to enrich the life-blood of the nation.

You who read this, get out pencil and paper NOW. Set down the items of your living expense. Surely you will find some items there you can do without.

Determine to do without them.

Start TO-DAY. Save your money so that you may be in a position to lend it to your country in its time of need.

PETERBORO BOY SCOUTS NOTES

The membership of the Boy Scouts' Association in Canada numbers over 20,000.

Only 28 members in Peterborough, viz., St. Albans.

Nineteen on parade on Wednesday evening. Scout hats were given to the first twelve members of the troop. A march out followed, and the Scout yell was practiced in readiness for the meeting in the Public Library on the 20th (next Friday).

A trial in "tracking" took place on the homeward stretch, but the quarry (Scoutmaster Spence) managed to baffle the trackers.

Tracking and stalking are two of the favourite pursuits of the Scouts.

St. James' Methodist Church will have a good representation at the meeting next Friday. It is safe to forecast that St. James will have a troop of over fifty members within a month.

Every church in the city should equal this.

Sunday School teachers will find the Boy Scout movement a great help to them, and if they really have the boys' welfare at heart they will go and hear what Mr. Hammond, the Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scouts' Association, has to say about it at the Public Library next Friday.

Build up the future generation of Canada by training it in the principles of the Boy Scouts' Association.

The Governor-General is the Chief Scout for Canada.

It is hoped that a strong local association will be elected next Friday evening.

The local association bears a similar relationship to the Boy Scout Troop or troops that the School Board does to the school, and should be composed of citizens who are interested in the welfare of the boy.

The local association exists for the purpose of supervising and encouraging the movement within its area.

It can nominate suitable persons to act as officers and recommend them to the Provincial Council for the Chief Scout's warrant.

It can register, refuse to register, or suspend an officer, troop, patrol, or scout within its area. No officer, troop, patrol, or scout will be recognized unless registered.

It can appoint badge committees of independent ladies and gentlemen to examine candidates for the proficiency badges.

All clergy, teachers and leaders in boys' work are particularly invited to attend the meeting in the Public Library on Friday next at 8 p.m.

Save the boy!

WARNS OF STORIES OF GERMAN UNREST

State Department Sanctions Denial of Such Rumours by Minister Morris.

FAITH IN ARMY PERSISTS

WASHINGTON.—A warning to the American people not to be misled into believing that the German people are on the verge of starvation and revolution or into the delusion that the German military power has yet cracked was authorized by the State Department. It took the form of a signed statement from Ira Nelson Morris, of Chicago, the American Minister to Sweden, who is in Washington on leave of absence.

The importance of the statement is to be found in the fact that it was issued officially with the sanction of the Department. Unless the statement made by Minister Morris reflected the opinion of this Government, no such sanction would have been given.

As American Minister to Stockholm Mr. Morris has been in an exceptionally good position to gather information regarding conditions in Germany. His statement follows:

"I have heard reports in the press since my return home to the effect that Germany is on the verge of starvation, and I find this to be the opinion of many with whom I come in daily contact. There can be no question that there is a shortage of most of the essentials of life, but to state that this borders on the verge of starvation is erroneous and misleading. I base this statement on many reports from reliable sources that have reached me in Stockholm.

"There is no doubt that in many parts of Germany there is a marked scarcity of food and that the civilian population has been reduced to the minimum ration, but it still receives sufficient for existence. Conditions are better in the rural districts, particularly as regards the farmers and landowners, even in the northern part of Germany, where the scarcity is most felt. In the southern part conditions improve still more, and resorts and hotels there still serve meals at moderate prices.

"In the case of the army, there has been but slight deprivation; this has been fed at the expense of the civilian population.

"In German Poland, in manufacturing districts, and in more densely populated parts, there has been suffering, quite visible in the emaciation of the people which has naturally impaired the efficiency of the German workman, who no longer possesses full vigour, but it is a mistake to believe that this has provoked a strong current toward revolution, or any general lessening of the loyalty of the people. They still possess faith in the invincibility of the military power, being purposely kept in ignorance of the real conditions on the Western front, not only as regard German reserves, but also the full significance of America's entry into the war.

"It is to the advantage of our country and our cause that we should know the actual conditions which face us in this great crusade for democracy, so that we can more effectively direct our effort toward victory.

"The people of the United States are resolute and determined. The country should realize that its entire energy must be put into the struggle and must not be relaxed for a single instant. There is no doubt of victory so long as these moves by Germany are plainly understood."

JAPS AND RUSS FRATERNIZE.

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 18.—The entente allitd authorities here have refused to recognide the Siberian Government headed by Gen. Horvath, according to a semi-official announcement made recently, and have appointed a committee of seven to administer the municipal affairs. All misunderstandings between the Japanese and Russian authorities have been completely removed. The Japanese and Russian troops are fraternizing.

Indict Six Brokers in Campaign to End Investment Frauds

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Six brokers who are alleged to have dealt in questionable investment securities and obtained thousands of dollars from unsuspecting victims were indicted by the Grand Jury on evidence presented by Edward S. Brogan, Assistant District Attorney. Bench warrants wil be issued for their arrests. The brokers, Mr. Brogan declared, disappeared after complaint had been made about deals they "closed."

The District Attorney's office is striving to make the stock market safe for investors by dealing severely with unscrupulous promoters who urge investment in properties that in many instances do not exist.

Mr. Swann will aid the Committee on Capital Issues in their proposed movement to stop the sale of non-essential stock investment for the benefit of the fourth Liberty Loan.

AUSTRIA'S UNHAPPY PLIGHT

(By Frank Fox.)

The successful corruption of the Russian Government and Army; and the consequent savage penalties on the Russian people which the Prussians are exacting, serve at least one good purpose, in making it plain to Austria-Hungary how little she is likely to get from her partnership with Prussia.

As the mists of the pre-war diplomacy are dissipated it becomes more and more clear that Austria-Hungary had no stomach for a general European War, and would have withdrawn in 1914 if she had been allowed. But Prussia which wanted the war and wanted it urgently, before improved railway communications strengthened Russia, before the new Universal Service law in Belgium reinforced the defensive system of that little country (already marked down for assassination), managed cleverly enough that Austria-Hungary should be deeply committed in the Balkans before she unmasked her plans. Austria-Hungary went out expecting another easy Bosnia-Herzegovisa triumph and found herself bound to the chariot wheels of Prussia in an adventure to seek dominion of the world. In the first phase of the war Austria-Hungary showed unreadiness for large scale war almost to the same degree as Germany showed her laboriously perfected preparedness for world war.

There is No Hope.

Now, as the war enters its last phase, Austria-Hungary can see, and does see with increasing bitterness, to what extent she has been victimized. There is no hope of profit for her whatever happens. She must face her staggering losses without any chance of recoupment. But she sees Prussia mopping up province and Prussian Military Party declaring itself resolved to continue the war until the world consents to Prussia being left in control of great part of Russia, of Belgium, and of the iron ore districts of Northern France and of such British coaling stations as she may want.

And there is enough sanity in Austria-Hungary to understand that the world will never consent, can never consent to that, but would rather face a twenty years' war than make peace on terms which would secure space before Prussia entered upon a new war of conquest. Thus Austria-Hungary, with nothing to gain, is being compelled day after day to add to her losses and commitments. She sees her madly ambitious partner stretching out after a more and more swollen war booty.

Whether Austria-Hungary at this stage can do anything immediately practical to get out of a dangerous position, which threatens her very national existence, is a question which cannot be answered with certainty. The only useful decision she could come to calls for a great deal more courage than seems to exist among her leaders. No remonstrance no diplomatic representation, however urgent, would be of any avail in affecting Prussia's attitude; only a peremptory vote of the war conquest policy would be effective. But it is even possible that courage may be found for that since the Austrian position today is that she is called upon to continue to make exhausting sacrifices with two alternatives to dread a complete defeat of the German Alliance, the losses of which Prussia would contrive to make her pay in the main; or a victory of the German Alliance which would leave Austria-Hungary surrounded on all sides by Prussian controlled states and at the absolute mercy of the Prussian Government.

To Austria-Hungary a German victory would be more deadly than a German defeat.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery come on so quickly that often a little life is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HATS

Possessing a Charm which Distinguishes the Ultra From the Common-place

Three-corners, four-corners—the brims of the Fall hats are full of angles, curves and odd, unexpected turnings. That is, many of the smartest and most novel of them are thus characterized. For women of more conservative tastes are close-fitting turbans, sailor effects, and flat wide spreading dress shapes.

Velvet, velour and hatter's plush are the materials of chief favor with soft and folded crowns in strong evidence, and shirring of velvet a popular detail. The fashionable colors are reindeer and African browns, navy and Blue Devil blues, purple, taupe and black.

A large and comprehensive showing of such hats you will find now in our millinery parlor awaiting your inspection. And there is a hat to suit every purse. Come to see them soon.

GATE RECEIPTS FOR FIRST TWO DAYS

ed in a wide circle south of the grounds and then away to the east. Miss Stinson was quickly back over the Exhibition grounds and then another wide circle was executed in the course of which the young aviatrix thrilled the crowd by quick swoops downward, followed by equally as quick climbs with the machine banked at a dangerous angle.

Suddenly, after along detour to the eastward, she came over the Exhibition grounds at top speed and quite low down, giving the spectators a splendid opportunity to see the plane in action at close range. After another long circle Miss Stinson made a very clever landing, diving down close to the Main building and finally alighting close to the spot from which her flight began.

It was a splendid performance and a revelation to many in the crowd, who for the first time in their lives had had a chance to see an aeroplane flight. Miss Stinson, who looks like a school girl, was loudly cheered as the plane came to a stop. Her performance was the crowning feature of a splendid programme.

The Horse Races.

The heavy rain had played havoc with the track and the going was very hard when Dr. Sinclair got the speed merchants under way. The only race originally booked for the afternoon was the 2.10 class, but there were two unfinished races left over from Thursday afternoon, so that there was a good programme.

The 2.15 class event, in which Dr. Benson's Dream Light had taken two heats on Thursday, required only one more heat to reach a decision yesterday. Dream Light showed a clean pair of heels to the field and by capturing the first heat in easy fashion, annexed first money in the race. Furioso was second and the Indian third in the heat. The complete summary:

Furioso	2	4	2
The Indian	4	3	3

One heat of the 2.50 race had been run off on Thursday and the race was finished yesterday. Jim Elliott who won the heat on Thursday, took the first two yesterday and earned first money. The second heat was a lively battle with Helen Patch and the finish was close. The summary:

Sedalia	3	3	4
Wiry Jim	5	5	5

The 2.10 class was comparatively easy for Dr. Hal, owned by R. Overland of Orangeville, who took the race in three heats. The chief opposition came from Lucy T, owned by Burkholder of New Liskeard, but the northern mare never could quite get up. The well known Jimmy Direct was third. The result:

Dr. Hal	1	1	1
Jimmy Direct	3	3	3

Time—2.30, 2.32, 2.35.

The Evening Performance.

In spite of the threatening weather there was a large crowd on the ground for the evening performance, which started in sensational fashion with Miss Stinson's flying performance and wound up with a brilliant display of fireworks. Sandwiched in between was an excellent programme on the vaudeville platform, the dancing Beatties, the Le Mayos trio, the two Fritches and Raffles, all scoring heavily in their respective acts. Raffles had little trouble in escaping from a packing box in which he was apparently securely nailed.

Exhibitor's Commendation

One of the sheep exhibitors came into the Secretary's office last night and said "You people deserve all the credit in the world for the way you have fixed up these grounds. I have been coming here for years, and I hardly recognized the place when I arrived on Thursday morning. If you had had good weather you would have made a record"

This compliment was only one of many that have been passed. They have been volunteered by strangers and our own citizens, and the tone of satisfaction that marked them is impressive proof of the general recognition of the progress that has been achieved by the Directors this year.

Great Lighting Effect.

The co-operation that has been accorded the Board is exemplified in the lighting of the grounds. The Board gave a general order to the Utilities Commission, and Mr. H. O. Fisk's department excelled themselves. Mr. Harry Beattie and his assistants strung arthe wires whert they afforde the greatest utility, also presenting a spectacle that was decidedly impressive. The exhibition building was outlined with incandescent lights, and in the whole thirty acres there wasn't a dark corner with the possible exception of the remote southwest corner.

Little Touches That Count

Some member of the Board has a genius for detail. Clocks at the gates, for example, were innovation, but they did not fail to draw complimentary notice. The flower boxes at the entrances presented another little touch of completeness that stood out conspicuously before the approaching crowds. The rest seats were an improvement that admits extension every year, the water taps were also helpful. In fact in many little ways the Board had anticipated the needs of the visitors as never before.

Farm Machinery Increasing

There was a notable increase this year in the display of agricultural and dairy machinery, tractors, milkers, plows of all kinds, and the woodcutting attachment to employ the farm automobile in lessening the labour of keeping the home fires burning. This feature is encouraging, for in the last analysis the Fair should offer the greatest practical interest possible to the farmers.

The Farm and Dairy's grain competition was also a welcome addition, as were the Y.M.C.A. and school gardening contributions of vegetables and flowers.

DISTINCTIVE EXHIBITS.

Fulther reference to the attractive mercantile exhibits made in the main building furnishes additional interesting Fair reading.

Peterborough Hardware Company's Excellent Store Display.

The Peterborough Hardware Co. were appointed sole local agents for the Guerney Oxford stoves and ranges about two years ago, and since that time, it is known the firm have found their new stove department a valuable addition to their large business. It was learned from the representatives of the firm in attendance at this exhibit that the Guerney Oxford ranges have met with an encouraging local demand. The department of stoves has given this big busy store new leaders, which have grown, not only because of the excellence of the stove models, themselves in their various modern designs, but because of the energetic and practical business manner and methods adopted in handling and selling them.

The fine display made of these modern stoves and ranges in the main building could not fail to attract the streams of visitors which thronged the exhibit.

The stove problem and the coal shortage have many sides to them,but the Gurney-Oxford people claim that they have got round all sides. The Peterborough Hardware Co. stand back of this statement and declare that they can show that in the Gurney-Oxford stoves and heaters they offer the best service on the market, at a price as low as it can be made. They give a guarantee that if any stove, for any reason fails to give satisfactory results, they agree to refund the price paid them on this stove, any time within 100 days of the time of purchasing.

The Gurney-Oxford "Chancellor" steel combination range for coal, wood or gas came in for marked attention. Its "economizer" feature demonstrates how the fuel bill can be cut down. It tells you how to control the heat so as to get just the heat you want when you want it, saving one-fifth of the fuel.

Among the special inducements offered buyers of Guerney stoves is the unusually close prices the various stoves and ranges are sold at.In addition to this, the freight and all delivery charges are paid on all stoves sent out, and repairs and extra parts can be had here at any time. Mr. Rockaway, a representative from the Guerney Foundry, clearly explained the various important features of these stoves.

Society Women Use New Wrinkle Remover

Since the discovery that a solution of ordinary saxolite and witch hazel has a peculiar effect upon wrinkled skins, it has been learned that many prominent society women all over the country have used this simple home treatment with great success. The formula is: powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. Use daily as a wash lotion.

The beneficial action of this wash is felt at once. There's an agreeable refreshing sensation and feeling of exhilaration. Flabbiness and all wrinkles are immediately affected, and the skin soon becomes firmer and more youthful looking. No one need hesitate to get the ingredients at the drug store and make the remedy herself, for there are no harmful effects whatever.

Police Search for Automobile That Ran Into River

New York, September 14.—Harbor policemen are trying to solve one of the strangest aces they have had in years when they began a search of the East River in the vicinity of East Thirty-first street for the bodies of several persons who are believed to have been riding in a high powered automobile which ran at breakneck speed off a pier into the water early in the day.

Four persons, two of them probably women, are believed to have been in the car, and were prbably drowned.

There was no trace of the automobile or even parts of it anywhere in the vicinity of the pier, and there was nothing found that might lead to the identification of any of the passengers. The policemen, however, investigated for several hundred yards in either direction from the pier in the hope of finding something that would aid them in their search.

The case was brought to the attention of the police at the East Thirty-fifth street police station by Ernest Morris, captain of the barge George D. Clausen, lying off the foot of East Thirty-first street.

He told the detectives that he was seated on his boat when he heard the motor of an automobile. In less than a minute, he said, he saw the car racing toward the end of the pier. It was dark and he was unable to tell the detectives whether there were any occupants in the machine.

The police of Harbor A and the Fire Department were notified, and detectives from the East Thirty-fifth street station hurried to the pier.

The harbor policemen, however, continued their search of the river and were satisfied that they would make some discovery that would lead to the recovery of the automobile, if one had gone into the river.

CURING SKIN TROUBLES

So many people, both men and women, suffer from skin troubles, such as eczema, blotches, pimples and irritation that a word of advice is necessary. It is a great mistake for such sufferers and those with bad complexions to smear themselves with greasy ointments. Often they could not do anything worse, for the grease clogs the pores of the troubled skin and their condition actually becomes worse.

When there are pimples or eruptions, or an irritating or itching rash, a soothing boracic solution may help to allay the irritation, but of course that does not cure the trouble. Skin complaints come from an impure condition of the blood and will persist until the blood is thoroughly purified. It is well known that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have effected the best results in many forms of skin disorders and blemishes. This is due to the fact that these pills make new, rich blood, and that this new blood attacks the impurities that give rise to skin troubles and disperses them; so that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure skin disorders from within the system —the only sure way.

It should be added that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a beneficial effect upon the general health. They increase the appetite and energy and cure diseases that arise from impure blood.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a bix or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE safe way to send money by mail is by Dominion Express Money Order.

Destructive Fire at Bobcaygeon

House Owned by a Peterborough Man Destroyed.

BOBCAYGEON, Sept. 14. — Bobcaygeon was visited by another destructive fire. About 6.15 a.m. yesterday, Mr. Wesley Dunn, King St., in looking out of his house, saw flames and smoke issuing out of Dr. McIntosh's dwelling, opposite the South Public School. He immediately gave the alarm. Others, among whom were Mr. W. A. Davis, going to make up the early mail at 7 a.m., about the same time saw the fire, and were early on the scene, but by that time the fire had made such headway that it was impossible to gain admittance to the house, as Dr. and Mrs. McIntosh were in Toronto. A bucket brigade was formed, and saved the stable of Mrs. Braden and other buildings in the rear before the fire engine got to work. The cause of the fire is a mystery. The building is an old one, owned by Mr. James Bick, Peterborough, and at one time was owned by the late George Dick, then Clerk of Verulam.

Dr. McIntosh had a small insurance on his furniture and drugs, but it is not known whether the building is insured. The building was of frame construction, and is a total loss, and only for the rain there might have been a heavy loss.

United States Boy Scouts Have Been Great Aid to Govt.

The Boy Scouts in the United States have rendered a valuable assistance to the Administration in many phases of war work during the past eighteen months. This was illustrated to Mr. Robert Hicks in a recent conversation with Mr. George W. Ehler, Scout Executive of the Allegheny County Scout Council, Pittsburg, who enumerated several interesting achievements of the boys. They undertook to locate in the walnut district, all the walnut trees of twelve inches in diameter and over. They labelled these trees and prepared a report of the location of the farms and the names of the farmers who owned them. As a result the Scouts discovered 14,000,000 feet of walnut, despite the fact that this wood was regarded as almost extinct. The total quantity thus located represented 3,600 car loads of this valuable lumber which the Government needed for the manufacture of gunstocks and airplane parts.

In the last Liberty Loan campaign the Scouts secured one in every twenty-three subscriptions for a total of $300,000. Their aid was not called in until the last three days of the campaign, when the boys were sent out as gleaners to round up prospects. These were only two of the activities of the 800 troops of Boy Scouts scattered throughout the United States. Mr. Hicks was greatly impressed, not only by this recital of accomplishments, but also by the character of Mr. Ehler, representing the type of men who are fostering the Scout movement across the border. Under their guidance, he remarked, it was not surprising that the work of the boys had been so thoroughly successful.

Rev. C. A. G. Spence has undertaken a movement to revive the Scouts in Peterborough, and a public meeting will be held in the Library next Friday night.

USE SUBSTITUTES FOR COAL UNTIL DEC. URGE DEALERS

Fuel dealers are refusing to deliver coal for immediate consumption, it was stated this morning. If they are aware of the customer's intention to burn their supplies now, the order is refused. Furthermore, the seventy per cent. allowance has been cancelled, and citizens who have received that proportion of their requirements are receiving instructions that this quantity may be all they will get before spring.

Once more the dealers urge the people not to burn coal until December 1st. A complete record of deliveries is in their possession and, if a severe emergency materializes, these householders will receive scant consideration when they come back for additional coal, after having received seventy per cent. of their usual burning. Hence, the saving should be made between now and December 1st. Wood or some other substitute should be used, and the dealers state that these substitutes are readily available. They also urge the immediate appointment of a Commission by the city in order that the citizens may be assured that no person has obtained more coal than the regulations permitted, and also that further restrictions may be enforced if necessary.

A combination gas and coal stove was shown, which appeared to catch the attention of spectators as a handy outfit for many reasons. And the various coal heaters, gas heaters, and oil stoves proved to be interesting to many who are wondering how best to economize their coal supply.

One of the very best of the numerous electric heaters on the market is the "Majestic," a sample of which was in this display. It is claimed to generate three times the heating power of any other single electric heater, and is found very useful for heating single rooms before the furnace is started.

A new and unique low-pressure washing machine had many admirers. These washers can be operated by any water pressure. A hand-power washer was also shown and a handy tub stand and wringer combined.

The Peterborough Hardware Co. are sole agents for Sherwin-Williams paints, which command such an enormous sale. All varieties of these paints are carried by this firm.

Visitors to the Fair will not easily forget the splendid impressions which must have been left by the practical display made by the Peterborough Hardware Co., George Street. Especially should this be true in the case of those interested at this season in good, modern stoves. For there could be no questioning the facts that the splendid demonstrations made of selected types of Guerney-Oxford steel ranges and heaters received many testimonies of approval from the thousands who visited this section.

Mr. George Gordon was in charge of this display and was successful in securing many prospects.

A Baby's Skin

What is so beautiful as baby's soft, smooth, velvety skin? And how is it to be kept free from chafing, irritations and distressing eczema? This is every mother's question.

Many have found the answer in the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Applied after the bath, this soothing, healing ointment overcomes irritation of the skin and prevents the development of eczema and other annoying skin diseases.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES CAUGHT THE LADIES.

Mr. B. C. Coones, manager of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., of 345 George street, put up the best display of sewing machines that has been seen at the Peterborough show for years. It embraced—

1 Embossed Drawing Room Cabinet Singer.
1 Cabinet Table No. 2, Singer.
1 Cabinet Table No. 5, Singer.
2 Cabinet Table No. 6, Singers.
1 Hand Machine, with motor.

These are by no means the limit of the various Singer machines which Mr. Coones represents, and which includes manufacturing Singer machines, tailoring machines, and machines with all the varied labour-saving attachments. A "Singer for the Girls" that costs the small sum of $4, teaches them to make clothes for their dolls, and is practical and instructive, useful and amusing. It is not a toy, but a real sewing machine.

Mr. Coones was rewarded for his enterprise by a constant overflowing crowd of spectators round his exhibit. He and his assistant, Mr. J. H. Goheen, were kept busy demonstrating the various styles of work possible on these machines.

Pathephone Exhibit by E. V. Warne.

About a dozen models of the world-famous Pathephone was on exhibition in the main building, under charge of the local dealer, Mr. E. V. Warne, jeweller, 325 George Street. It is claimed by the Pathephone that it is the most perfect sound reproducing musical instrument in the world. It was first introduced by the Pathe Brothers, of Paris, France, whose world-wide reputation is well established through their inventive genius in perfecting the Pathephone, the Pathe discs and the moving pictures.

Listening to the marvellous fidelity of the soft vibrations of the violin, the strong melody of the orchestra or band, and every voice modulation of the great artists, as rendered by the Pathephone, you realize you are hearing musical masterpieces reproduced in all their purity, tone strength, and detail of technique. Music lovers everywhere have been so impressed with the natural performance of the Pathephone that they all agree it should be called the actual duplication of the living voices of the artists.

The Pathephone sound chamber is constructed of wood, forming a perfect vibrating path for the amplification of sound. It is equipped with a perfect tone control, suiting every mood of the owners' desires, so that they may add their own interpretation to the volume, shading and expression of any selection.

In the Pathe discs the sound waves are recorded on the bottom of the record grooves. A permanent, highly polished, smooth, round, genuine sapphire is used to gather them from forty points of constant contact between the sapphire and the disc, conducting the vibrations from the latter to the sound chamber, and doing away with the necessity of constantly changing needles—both for the protection of the disc and to secure the desired tone results.

The Peterborough public are a discriminating one, and the efforts of the Pathe Phonograph Co. to produce artistic talking machine cabinets in harmony with the decorations of the house cannot fail to meet with hearty support. The wide range of styles of cabinets shown in Mr. Warne's exhibit should leave little perplexity in selecting the instrument best in accord with the individual's house furnishings.

If it was impossible to visit the exhibit at the Exhibition, a call at the store will be productive of pleasure and a good musical demonstratiaon.

The Roy Studio Special Exhibit.

Convincing seems the best term to apply to the exhibit of the Roy Studio. If anyone ever had any doubt about the high quality of work produced by this old established studio it was effectually dispelled by this wonderful display of modern photography.

The great range of subjects, to one not familiar with photography as it is to-day, is absolutely astounding. Everything seems to come within the range of Mr. Roy's camera. From Jack Miner's wild geese to the family group at the home fireside is a far cry, but they are all there and are portrayed in a truly wonderful manner.

Special mention should be made of the three large framed prints of Flight Lieut. Tom Shield, the first Peterborough boy to fly over his home town, and who is now flying in France.

The opening of the fine new court room and the county court in session. Every face in this large groupe is clear and distinct.

The Quaker Oats fire, taken at 10.30 at night, entirely by the light of the flames. This picture is admitted to be one of the finest things of the kind ever produced.

"Photography is destined to be, and has already been, one of the principal factors in winning this war. The wonderful work of the aerial photographers is well known to the majority of Canadians.

From a sentimental standpoint, the part is has played is almost as important. There is nothing our boys in the trenches appreciate more than pictures of the loved ones at home. Even snap shots are treasured and carried for months and years.

Christmas Photography.

In conversation with Mr. Roy he expressed the decided opinion that on account of shortage of expert help and the difficulty of obtaining high grade materials that the number of sittings possible to accommodate this year would be much less than last and advises strongly an early appointment for those who want pictures for Christmas mailing, particularly if they are for overseas.

PRIZE-WINNERS IN THE COMPETITION AT CHEMONG VILLAGE.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE FIRST MARATHON RACE

A Greek Sport Staged the Event Over Two Thousand Years Ago

One of the gamest guys in the history of the world was Phidippides, the Greek sport who won the first Marathon race. This was pulled off 2408 years ago September 9, 490 B.C.

In those days the Greeks were the world's best athletes, and their Olympian games always attracted a lot of stellar talent. Every Hellenic youth was trained in a "gym," and physical torture joints were as numerous in Athens as places of liquid refreshemnt in New York or San Francisco. The occasion for Phidippides' great stunt was as follows: The Persians had invaded Greece, intending to occupy the country, and the Greeks naturally resented such a project. A little band of patriotic Greeks opposed the Persians, under Darius, on the plain of Marathon. To use a vulgar but expressive phrase, the Greeks "licked the tar out of the Persians. When the Greeks sought to send news of their victory to Athens they had no telegraph, telephone or wireless means of communication, not even an automobile, and the horses were otherwise engaged, so there was nothing for it but somebody to hoof it to Athens and carry the glad tidings to the Athens newspapers, so that they could get out an extra and relieve the anxiety prevailing in the Greek metropolis.

Phidippides, an Athenian lad who had won several medals or wreaths or something as a long-distance runner, volunteered for the job, and set a record that has never since been equaled. He covered the twenty-six miles and reached Athens with just breath enough to blurt out that the Persians had got it in the well-known neck, and then fell dead in his tracks. Such was the origin of the Marathon race. Before the battle, Phidippides had been sent as a messenger to Sparta to implore the assistance of that country, and covered the distance of 150 miles in 48 hours.

Although Phidippides died so long ago, he deserves to be remembered and honored by all who consider gameness a virtue.

Baseball Unlikely to Oust Cricket in Great Britain

Natives of the British Isles Admit Game is Snappy and Noisy.

On the editorial page The Cleveland Plain-Dealer discusses baseball in England as follows:—

"In London two famous football grounds, the Chelsea and the Armory have been secured for an indefinite period for the use of the American and Canadian baseball players and every pleasant day the natives gather around and shake their heads and gravely declare that it isn't cricket. Its' brisk game," one British observer admits. "It's gingery and continuous. The ball is snapped around in a manner quite baffling. There's a lot of noise about it, too, and much confusion, and it's rather intense. still, it doesn't seem at all likely to oust cricket from the Britos's traditional affections." Yet stranger things have happened since the Kaiser laid his desk ruler across the map of Belgium. Other British traditions have been loosened up. Roast beef has been toppled from the culinary throne, and the glug-glug of ale and porter is heard at rarer intervals.

"'It is quite wonderful,' says the British observer, 'what a hold baseball has on the American masses. One of the big American publications recalls how in 1888-'89 the Spalding Chicago-All American combination visited England in its world tour, and gave the nations a taste of its expert quality. Then the writer tells of the hopless effort made by a London music hall manager to popularize the sport in the early '90's. He also remembers that in 1913 another world tour of the leading American players was made, and that the 'takings' in London amounted to the amazing sum of $3,500. The game, however, added nothing to its previous impression.

"But times and men and manners. This changed—then why not sports? This is a fighting era. Baseball is the fastest and most perfect of fighting games. Traditions are but cobwebs. Why can't we expect that the All-American nine will meet the All-British nine in the international struggle for the world's championship at some early post bellum date?

The World Series as Told in Brief

The attendance at the world's series games this year is away below the average, due no doubt to war conditions. Boston again demonstrated their superiority yesterday by annexing the fourth game before 22,000 people. Both the Cubs and the Red Sox used two pitchers in the fray, Douglas replacing Tyler for the Cubs and Bush taking Babe Ruth's place. Ruth was as wild as a March hare, passing no less than seven men in the eight innings that he pitched, but at that the big fellow undoubtedly won his own game by making a three base hit in the fourth innings, driving home Whiteman and McInnis. The Cubs tied up the score in their first half of the eight, owing to "Babe's" wildness, the Chicago men scoring two runs, but the Red Sox in their half of the eighth put the game on ice, Schang, the Red Sox catcher, scoring the run that won the game. Bush took up the pitching task in the ninth innings, and no runs were scored by either team in the last frame, the game going to the American League representatives by 3-2. The Bostonions appear to have the edge on the western men, having taken three out of the four games from Mitcheli's warriors. If the eastern men can repeat their performance of yesterday, the world's series will be decided to-day, and the championship will again rest on an American league team. Boston took the first game in Chicago, 2 to 1. Chicago the second game 3 to 1. Boston the next two games, 2 to 1 and 3 to 2. Despite the defeat of the Chicago team the brand of ball is undoubtedly the best ever seen in the world's series, each team having to fight every inch of the way. The Red Sox appeared to have the breaks yesterday, as they were outhit by the Cubs seven hits to four, but the trusty bludgeon of Ruth saved the day.

SPORTING COMMENT

WILL HAVE TO ENLIST.

Duke Kahanamoku, holder of all the world's swimming records from 25 yards to 100 metres, has been transferred from draft class 3 to class 1 by his exemption board at Honolulu. He will be inducted into the army when he returns from the United States, where he is now on a swimming tour, it was announced.

COB'S AND COLLINS' JOBS.

Ty Cobb for the gas and flame division of the American army, and Eddie Collins for the navy. The two greatest players the game has produced in a decade have selected hard jobs for themselves in the Great Series, reflecting credit on them, and honoring the game.

The example of these two men will be followed by others, and will help the game.

CARPENTIER VS. DEMPSEY.

Georges Carpentier, greatest of French boxers and European heavyweight champion, who has added to the fame he gained as a ringman by his exploits in the world war, is anxious to return to the squared circle, and would meet Jack Dempsey. Information to this effect is contained in a letter written by Victor Breyer, the French sportsman and journalist.

Incidentally news of the allied successes in the vicinity of Lens must have been received with great joy by Carpentier, who invested the bulk of his fortune earned in the ring in coal mines in that district a year or two before the war.

THE HOME RUN KING.

The best home-run record of latterday baseball was hung up five years ago yesterday by Jackley, a catcher of the Ironton club, of the Ohio State League. On September 9, 1913, in a game with Hamilton, Jackley got five safe hits in five trips to the plate on the delivery of Pitcher Hart, and four of his smashes were home runs, the fifth being a single. Several old-timers in both the majors and the minors equalled Jackley's home-run record but modern conditions make Jackley's the best of the bunch. A couple of years before performing his memorable feat Jackley had been given a trial by the Phillies, but failed to make good.

Other sluggers who have knocked out four home runs in a game include Crooks, of Omaha, Western Association, in 1889; Bobby Lowe, of the Boston Nationals, in 1894; Bottenus, of Buffalo, Eastern League, in 1895, and Ed Delehanty, of the Phillies, in 1896.

One of the fall football lists as printed contains an oddity in physics. Penn's bookings note that Penn plays Pitt in Philadelphia on October 26, and Pitt's schedule, according to the same compilation, has Penn playing in Pittsburg on the same date. If these are corrected the kick off, doubtless, will be in Altoona.

Miller Huggins made American League baseball in New York more popular than ever before, and he will be welcome back when the game is resumed.

A recent news story from London tells of a scaplane exploit of Ensign Schieffelin, Yale, 1819, and Lieut. Roger Cutler, and refers to the latter as "stroke and captain of the Harvard Varsity crew of 1917." My impression is that Cutler was much earlier than that — Harvard 1911, I should say offhand.

The game for the game's sake, sport for sport's sake, is, as all sportsmen know, a principle of sport as vital as it is fine. The creation and propagation of that principle and the physical and moral benefits received for use in sterner conflict are the finest and chiefest reasons for and enjoyment of sport. They exist to varying degrees in all sorts of athletic competition. Fine types of sportsmen who have fallen in war recently were Overton, track athletics; Mills and Healy, football; Sturtevant, rowing, and Allen, wrestling.

No sport has improved as much in quality of performance and in growing number of devotees the last few years as swimming. Apparently, too, much has been learned of the art of swimming, by the experts, at any rate. The way the McGillivrays, Galligans, Dorfners and Kahanamokus have been making records indicates a big advance in the application of power, i.e., the stroke, and, to paraphrase an historic utterance, that we are just beginning to swim.

The best world's series baseball, the best grade of baseball in the series since the National Commission took hold, was played by the Braves in 1914. That team presented a stancher all around front, disclosed fewer weaknesses than any other world's series contender we have had, although there have been several teams of greater potential skill, of more brilliancy and range, but not with so much superb poise and morale, and none with more sand. The Red Sox of 1915 and 1916, the Athletics of 1910 and the Cubs of 1907 and 1908 all did well in playing close to normal form, and the Athletics and Cubs had more native ability, but none more courage than the 1914 Braves.

The Red Sox of 1912, who played the most memorable of all series with the Giants, was a stronger individual team than the later Red Sox, but they were an erratic and unsteady crowd in the post season series, fully as much so as the Giant. The Giants never have been a good world's series team since 1905. The White Sox of 1906, not the artistic equals of their fellow townsmen of last year, were, however, far better in the interleague clash. They were an inspired team, were the men under Fielder Jones, and played beyond their speed. The gamest world's series clubs have been, so far as one can judge by bearing and results on the field, the Braves of 1914, Jimmy Collins' Boston Americans of 1903—Collins was as game a leader as he was a great player—and the White Sox of 1906. I don't look for grit and steadiness from the Cubs this year.

CURLERS FIND BRISK DEMAND FOR TICKETS

The Curling Club reports a brisk demand for next season's membership tickets even at the two dollar increase. Martin reports that the Kickers' Club are considering the advisability of accepting a few new members, but the executive just now is engaged in preparing a design for this year's badges.

MURDERERS MAKE ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Two Others Go With Them After Stunning Guard.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Two convicted murderers awaiting execution, a safe blower and another prisoner escaped from the fourth floor of the county jail by sliding down a rope while nearly a score of persons watched them. An automobile was waiting, and carried the quartette away.

Joseph Moran, well-known cracksman, beat a guard insensible, and with his keys released Earl Dear and Lloyd Bopp, the murderers, and Frank McErlane, alleged accomplice of Bopp.

They tore away window bars that previously had been sawed nearly in two and produced the rope that carried them to the street.

Mayor Duncan Will be the Marksman.

A keen interest is being taken in the coal shoot which takes place this afternoon at four o'clock. Mayor Duncan will fire three shots at the target which constitute the three prizes. The first prize is 3 tons of coal, second prize 2 tons and 3rd prize 1 ton.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

In reply to Mr. F. H. Dobbin's letter in which he explains the coal complaint to me would it have been against all Mr. Dobbin's gentlemanly traits to have given that simple explanation instead of dismissing it in Mr. Dobbin's usual patriotic manner. And for the future it would save quite a few soldier's wives the same worry as I, if the coal dealers would please deliver their slips when delivering coal. I would like to thank Mr. Dobbin for the publicity he gave my name and address. But as a graduate nurse she finds it quite unnecessary to advertise and anyone who is acquainted with the Peterboro Patriotic Fund knows perfectly well that anything of a pleading complaint would be entirely wasted there.

Woman Sues Lawyer After a "Heart Affair"

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Lillian B. Miller, a prepossessing widow, began action in the Supreme Court for $17,477.60 damages from Walter R. Eaton, a lawyer. Mrs. Miller says that after her husband died she was besieged by a corps of suitors, foremost among whom was one she describes as "a man of education, social position and great wealth," who inlicated his ability to "provide her with all that she might require."

Another suitor, says Mrs. Miller, was Mr. Eaton, who is in the legal department of the Custom House. He pleaded with her, she declares, to reject her wealthy admirer and accept him, insisting that in time she would come to care for him. He promised, she says, that if she would permit him to continue his courtship he would introduce her to his social set and settle $100 a month on her for an indefinite period.

This proposition, says the widow, she accepted, but after receiving $70 was forsaken by Mr. Eaton. Since then, alleges Mrs. Miller, he has refused to continue payments, and the amount of her damages is based on the estimated length of her life.

Service in the action was accepted by Mr. Eaton through his counsel, Jerome C. Lewis, of No. 220 Broadway. Mr. Eaton denies Mrs. Miller's allegations.

YOUNG OFFICERS AND THEIR GLOVES

Subject Is Agitating Imagination of Whitehall.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The great question of officers and their gloves continues to excite the imagination of Whitehall. It may be that the A.P. M.'s are supposed to have a too easy time, so the War Office has devised a new regulation about officers' gloves —the colour and texture of these appendages is the subject of the latest edict. Many young officers—Canadian as well as imperial — when on leave in London affect soft washleather gloves of a lemon tint, calculated to arouse the admiratoin of the susceptible fair sex. But the new order bans all gloves for officers except those of the brown regulation pattern.

The wearing of gloves, says the order, will be optional, but in any case they must be "regulations." And that's how we are winning the war.

This is the message General Pershing sent to the American people through Congressman John Tillman, Arkansas, who headed a Congressional delegation that was entertained at the American field headquarters recently. Tillman was to see President Wilson late yesterday to report on his trip.

Cash She Spurned For Love is Won By Bride in Court

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Cupid and fortune travel hand in hand for Mrs. Florence B. Ennis, foster daughter of the late William H. Brown, wealthy merchant and importer. Two years ago she won a husband and was disinherited by Mr. Brown for refusing to give him up. Her marriage, which she kept a secret for eighteen months, aroused the wrath of the merchant when she finally revealed it to him. He declared she had forfeited her right to inherit his wealth, although he had contracted twenty-eight years ago, when she was adopted, to name her his sole heir.

The twofold success came to Mrs. Ennis when Justice Ellanger, in the Supreme Court, set aside a second will made by Mr. Brown, leaving his wealth to his business partner and chari.. His estate, estimated at more than $150,000, again becomes Mrs. Ennis' property, through Justice Erlanger's decision directing Howard Chichester, formerly partner of Mr. Brown and his executor, to deliver to her all the assets in his possession after paying debts incurred by the estate. Mr. Chichester was also ordered to file an accounting with the Surrogate Court.

Back in 1890, when Mrs. Ennis, then seven years old, lived with her father, Robert McDowell Cugle, and her aunt, Mr. Brown and his wife, Mrs. Charlotte Brown, a childless couple, importuned her father to permit them to adopt her. The girl's mother had died two years before, and as the Browns were friends of the family Mr. Cugle consented after they agreed to make her their heir. No formal adoption was entered until 1914 in Philadelphia, however.

Left $100,000 to Her.

Before Mrs. Brown's death in 1915 she made a will leaving her wealth, $100,000, to Florence, and this legacy was collected by the adopted daughter. Mr. Brown also signified similar intentions by giving her joint access to a vault containing $150,000 worth of securities and making a will in her favour.

Justice Erlanger reviewed the events which led to Mrs. Ennis' disinheritance.

"In April, 1915, she was married to John William Ennis, a young man of unexceptional character, without consulting Mr. Brown. She continued to live with her foster father until November, 1916, when she informed him of her marriage.

"Without reason he denounced Ennis and declared he would cut off his daughter and make his will giving all his property to other persons unless she left her husband. He claimed the marriage was in violation of a promise she had made to Mrs. Brown during her lifetime. There is no proof that such a promise was made, and the act of Brown was in violation of the adoption agreement.

"It was unjustified and unwarranted because the plaintiff yielded complete filial obedience, except she justifiably declined to abandon her husband."

Visit to the Grand Fleet That Lie in Wait With Decks Cleared for Action Party of So-Called Canadian Editors, Who Just Recently Returned From Overseas, Witnessed Some Wonderful Sights While Away— Three Tons a Minute.

SHIPS BUILT SINCE THE WAR

The British Government carried out to the letter the terms of its invitation to the Canadian editors to visit Great Britain as their guests, "with the object of your seeing the whole war effort of Great Britain today; you will be shown everything. But the problem for the writer of random notes such as these is to decide how much of all the things he saw he can make public without upsetting the mental equilibrium of the military censor.

Now, we saw the British grand fleet riding at anchor, hundreds of wonderful ships, mile on mile of them. But I cannot say where we saw them. They were not even in the spot where, within a day of our visit we had all expected to find them. And having seen the British grand fleet I am at a loss to know how much or how little I can say about it.

OUT OF THE MIST.

It was a drizzly morning as we motored out to the pier, and it was a dreary prospect as we were hauled one by one aboard an Admiralty tug bobbing up and down on the waves. And yet that drizzly rain seemed to add to the mystery that was to be unfolded. The mystery of the great navy that has kept open the seas of the world. The visibility was so poor that as we steamed along we could never see more than half a dozen ships at a time. First a swarm of destroyers riding in pairs at their buoys. We had already watched these busy little four-funnelled fellows at work protecting shipping and chasing Hun subs on the Atlantic. They were old friends. But what a never-ending number of them there seemed.

Then out of the mist ahead, there loomed on either side great ships. "Queen Elizabeth to starboard; Iron Duke to port," sings out one of our naval guides. How we thrilled at these names, recalling tragedies of the Dardanelles and the glorious deeds of Heligogoland Bight. How we gazed wide eyed at their huge hulls and fearful guns. "Submarines of the K. class moored beside the Elizabeth"—the big and the little. Those great battleships must not stir out of harbour without their escort of small vessels, destroyers and submarines. "Lion to starboard, the Princess Royal to port." Again what an atmosphere of battle on the high seas of Jutland and the Kaiser's fleet fleeing for safety to the harbours from which they have never since come out. So we sail on, warship after warship, four miles of them for miles and miles, the big ships in the two centre lines, the smaller cruisers, supply ships, and subsidiary vessels that make the fleet self contained, on the outside.

At one place in the line the battleships on one side have an entirely different appearance. And yet they are not unfamiliar. They are United States battleships, each with its two tall steel network wireless towers. There are five of them on this particular day, including the Texas, the Wyoming, the Arkansas, and the Pennsylvania. The last time that I saw the Pennsylvania she was on the ways at Newport News, Va., and I walked under her hull. How little we all thought then that in five years she would form part of a joint British-American fleet in the greatest war in history.

NOT CANADA'S GIFT.

"That is my ship, the Malaya," says our naval commander guide. "And over there is our chummy ship, the Texas." The Malaya battleship chosen for us to inspect was a gift to the British government by the Malay States. Next in the line is the battleship Canada—not given to the British government by the Dominion of Canada.

What a towering mass of steel the Malaya seemed as we drew alongside, and were helped aboard. And how full of sensation to be on the decks of a British battleship cleared for action, ready to be called out at any moment for battle of the most awful character. Her captain, a young, clean-shaven man with a clear eye, welcomes us. We shake hands with him and some of his officers, fine looking fellows, kindly chaps, with no "side," and without delay we are divided into small parties for the inspection of the ship.

Of course on a ship of that size her heavy guns have unusual interest. We crawl under the turret and up a short ladder through a square opening in the steel floor. And there in front of us is the breech of the great 15-inch gun that can throw a shell weighing a ton fifteen miles. Over there to the left in the same turret is its mate. Six stalwart A.B.'s in white ducks, stand at attention.

THREE TONS A MINUTE.

The officer explains to us the mechanism of the gun and gives an order to load. There is a clatter down below us somewhere and up shoots a carrier. A lever is pulled and the shell slides opposite the breech. With a touch of another lever it is rammed home. Another slight movement and the cordite propeller charge is in the gun behind the shell. Pressure on an electric button closes the breech. The huge cannon is ready for discharge by the officer in the fire control station somewhere in the ship—on the bridge, up in the crow's nest, or possibly down on a lower deck. Of the outside we could see nothing. One gunner has a spy hole, but it is of little moment whether he sees through it or not. The gun is controlled absolutely from other stations. "How long does it take to fire that gun?" one of us asks. "We'll see," comes the reply. "Reload!" Down goes the empty carrier, there is more clatter of steel below, back shoots the loaded carrier, the shell is pushed home, the charge is inserted, the breech is closed, the men stand to attention—20 seconds!

The officer gives an order and the turret is swung at right angles to her former position. He tells us it is so, but having no vision we are unable to detect the change until we climb outside again to the deck. We try to visualize conditions in that turret during a battle.

"CLEARED FOR ACTION."

All through that great ship we wander. Between decks we find hundreds of sailors, some of them at their duties, others at dinner, others sleeping on the hard wood decks, others enjoying recreation. Everything is as clean as a pin, not an unnecessary thing anywhere, the gangways free, for this ship, remember, is "cleared for action" and men and material wait but the word. Finally, a chat with the officers in one of the ward rooms. What splendid "topnole" fellows all these men, officers and A.B.'s are; how keyed up to their business; how confident in their efficiency and yet so modest.

And so all day we went from ship to ship of varying classes. Some new battle cruisers impressed us. They call them light cruisers but they carry eight of the largest guns. They are light only because they have comparatively little armour. Their business is to rush into action at fearful speed — 30 knots or so, about 35 miles an hour — discharge their ton-weight shells and get out again at the same speed to make room for the more heavily armoured battleships. What vicious looking ships they are, but what a combination of strength and speed.

We explored one of the latest destroyers. We scrambled through a submarine that is the last word in warships of that type. We are pleased to have direct evidence that in the submarine arm the British navy is even better equipped than the German navy, and that if there were German ships on the high seas to be sunk the much-advertised German submarine efficiency would become a joke. While we are on the sub. the commander floods some of the tanks to show the preparation for submerging, but we are denied the experience of a trip below water. We are shown over one of the "mystery" ships about which I suppose I may say nothing. We visit supply ships, mother ships, and about every kind of ship that makes up the British Navy.

JUST ANOTHER LITTLE LOT.

Tired, mentally and physically, we were at the end of the day about to land from the Admiralty tug. We had seen a fleet that surely could blow anything off the face of the earth. We were full of the might of the British Navy, and of pride. We had turned for the last farewell view of the array of warships now standing out clear in the sunlight, when from the commander comes, "Oh, here are some ships coming in from exercises that you have not seen." And then there sailed past majestically five great masses of steel—enormous battle cruisers apparently bigger than any we had seen all day, every one of them carrying eight 15-inch guns. "These are vessels of the R class, the Royal Sovereign, the Royal Oak, and Ramiles, and the Resolution, and not one of them was built at the opening of this war," said the commander. And we were going away impressed with the might of the British Fleet without having looked at some of the newest and biggest ships. We wondered how many more vessels belonging to that grand fleet had been out exercising all day that we had not seen.

By this time probably other gigantic vessels have joined that fleet, for in the Clyde shipyard on another day we saw what seemed like a duplication of the existing British Fleet in course of construction.

The British Grand Fleet lies in wait, the security of civilization and the tomb of Hun ambition.

Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. Football isn't languishing at the University of Nebraska, where football is highly developed—meaning that the Nebraskans know what first class teams are from having had and seen many such. This fall the Cornhuskers have as stiff and ambitious a schedule as elevens usually care to handle. Iowa, Notre Dame, Wet Virginia, Northwestern and Syracuse are on the list. The West Virgina game will be played in Morgantown, being the furthest east the Nebraskans will come.

RETELLING A JOKE

It Seemed Easy, but the Attempt Was a Costly Failure.

SO THE VICTIM TRIED AGAIN.

After He Studied the Thing Over to See Where and How He Had Made His Blunder He Sprang It Anew, Only to Receive a Staggering Jolt.

Richard Smith and John Jones were great friends. They were alike in many respects, but there was this difference between them—that Smith was an ardent churchman and was inclined to take things seriously, while Jones did not go to church very often and was inclined to take everything more lightly.

One day these two friends happened to be strolling along together, when the conversation drifted around to this difference between them. Smith had been telling Jones that his course was all wrong and that he ought to change his views and go to church, giving his reasons therefor. To this Jones listened attentively and seemed much impressed.

"Your argument seems very logical," said Jones when Smith had paused "but," with a twinkle in his eye "there's one point you did not mention which has just occurred to me and on which I should like a little enlightenment."

"What is it?" said Smith. "I'll be very glad to explain it if I can."

"It is this," replied Jones. "How does it happen that a man may be a church member and a heathen at the same time?"

"I don't understand you," said Smith. "How can a man be a church member and a heathen at the same time? You are joking. You know he can't."

"But I say he can. Take yourself, for example. I will emphatically assert that I can prove in eight words that you are a heathen, and, furthermore, I can convince you of it."

"I know you can't do anything of the sort. You are trying to put up a bluff. And to make you back down I will agree to this—if you can prove this in eight words or in eight hundred that I am a heathen to my satisfaction I will give you a pair of gloves, but if you do not prove it you must give me a pair. I hate to take the gloves on such an easy proposition, but it will teach you a lesson."

"All right. It's a go," said Jones.

Smith looked surprised. He really thought that Jones would back down. "Well, how do you intend to prove that I am a heathen?"

"Are you a woman?"

"No."

"You must be a he, then."

Smith looked stupefied for an instant. Then he laughed: "Ha, ha, ha! That was a clever one. You have won the gloves all right and have proved your contention to my satisfaction. But I will get it off on some one else. Ah, there is Roy Green! I will spring it on him."

So they joined Green, who, like Smith, was a churchman. Smith plunged immediately into the subject.

"Jones has just proved to me that a man can be a churchman and yet be a heathen."

"What absurd nonsense!" said Green. "It cannot be proved. Of course a heathen may attend church, but it can't be proved that all churchmen are heathen."

"I thought so a few minutes ago myself," said Smith excitedly. "And so sure am I of this that I will agree to give you a pair of gloves if I cannot prove to your satisfaction in eight words that they are heathen, but if I do you are to give me a pair."

"Done!" said Green. "It will be almost like robbing you. But if you are willing I am."

"All right," said Smith.

"Proceed to prove it," said Green.

"The men aren't women," said Smith.

"No," said Green.

"Then they are hes. Ha, ha!"

"But that does not prove them heathen."

Smith looked dazed. "I guess I made a mistake."

Green chuckled. "I guess you did. Fork over those gloves!"

And Smith had to buy two pairs.

Smith went home chagrined, thinking where he had made his mistake. By and by it came to him. It would be better to prove that he was a heathen as Jones had proved it to him in that way. He would get back those gloves yet!

The next day he met Brown. "Now is my opportunity!" he thought, and accosted Brown.

"Brown," he said, "I heard a clever one the other day, and that is how a man can be a churchman and a heathen at the same time. You know that I am a churchman. But did you know that I can prove that I am a heathen?"

Brown chuckled. "You don't have to prove it to me," said he. "I am perfectly willing to concede it."—Dwight S. Wiseman in Chicago Herald.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

Pains and aches, stiffness of the joints, lumbago and rheumatism tell of poisons left in the blood by sluggishness of the liver and kidneys.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 250,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

DERNBERG MAY ENTER REICHSTAG

Friends in Berlin Want Him to Offer Himself.

HIS PART IN THE WAR

The Man Who Had Charge of the German Propaganda In the United States Failed to Win the Confidence of the War Lords or the Moderates of His Country.

HIS banking and commercial cronies are trying to have Dernburg, the notorious ex-Colonial Secretary and discredited Hun propagandist in the United States, nominated for the Reichstag in the royal borough or "city" of Berlin. The seat became vacant through the recent death of "Papa" Kaempff, the late President of the Reichstag. The borough is the only one of Berlin's six seats not held by the Social Democrats. They have never loved Dernburg, and he would doubtless have a fight on his hands if he contested the seat as a so-called Liberal. The opposition that Dernburg occupies in German is very peculiar. He is one of those neutrals who has enemies on both sides, and he is mistrusted by the warlords and by the pacifists as well. He was chosen to direct the German propaganda in the United States because he was regarded as diplomatic and moderate.

For a while some Americans thought that he was trying to be fair, but when he began to justify the most horrible of German crimes they discovered the wolf in sheep's clothing. Since he returned to his own country plenty of evidence has been found to prove that he was acting with the nest of spies that clustered round the degenerate Bernstorff. After returning to Germany, Dernburg was one of the men who wished to have the Teutons make moderate claims, no annexations or indemnities, and thus secure peace. For that reason the warlords dislike him, while his career in America stamps him in the eyes of the Germans as a moderates as a friend of the existing order of things. His path to the Reichstag would not be an easy one.

NOTHING CAN COMPARE WITH IT

Mr. Fred Adams, New Rose N.S., writes—"I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest satisfaction with this medicine for it never fails to relieve a cough and loosen it up."

SUFFERING SERBIA.

Austrians Betray Christian Nation to the Turks.

The vilest campaign of the whole war is being carried on in Serbia at this moment. All countries that have fallen into the enemy's power have had to face massacre, oppression, deportation; and of all these Serbia has had her share—far more than her share. She has lost outright about twenty-five per cent. of her population since the war began, and, in addition, hundreds of thousands of her people have been carried into bondage—in Austria-Hungary, where they die like flies in pestilential internment camps, starved, half-clad, diseased, and overworked; in Bulgaria and in Asia Minor, where they meet the fate of the Armenians in the deserts. Her little girls, the future mothers of that Serbia for which the Serbs to-day are fighting and dying, have been carried off in thousands by their Bulgarian masters and sold (or given, I know not which) into the Turkish harems of Constantinople. The indecency of this betrayal of Christians by Christians to the Turks needs no comment to emphasize it.

But this is not all. There is a deliberate campaign afoot—has been going on for two years and more—to root out the Serbian nation altogether from the Balkan Peninsula, where it belongs as fully and completely as any nation belongs anywhere. The massacres and deportations, the starvation and misery, have removed a vast number of the people; but you cannot destroy the whole of a nation by such means as these. Turkey has tried it for generations with the Armenians, and there are still thousands of people alive who are passionately and vociferously Armenian. Austria and Bulgaria, which between them control Serbia to-day, have subtler methods. Bulgaria, in every phase of the work, goes much further than Austria (whether because she is more wicked or less afraid I cannot say); but there is such overwhelming evidence of full co-operation between the two that Austria cannot escape her share of the blame, not only for her own inquities, but for Bulgaria's too.

To put the matter in a nutshell, the two allies are seeking to denationalibe all the Serbs that they cannot kill. There are practically no men in the country now except the old and infirm, who can help their own people little more than they can arm the invaders. With all the forces of starvation, suffering, and the constant fear of deportation or death to aid in the work, it should not be difficult to rob a population of hungry and helpless women and children even of their nationality. If there are still Serbs in Serbia—Serbs, as distant from mere nondescript humans—it is because the innate heroism and tenacity of the race support even these lonely women and desolate children.

Austria and Bulgaria are removing from the Serbian territories everything, tangible and intangible, that is specifically Serb. Every museum in the country which contained national treasures has been rifled and its contents scattered through the enemy countries. The ancient monasteries, superb specimens of mediaeval Serbian art and storehouses of sacred relics of the great days of the Serbian Empire, have been sacked and ruined. Even the Turks throughout their long and cruel rule in Serbia respect the monasteries. It remained for Christian Austria and Christian Bulgaria to lay on them the hand of desecration.

Electric Rain-maker.

While we on this side of the world are chiefly interested in the prevention of rainfall, in Australia the reverse holds good, and experiments are being carried out "down under" with an electrical plant for the purpose. The experiments carried out are said to be effective. According to a Sydney newspaper, careful research showed the inventor, Mr. Baisillie, that in fine weather there was a charge of positive electricity in the higher regions of the air, and that when it rained negative electricity predominated. He was studying the effects of mountains on rainfall, and came to the conclusion that hills acted as conductors of the negative electrical energy with which the earth's surface is charged. He argued that all that was necessary therefore to give flat plains the same advantages as regards rainfall as hilly country was the free passage of the negative electricity to the higher regions of the air. His rainmaking plant now consists of a set of two or three kites, which are let up on galvanized flexible wire to an altitude of between four thousand and six thousand feet. The negative current is taken from the earth by means of a terminal, which is well grounded. Of course the first essential in the business is wind. In his tests at Bookaloo and elsewhere Mr. Baisille has found that rain invariably falls after the kites have been in the air for from six to ten hours. — Family Herald.

How to Tell a Gentleman.

At one of the new British Ministries there is an attendant who has been a butler in Grosvenor Square, London, and prides himself upon a certain instinct for distinguishing blue blood from the other varieties. Some ladies of the department were drawing him on the subject.

"Now, there's Mr. Jones," said one. "Surely Mr. Jones is a gentleman."

The ex-butler looked supremely scornful.

"All very well on the surface, Miss," he admitted. "But he actually walked in the other day with tassels on his umbrella."

South American Beans.

The bean crop in Brazil this year will amount to 350,000 tons and experts on a large scale are anticipated. Before the war Brazil was a large importer of this food staple. It is well to note these reversed conditions in many markets.

Farmers with unsold bean crops on their hands will connect this situation with the reduction of the tariff on beans.

NEED GOOD TOWN PLANNING.

Special Provincial Department May Be Instituted to Solve Problem.

TORONTO, Sept. 14. — Thomas Adams, of Ottawa, who is attached to the Dominion Conservation Commission as town planning expert, was in Toronto yesterday.

He is here to confer with C. Bruce Sissons, B.A., G. Frank Beer, and Sir J. S. Willison, chairman of the Ontario Housing Committee, on improvements which he is urging to the Provincial Town Planning Act, so that there may be better facilities for improving housing. He states that good housing will be difficult without first having good town planning, and he says that the Ontario Act is deficient, especially as regards administrative machinery.

Mr. Adams left last night for British Columbia.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Danger Zone

By Florence Lillian Henderson

"You can't see it my way, Nance?"

"I am sorry to say I can't, Levi. I fear I never will."

"Fear! sorry!" scorned Levi Blair, with a dark scowl. "It's well enough to be polite, but I'd speak the truth if I were you. There's someone else, that's what's the trouble, and I'd like to run across him. And I have a dim idea who it is. He's keeping close, and he'd better, for he's wanted, and if he's caught the crowd will surely settle him."

"You have said quite enough," spoke Nance Duryea with flashing eyes. "Don't you dare to come here any more." Slam! And Levi Blair found the closed door between himself and the object of his love. He shook his fist at an imaginary rival and went his way.

The Duryea house was connected by a covered passageway with the little one-story and loft workshop where John Duryea made boxes. He had originally been a cooper, but there was no demand for barrels or kegs in the district since the moonshiners had been driven into exile. At Mayville, twenty miles away, however, a small shoe factory had been started. Labor was cheap and there was a local tannery, and the shoe people had given Duryea a permanent and quite profitable contract to supply them with shipping cases.

The value of the contract and the necessity of business expansion had about influenced Mr. Duryea to remove to Mayville, and Nance hailed the prospect with delight. There was nothing at Crofton to attract a young girl. The men were rough and uncouth, the women led a humdrum, slavelike life and the town and the district was dominated by a fierce, law-defying group, familiarly known as "The Hillers."

They were called that because at the appearance of anyone in collision with the law the moonshiner up among the mountain ranges welcomed the refugee to shelter and protection. The two elements were in friendly communication and stood by each other in a signal way when occasion required.

The advent of a stranger was always hailed with suspicion. The rough element looked for an excise officer or a government spy invading their territory in every newcomer, and when Bert Knowlton, a young lawyer from a distant city appeared in the interest of a client relating to a large tract of coal land, he was advised by the local head of justice as follows:

"Get through your job quick as you can and stay in nights."

"Why? What's the particular danger?" inquired the self-possessed young man rather coolly.

"You're hitting the gang, that's the particular danger," responded the tavern keeper. "As you know, the squatter rights of the tract in litigation rest with the Widener family and they're strong and powerful with the folks hereabouts. They'll block you. I warn you, and if you stick too close and too long, it will be a load of buckshot some dark night."

"I shall try to take care of myself," said Knowlton with his habitual composure, and went on his way, undeterred and unafraid.

By the merest chance once or twice he had met Nance Duryea. The first time was when he overtook her in a sudden rainstorm, and his umbrella, as he escorted her home, afforded her timely shelter. She was duly impressed with this neatly groomed, clear-eyed young man, whose courtesy and attentions made her remember him. There had been a half understanding between them that he was to call upon her the evening when Levi Blair made his plea and threat, but Knowlton did not come, much to the disappointment of Nance.

It was the next afternoon just about dusk when loud voices and a general commotion in front of the house called her to the front door. She was startled to observe her father with set face and wrath-filled eyes confronting half a dozen rough-looking men, one of whom was holding a bloodhound in leash, Levi Blair was the leader.

"Search my house," John Duryea was shouting, and his honest face fairly bristled with indignation and resentment. "Why, I'll wing the first dastard who crosses the threshold."

"That's all right, John Duryea," spoke Blair, "but our dog has traced the blood marks in this direction. We are after that spy, Knowlton, and we're going to get him. He wounded two of our men and he escaped, but with a good dose of buckshot in one leg."

"You coward," cried Nance, stepping into plain view. "How dare you insinuate that Mr. Knowlton came here. My father scarcely knows him by sight and I have not seen him for two days. Double craven you are, to hunt down a stranger who comes here among us on legitimate business."

"You can go your way," spoke Mr. Duryea. "I have always been neutral in your affairs, attending strictly to my own. I'll tell you this, though: some day you'll go too far and the police down at Mayville will come up here and clean you out, root and branch."

Reluctantly and with vengeful ire Levi Blair led his crowd away. Nance went to her own room. She was agitated and in tears. Analyzing intuitively an emotion of rare interest in the hunted man, she dared not confront her father with her tell-tale face.

Nance did not go to bed at her usual hour. She could not sleep thinking of the handsome, manly young fellow who had fallen under the ban of the Hillers. She had watched her father and his hired man piling the packing cases on the great hayrack truck, a full load for Mayville. Then the hired man went to his home nearer the village to get his supper and have a lunch put up to last him through his long trip.

Suddenly Nance bent her ear and listened. A scraping sound echoed from overhead. She thrilled as it was followed by a distinct groan. Her heart stood in her mouth as she took up a lamp and went up the loft stairs. A quick suspicion had come into her mind. It was verified as, seated upon the floor, she made out Knowlton.

"Oh, I am so glad," she cried spontaneously, and then flushed with confusion. "I mean, that you have escaped those cruel men."

Knowlton was pale, one limb was bandaged from the knee down, but he smiled with swift appreciation of the kindliness of that gentle nature.

"I was just trying to find something that would do for a crutch," he explained. "I feared I might compromise your father by remaining here, where I stole in early this morning. I must get to Mayville and get some of the buckshot picked out of my limb. My wounds are not serious, but I cannot stand on the foot unsupported."

"Yes, you must get away, and I must help you," spoke his practical little friend, meditatingly. "Oh, I have it!"

First to see that the bandages were in place, then food and water, and then, Nance supporting him, he was helped down the back stairs to the truck, the cover of a rear-most box removed, and within he ensconced himself.

"You are an angel of mercy," he said feelingly, as he kissed the fair hand that had succored him. Nance set the cover lightly on the box, securing only two nails.

"Inside of three hours you will be within the safety zone," she spoke. "In eight at Mayville. I am so glad!"

She returned to her room, but only to watch and wait until the hired man returned. In the distance she caught the echo of some ribald crew in the town engaged in drunken frolic, and shuddered. She heard the truck wheels grate over the stony road leading to the river ford. Insensibly she drifted into slumber, her head on the window sill, to start up wildly an hour later as the voice of the hired man came up to her from the yard below.

He had two horses, wagonless, and he was shouting excitedly for her father, who came hurrying out to him.

"What's the trouble? Where's the wagon?" cried Duryea sharply.

"Burned up, boxes, truck and all. I met Blair and his crowd, roaring drunk. They tipped over the wagon, set the boxes on fire, and are now dancing about the ashes like fiends and boasting that they have taught you a lesson for siding with that stranger, Knowlton, who escaped them."

With a wail of terror unutterable Nance Duryea sank to the floor senseless. She was like some crushed flower, when she came downstairs the next morning. Amid his troubles her father failed to notice the haunting terror in her face. She was too stricken and anguished to tell him of the fate of the man she had befriended.

"You're to get ready to have the hired man take you to Mayville at once," her father told her. "I shall follow. It's getting too hot to hold us down here."

She was like one in a dreadful trance all the way to Mayville. Her aunt noticed the cloud that hung over frame and spirit like a pall. Nance for several days was confined to her room under the care of a physician. She came downstairs weak and attenuated. The horror of that night at home, it seemed, would never leave her.

She was reclining at an open window, in an invalid chair, one day, when a man, aided by a crutch, passed along the street. It was he!

"Oh, it cannot be!" she cried. "Mr. Knowlton; oh, come into this house."

"Just out of the hospital," Bert Knowlton told Nance, "and bent on going back to Crofton to thank you, if fifty Hillers stood in the way.

"But you were burned up—"

"Quite the reverse. I was nearly drowned," said Knowlton. "The box I was in fell off the load as the wagon crossed the ford. I floated for five miles, managed to get ashore, and—But you have been ill?"

She burst into tears of relief and gladness, and and then her story, and then—

In the tender eyes of the lonely girl beside him, Bert Knowlton read a token of love that assured him that that there was no shadow of another parting.

"Every house well painted is a house protected."

THE paint-protected house is a weather-proof house. The paint-neglected building cannot escape deterioration and decay.

With building materials costing what they do to-day, you simply cannot afford to leave your house without the weather protection which only a good paint ensures.

What is good paint?

We can answer that question—knowing as we do that there is one paint which fully meets every requirement.

Our advice is to use only

B-H "ENGLISH" PAINT 70% Pure White Lead (Brandram's Genuine B.B.) 30% Pure White Zinc 100% Pure Paint the kind guaranteed by its makers to possess as its important basis the above strictly correct formula. That formula, stamped on every can, results in a paint that truly excels in covering capacity—and that stands the severe "climate test" of Canada in a way that spells true economy for all who use it.

How Do Men Break Down?

Be assured that there is no chance of your breaking down—although there will be times when you will try to fool yourself with this idea. This thought of breaking down indeed is one of the illusions of mediocrity. It is the excuse which every lazy man presents to himself. It is moral astigmatism. The great fact is that men do not break down from overwork so much as is commonly supposed. As they go upward in the scale of increased activity, increased responsibility only acts upon them as a natural stimulant and carries them along. If hard work and worry killed men so easily, most of the successful business men of America would be dead already. No! What kills men is due more to what they take into their stomachs rather than what they take into their minds.—Thomas L. Masson, in Physical Culture.

Distinction.

BAY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

What It Once Was and What It May Become in the Future.

Few people in viewing the bay of San Francisco think of it as other than a magnificent landlocked harbor about which has grown the commercial metropolis of the Pacific coast of the United States.

Yet this harbor did not always exist, according to a report on the geology of the region published by the United States geological survey, for at one time through the depression now occupied by the bay ran a great river that drained the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys.

This river probably flowed between the Tiburon peninsula and Angel island and then through the gorge of the Golden Gate, where at present the greatest depth of water is over 400 feet. After the river valley was formed the coast slowly sank, and the ocean entered through the Golden Gate, flooded the valley and formed the present bay.

Thus the valley occupied by the bay is really not so very different from Santa Clara and Santa Rosa valleys, and should the Pacific coast sink a few hundred feet lower those fertile valleys would form great additions to the present bay.

THEY ALL MARRY COUSINS.

Curious Custom of Some Native Tribes of Southern India.

In some parts of southern India the natives have a custom of marriage between cousins which is a result of a strange compromise between two opposite rules of succession. The natives are Dravidians, who have come under Brahmanical influence. Among the Dravidians the mother was the head of the family and all descent and inheritance came through her. The Brahmanical rule of succession is through the father.

According to F. J. Richards, writing in "Man," the matrilinear community, while being unwilling to give up its traditional custom, saw the advantage of insuring to children the benefit of the natural desire of the father—the worker and provider—to provide for his offspring. Therefore they adopted the custom of a man marrying the daughter of his mother's brother, of his father's sister or of his own sister.

In this way a community in which all property is inherited through the mother conforms to the patrilinear system and so keeps the property in the family, this, according to Mr. Richards, being the economical reason for the strange custom.

Report of the Financial District Meeting of Peterboro as Prepared by Rev. Wickett

(By Rev. W. T. Wickett.)

The Financial District Meeting of the Peterboro District was held in the George street church Peterboro, on Sept. 10, 1918.

Rev. W. Higgs, our newly elected chairman, presided in a very able manner and conducted the business of the district with despatch.

Certain financial obligations were considered and adopted. Two missions came under careful review and certain missionary grants recommended in each case.

The matter of co-operation with the Presbyterian Church was carefully considered, and a report will be forwarded to the Presbytery forthwith.

Strong recommendations were presented by the Educational, Social Service, Evangelistic and Missionary Committees, each revealing a careful survey of the work of the District, and setting forth an objective to be obtained by special evangelistic effort, increased liberality to the educational interests, and an increase of at least 25 per cent. in the missionary income, the district adopting the policy of the church regarding missions.

Rev. J. M. Cragg, a returned missionary from Japan, delivered a very instructive and inspiring address on the social, educational and religious developments of the Japanese, and strongly emphasized the fact of the avowed allegiance of the Japanese people to the British Empire and her allies.

Rev. J. H. Arnup, B.A., of Toronto, gave an optimistic address full of facts relative to the work of the missionary society and stated some of the victories and triumphs of Christianity in Foreign Field, and deeply inspired us with a sense of our obligations regarding the evangelization of the world.

Arrangements were made for a missionary campaign commencing on Nov. 24th, when all ministers on the district are expected to exchange pulpits.

The Sunday school work was presented by Rev. W. H. Clarke, who emphasized the departments of Teacher Training, Institute Work and Rally Day, and the necesity for each.

The interests of our Epworth League work are being fostered by a very capable and enthusiastic Executive Committee,, who are planning for a convention in the near future.

The following resolution was moved by Rev. W. L. Wickett and seconded by Mr. R. F. Downey, B. A., and supported by Revs. A. J. Thomas, M.A., S. Crookshanks and R. A. Whattam and unanimously adopted by a standing vote.

"That, whereas, Rev. B. Greatrix at the session of the recent annual conference, preferred to be relieved of the responsibility of the chairmanship of the Peterboro District, we, the members of this District in session assembled, desire to place on record an expression of our appreciation of the faithful, untiring efforts and devoted service he has rendered the church in general, and to this District in particular.

"As a chairman, he has by his sane judgment and wise counsel and devotion to Christ and His kingdom, carefully and successfully guided the affairs of the District so that in some respects it is a banner district in the Bay of Quinte Conference.

'As a preacher and pastor he is thorough in all his work and has a cereful and prayerful oversight over all the interests of his congregation. 'Studying to show himself approved unto God, a workman who needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.'"

As a man he is recognized by both the Laymen and the Ministry as a manly man, who has by his Christian integrity, kindly interests, loving sympathy and helpfulness endeared himself to us all.

Rev. William Higgs in a very approprite address, solicited the co-operation of his brethren in the work in the district, and Rev. M. W. Leyt, B.A., by prayer and benediction, brought a very helpful and inspiring district meeting to a close.

HE TRIED AN EXPERIMENT.

Story of the Rookie Who Fished With a Grenade

At Aix a strange story was told of a soldier who will probably abandon fishing for the rest of his life. 'It seems that the "rookie" had heard say that one could readily catch fish with a hand-grenade, the method being to proceed to the lair of the fish and hurl the hand-grenade into the water. The grenade, exploding, would kill all the fish in the neighbodhood, and one could gather in a plentiful harvest. So our hero set forth one evening and, reaching a not-far-distant canal he threw in his hand-grenade. No doubt it killed a fish or so, but, unfortunately, so intent was he on his job that he had not noticed a barge hard by. The grenade nearly blew the barge and the bargee and his family out of France, and did such mighty damage to boat and boatmen that, although for the moment flight enabled the culprit to escape arrest, it was quite clear that, when discovered as he would inevitably be, he would suffer very severe punishment. It cannot be permitted to blow French bargees up with impunity. A court-martial and death were the least that the wretch expected. That night there was an attack on the sector. Our man went over the top a desperate "rookie." He had determined to die a glorious death rather than submit to a shameful end. The result was that, single-handed, he killed seven Germans and, seizing a machine-gun turned it on the enemy, thereby saving a ticklish situation. Picking up the machine-gun, after it had done sufficient damage, he carried it back toward his own lines, but, en route, he fell into a German trench and upon the head of a German postman. This postman was laden with Christman mail for the regiment or company ousted from the trench; cigars and other delicacies were among his burdens. As the officer who told the story said, the "rookie" murdered the postman and, seizing several bags of mail, bore them, in addition to his machine-gun, back to his own people. His record for the day's work was not only deemed sufficient to condone for his fishing escapade, but, to his astonishment, he received a medal for distinguished conduct in the field. He was decorated! Fisherman's luck with a vengeance!—E. H. Sothern, in Scribner.

The Wrong Time.

A Y.M.C.A. secretary with the expeditionary force in Paris tells this one. Some Canadians attended a theatrical performance the other evening. I speak French pretty well myself, and I went along with one of the boys as an interpreter. After the curtain had gone down on the first act, the principal comedian came out and addressed the audience. When he had finished, my companion broke out in vociferous applause. "Why did you applaud that curtain speech?" I whispered. "I wanted to make some o' these other doughboys think I understood French," he answered. "What did the guy say?" "He announced to the audience," I answered, sadly, "that his part must be taken by an understudy for the rest of the performance, as he had just received word that his mother was dying."

THAT "HUNGER STONE."

Bohemians Have Watched the Omen for Decades.

Two bridges cross the Elbe from Tetschen to Bodenbach—the river is about the width of the Passaic at Passaic Bridge, but not so mild—and when the water is low the chain bridge is crowded all day with superstitious people, mostly women, gazing into the stream below to detect, if possible, a flat, white boulder in midstream. They seek what they don't want to behold, for upon this rock, during the terrible famine of 1785, when half the population of the town died of starvation, an illiterate stone mason carved, in a mixture of Polish and Bohemian, the legend.

"When you see me, then weep."

Although the big flat-top rock is visible nearly every August during the season of drought, the good women of Tetschen are always able to find something to grieve over. They take satisfaction in ascribing their misfortunes to the exposed tablet.

From generation to generation an "Old Mortality" re-cuts the inscription during low water, while a throng of muttering, superstitious women watch him from the Elbe-Quai, or of later years from the railway bridge.

Belief that dire famine or pestilence threatens whenever the boulder is exposed has caused the rock to be regarded as an evil omen throughout Bohemia and the adjacent German kingdom of Saxony. It is universally spoken of as "the hunger stone." Curiously, the Elbe ran flood the entire summer of 1914, and there has not been low water in any season since the war began, until now. This renders the Bohemians more sure of impending calamity.

The proprietor of the Hotel Ulrich will shake his head when asked about "the hunger stone," and assure you that the omen never fails.

Tetschen is only thirty-eight miles southeast of Dresden.

Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary would do a clever thing if he had a dam built somewhere in the mountains, from which he could feed water in very dry seasons and always keep hidden the "hunger rock" at Tetschen. Causes in plenty exist for complaint in Bohemia and through southern Germany; the removal of any one of them would be wise.

A few days ago the Associated Press wires carried briefly the announcement that the famous "hunger stone" in the Elbe river, at Tetschen, Bohemia, is exposed. This stone is covered by water in the ordinary stages of the river, and its exposure is believed to presage a season of drought and consequent famine.

Cuba's Part In the War.

Aside from an addition of sixteen submarine chasers to the Cuban naval strength, the Government of President Mario G. Menocal expects to increase its mobile land forces by more than 25,000 officers and men, according to Brig.-Gen. J. Marti, Secretary of War for Cuba. Gen. Marti remarked that Cuba was in the war to aid with all her power. With the enactment of a compulsory service law, he predicted, every Cuban of military age either would volunteer or be drafted.

"We have established train camps in Cuba, both military and naval," he said, "and through the courtesy of the United States we have placed officers at Key West and Pensacola for instruction. France has detailed two Cuban aviators who have achieved brilliant records in France with the Lafayette Escadrille to act as instructors in our aviational equipment and materials necessary to make this arm of our service effective, and we expect soon to receive the supplies we need from the United States.

"If our forces are needed on the western front, they will go there. It should be distinctly understood that the Cuban Government will withhold nothing that it possesses that can be used to advantage by our Allies in the fight against Prussian militarism."

A Home Wrecked.

"I understand Mrs. Gabson has left Mr. Gabson and gone home to her mother."

"Yes, a sad affair. She charges him with excessive cruelty."

"You surprise me. Gabson doesn't look like a man who would beat his wife."

"Oh, he didn't do anything of that sort. He's got hold of a gas mask somewhere, and when Mrs. Gabson started one of her monologues he put it on."

THE WAR'S FINAL STRATEGY.

Experts See Chances for a Flanking Movement.

If the German people do not revolt, and if Germany does not come forward with offers of surrender, but if the military struggle goes on inexorably to the end, how will the triumph of the Allies be brought about? What will be the final strategy? That is a fascinating question for military expert and civilian alike. Since the war began there have been many plausible speculations. At one time the Entente Allies were to form the anvil on which Germany was to be crushed by the Russian steam hammer. At another time the Dardanelles seemed to offer an opportunity for getting in the final smashing blow. Then came the slogan "Smash Austria and you win the war."

Lately the experts have been rather chary of making prognostications. The success now attending the cause of the Allies, however, has started them going again, and one of the most interesting of the dissertations on the subject has appeared in the New York Globe. In this case the expert holds the end will come on the West front, and that there will be no laborious hammering of the Germans back to the Rhine and beyond it, but that the Allies will turn the Germans out of France and Belgium at one stroke. From Verdun south the French are posted near to German territory, and in Alsace stand upon it. If an army were concentrated on the Lorraine front, both its flanks would be protected as long as Verdun and the heights of the Meuse are held to the north and Belfort and the Vosges Mountains are held in the south.

Such an army, holds this expert, by pushing through south of Metz might flank that great German base and compel not only its abandonment, but compel the immediate evacuation of France and almost all of Belgium. Established in the valley of the Saar, the Allies would be in a position to pass the Rhine, or, proceeding west to recover the Briey iron region and to threaten the great industrial region, which is the heart of Germany. Possession of Berlin, the German political capital, would not necessarily be decisive, but if the great iron working districts of Westphalia were captured Germany would at once be done for. Essen, Elberfeld, Crefeld, Barmen — these and the busy and packed regions about them are the lair of German militarism.

It will be remembered that at the outbreak of the war the first operation of the French staff was to despatch, under Catelnau, an army into German Lorraine, supported by another coming under Pau from Belfort. The offensive came to grief, for unexpectedly Germany attacked France on her unprotected frontier by a passage through Belgium. But it is clear what was the French plan four years ago, and it is reasonable to surmise that with northwestern France protected as it now is from Lille to Soissons and on to the Argonne forest, the French staff is likely to draw its original plan once more from its portfolio. Years have been occupied in perfecting its details.

"If the theory outlined above is sound," says the expert we have quoted, "Marshal Foch, after he has rectified the lines in Flanders, Picardy, and Champagne, and secured manoeuvring space, may be expected to give over efforts to press the Germans back step by step. His genius is not kindly to heavy Ludendorff strategy, and instead of wasting lives in a series of costly attacks, it may be anticipated he will look for a way to do the big job at once. So looking the eye of his understanding doubtless often holds the Lorraine gateway in its grasp. To hasten peace is the universal desire of the Allies, and the place to make a speedy end is not in torn France or in shattered Belgium, but in the Rhine valley. If it is occupied, and Germany should attempt further resistance, it would not take long to reach Berlin and eastern Germany, largely agricultural, and lacking the raw materials, and the heavy factories necessary to supply a modern army."

Flying Through a Storm.

The apparent ease with which our airmen manoeuvre nowadays in a gale of wind must have impressed very many people besides myself. But I had not realized just what the modern airplane is capable of withstanding until I heard of the actual experience of a French scouting-plane. The machine was caught in a violent storm, and appears to have dropped into a sort of aerial whirlpool. The observer's machine-gun "turret" was twisted and bent; the machine-guns themselves, together with the observer's seat, were wrenched out of their places; the fusilage was partly stripped of its fabric; and the observer himself was injured. Notwithstanding all this, the airplane returned safely to its base, having accomplished its mission.

Field Mice Destruction.

Experiments have been made in the destruction of field mice. It is first necessary to find out whether the holes are inhabited, and they are then closed by trampling upon them, and three or four days later the opened holes are treated with various substances. A good method is to introduce a handful of grass covered with phosphorous paste or arsenical compound. Morphine pills are good only in dry weather. Fumigation by sulphurous gas from burning sulphur is to be recommended, and liquid sulphurous acid can also be used with success. Phosphide of zinc is sometimes employed.

Another Way.

"People kick and also make a great many bad jokes about hash," said the landlady to the cook.

"Yes."

"So don't work the scraps into hash. Make 'em into salad."—Kansas City Journal.

Animals That Never Drink.

It would seem that water is so indispensable to life that no animals could exist without drinking. Nevertheless, Dr. Blanford asserts that the antelopes which live in the sand desert between the salt lake Chilka and the sea never drink. This has been doubted by physiologists, who deny that existence is possible in such conditions, but confirmatory evidence is adduced by Dr. Drake-Brockman. It appears that since 1910 a troup of gazelles have lived in the small island Saadud-Din on the side of Somaliland, where there is no source of water, and where the annual rainfall is less than three inches, so that these gazelles cannot obtain water except after very rare showers. The vegetation is very poor, and they cannot supplement the lack of water during the dry season by consuming roots and bulbous plants rich in liquid.—East Suffolk Gazette.

New Peace Proposal Regarded as the Most Desperate Peace Offensive Ever Attempted Germany Offers Separate Peace to Belgium and Austria Invites Allies to Round Table Conference —That Allies Will Spurn Austria's Offer Appears Certain To-day.

OFFICIAL OPINION

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The United States Government will not accept the Austrian proposal for a get-together peace conference, it was officially stated to-day.

Will Spurn Offer.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—That the United States will spurn Austria's "get together for peace" proposal appeared certain to-day.

This course will be followed by the Entente Governments too, according to all information received here.

Taken as the most desperate peace offensive the Boche ever attempted, the latest drive is regarded also as the most insiduous. It is considered as intended to lull the war spirit and war work of associated nations. Particularly America, and it is held to be another of a series of efforts to bolster up the Austro-German home spirit. When it is rejected, Germany and Austria will again set up the cry of "self-defence," and as war comes closer to the German border this cry may serve to stimulate a weared force of Central Allies, according to belief here.

However, in answering the communication—for it is assumed an answer will be made—this Government will take care to see that the edge is removed from this home stimulation scheme as far as possible.

A Delicate Question.

Special to the Examiner:

(By Ed. L. Keen—United Press).

LONDON, Sept. 16.—There will be no hasty Allied reply to the Austrian peace proposals.

According to best available information, the reply will commonly affect the most intimate exchange of opinions between the Entente and American Governments. Meanwhile, all official opinion will be withheld pending this decision, which diplomats declare will be the "most delicate" question of policy since the declaration of war.

Peace By Negotiation.

Unofficial opinion is divided, the "Stalwarts" believing the proposal merely a super-peace offensive, the acceptance of which would be liable to trap the Allies into compromise terms. On the other hand, those who favour "peace by negotiation" assert that acceptance would not be dangerous, and would be the best way of learning whether it will be necessary to carry on the war much longer or if the Allied terms can be obtained in the near future. Both factions agree that the Allied decision depends upon which opinion the Governments consider the correct one.

Terms to Belgium.

At the same time the Allied diplomats must take cognizance of Germany's offer of a separate peace to Belgium. Germany put forward the following terms: Belgium to remain neutral until the end of the war, reconstruction of Belgium and political and economical independence for her after the war, re-establishment of German-Belgian commercial treaties existing before the war, Belgium to aid by moral suasion in the restoration of German colonies, the Flemish question to be considered, and the Flemish minority which aided the German invaders to go unpunished.

Press Comment.

With the exception of the Daily News, the London morning newspapers are unanimous of the opinion that Austria's proposal for a conference to discuss peace is camouflage. The real reason for which is that Hindenburg wants time to reorganize his shattered forces. Another theory advanced is that the peoples of the Central Empires really want peace, but their Governments seek to sway them and embarrass the Entente, thus dodging the howls of the masses against continuing the war.

What benefit Austria might have obtained from the proposal under consideration has been lessened by the publication of Germany's effort at a separate peace with Belgium, which is self-evident of the Huns' bad fate.

Watters Denied Credentials

President of Trades and Labour Council in Unique Position at Congress.

Special to the Examiner:

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 16.—President J. C. Watters, of the Trades and Labour Council of Canada, to-day occupied the most unique position of any such official in the history of the body, having been denied credentials by the Cement Finishers' Union of Ottawa, his own local. If he does not receive them before the election he will not be able to stand again for the office. For some time he has been a member of the Montreal local, but several months ago he transferred to Ottawa. At its most recent meeting this branch voted against issuing him credentials. It is said that the Executive of the local offered him papers, but he is understood to have declared that he preferred to give the whole Union a chance to rescind its action at a meeting to be held on Tuesday night. No such situation has ever arisen before in this organization.

Big Attendance.

Canadian Press:

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was opened this morning in the Columbus Hall, with four hundred and eighteen delegates from all parts of the Dominion in attendance. According to a statement of B. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer of Congress, the principal subject to be discussed will be the question of coolie labour in Canada, a question which Mr. Draper says is causing real concern to labour men, particularly in the Maritime Provinces. Resolutions will also be submitted asking for the repeal of the Military Service Act and urging the federation of all unions in Canada as a means of meeting capitalism. Another question around which much interest centres is the fight for the presidency. The strongest opponent of J. C. Watters, the present holder of that office, is James Simpson, who is supported by the Toronto Typographical Union. Mr. Simpson is at present in New Zealand, where he is conducting a temperance campaign.

The Germans Are Digging In Aerial Fighting is Intense on the American Front.

(United Press—Frank J. Taylor.)

With the Americans on the Metz Front, September 16th. — Both the Americans and the French are reported to be straightening out and co-ordinating their positions across the late St. Mihiel salient. Our patrols now control the area between the American lines and the Hindenburg reserve defences.

The Germans are digging in far to the rear, rather than attempting to dispute the Americans effectively.

The aerial fighting is intense. Our battle planes are forcing the Boches to remain more than five kilometres (about three miles) behind the positions which otherwise would constitute their forward line. With reconnaissance and bombing planes and artillery, liason units operate practically undisturbed despite numerous air fights. The number of German air men have suddenly increased tremendously but is till insufficient to meet the British, French and the American forces. Tons of bombs are being dropped on German military positions far in the rear.

There was stiff infantry fighting during the night along the Mosell, where the Americans stormed the fortified quarries.

3rd Prize (1 ton of coal)—No. 1068.

S. Whatley, Secretary.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE AERIAL FLIGHT AT THE EXHIBITION

Mr. Fred Roy Secured a Number of Excellent Pictures.

As per usual when anything unusual is being pulled off, Mr. Fred Roy was the Fair grounds Saturday afternoon and get a wonderful set of photographs of Miss Katharine Stinson making her flight. They show every detail of the machine, even when it was in mid-air, travelling over a mile a minute. The exposures were made in 1-1000th part of a second. One picture in particular shows a beautiful burst of sunshine on President Denne's face, the first officially recorded after "the clouds rolled by."

FRANK JENNE Says:

This changeable September weather demands clothing of a warmer type than that we have been wearing during the summer, yet not so heavy as that we shall need during frosty October and November. A really serviceable garment for this weather is one of our tweed finished raincoats. Equally useful as a light overcoat for chilly days or as a "rain-proof" coat on wet days. "Come to me."

RELIEF FUND INCOMPLETE

Committee for Sailors' Aid Report $7,413.60. But Three Teams Are Yet to Hear From.

$10,000 THE GOAL

Five teams in the Sailors' relief campaign report the present total of their subscriptions at $5,413.60, which, with the Council's grant of $2,000, brings the amount to $7,413.60. The local committee had set $10,000 as their goal, but it is hardly expected that the remaining teams will bring the desired difference. However, the workers intend to put forth every effort to secure their allotment. The teams reporting have turned in the following amounts:

W. H. Dunsford	$2,452.75
J. W. Worth	1,113.75
J. W. Fraser	1,302.60
W. Stocker	443.60
B. D. Hall	100.90
	$5,413.60
City's grant	2,000.00
Present total	$7,413.60

The committee also realized $51.25 on Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds from the sale of the vegetables in the group shown by the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association. The auctioneers were Mr. J. F. Thornton and Mr. W. J. Hancock, and the treasurers were Mr. W. H. Dunsford and Mr. W. R. Morris.

Peterboro Casualties

Major Arthur Wood Was Killed in Action. Also Corporal Milton Griffin.

Dr. Edward Wood, Charlotte street, Vice-President of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, received the sad word yesterday that his brother, Major Arthur Victor Wood, M.C., had been killed in action on September 1st.

The news will be a shock to a very large circle of friends. Major Wood was born in this city 31 years ago, and was brought up here, receiving his earlier education in the local public schools and at the Collegiate Institute. Afterwards he attended Queen's University, Kingston, and Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and then entered upon the practice of law in Vancouver, B.C., going west seven years ago.

He enlisted with the 72nd Battalion at Vancouver, in the early part of the war, and went overseas with that unit, being promoted from Lieutenant to Captain before going to France early in 1916. At the battle of Vimy Ridge, Major Wood won the Military Cross for his gallantry in action, and he also won promotion to the rank of Major, and was several times mentioned in despatches as the result of his good work at the front. When last heard of he was acting in command of his battalion in the absence of his Colonel.

Major Wood was a well known athlete. He played Rugby for Queen's University and with the Argonauts in Toronto, and also for the Peterboro O.R.F.U. team, while he rowed for Argonauts and later for the Vancouver Rowing Club.

Major Wood was a son of the late R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney for Peterboro County. He is survived by his mother, who has been in England for some time, but is returning to Canada, and two brothers, Dr. Edward Wood of Peterboro, who has returned after several years' service with the Royal Army Medical Corps, and Mr. Herbert Wood, of Vancouver.

PTE. THOMAS H. GOODWIN.

Mrs. H. Goodwin, 159 Hart avenue, received word this afternoon that her son, Pte. Thomas H. Goodwin, was killed in action on Sept. 2. Pte. Goodwin enlisted with the 93rd Battalion when only 17 years of age. He was subsequently transferred to the 2nd Canadians. He has four sisters, one in Victoria, B. C., and three residing in the city.

LANCE-CORP. MILTON GRIFFIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Griffin, 420 London street, received word on Saturday that their son, Lance-Corporal Milton Griffin, had been killed in action on Aug. 27th.

Lance-Corporal Griffin enlisted in February, 1916, as a bugler in the 93rd Battalion, when only 15 years of age. Because of his age he was discharged and arrived home on July 12. Not being content, he again enlisted, this time with the 4th C. M. R. of Hamilton, and left for overseas on Feb. 24, 1917. Before leaving Canada he was promoted to Lance-Corporal, and after landing in England was promoted to Corporal. After training over a year in England he crossed to France but reverted to private in order to get across. In six weeks time he was again promoted Lance-Corporal.

Lance-Corporal Griffin leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing father and mother, also four sisters, Misses Ollie, Florence, Greta and Mary; and one brother, Earle. He was a grandson of Mr. George Stenton, caretaker of the Post Office.

CHANGE IN COMMISSION

The One Man Is, However, Not Yet in Sight.

ROSS RESIGNS

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.—That a one man pension commission will take the place of the former three-man commission, which is now in an almost complete state of disbandment on account of the resignation of Commander J. K. L. Ross, the chairman, and of Lt.-Col. Labbatt, is the general opinion here. It is felt that a one-man commission with an efficient staff such as at present, will be in all particulars most satisfactory. The one man is, however, not yet in sight.

Former Members of 93rd Are Reported Hit

Names of former members of the 93rd Battalion continue to appear in the Canadian casualty lists. Pte. J. Phillips, a member of the Apsley platoon, is reported wounded, and Pte. V. Stewart, of Peterborough, is also in the wounded list. Pte. W. Quinn, of Lakefield, who enlisted here in the band of the 93rd, and afterwards transferred to the signallers, is officially reported wounded.

MISS KATHRINE STINSON'S IMPRESSIONS OF CITY.

Peterboro is "All Right" Declared the Flier.

Miss Kathrine Stinson, whose exhibition of flying was one of the principal attractions at the Fair, this morning said that Peterboro is "all right". It's as pretty a town as I've ever seen, she said, "but you on the level don't appreciate the beauty of the winding river. I wish every one could see the town from the clouds—especially where the dam near the Quaker Oats comes down. There I slowed my plane to get a good view, I was so struck by the beauty!" Miss Stinson says that she makes her departure with regret and hopes to see the town soon again "also those nice aviation officers I met" she concluded. She said that while she has flown six years, she has never had a fall, but has had to make landings on account of her plane going wrong. She has only been lost once and that for a few minutes.

Pte. Thomas James McCarthy.

Mr. John McCarthy, 274 Woodbine Avenue, has been officially notified that his son, Pte. Thomas James McCarthy, was admitted, on September 4th, to a hospital in France, suffering from a gunshot wound in the chest.

Enemy is Making Desperate Efforts to Hold the Line

Australian Troops Found a House Which is Believed to Have Been Prepared for the Kaiser's Field Headquarters—Building Was Hidden in a Small Forest.

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 16.—There are no signs that the St. Mihiel-Verdun attacks have resulted in the withdrawal of German reserves from this front. On the contrary the enemy is striving his hardest to prevent a retrogression of the whole line threatening Cambrai.

Strikingly indicating the short time which has elapsed between the Kaiser's high hopes and his present precarious positions, Australian troops advancing toward St. Quentin found a house which is believed to have been prepared for the Emperor's field headquarters a few miles from the Somme. It was a large hut, hidden in a small forest. It could be approached only along a narrow lane lined by evergreen trees, which had been recently planted. The house was exceptionally substantial. The main room was finished with an attractive, unstained inlaid paneling. The windows were doubled-glassed and screened. Altogether it was a pleasant refuge. There were no signs that it had ever been tenanted. A letter found on a German prisoner written from Kolkalk declared that "the combat is resulting in the passing of men as fit for active service who really are not fit for night patrol work at home."

British Advance For a Depth of Two Miles

Hospital Raiding Parties Driven Off —New Posts Established on the Flanders Front.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(Official). — British troops last night advanced their line north of the Arras-Cambrai road, establishing posts in the vicinity of Sauchy-Couchy and Oppy. On the Flanders front the British pushed ahead in successful operation on the Comines-Ypres Canal front for a depth of two miles.

The statement reads:

"During the night we carried out successful minor operations astride the Ypres-Comines Canal on a front of over two miles, capturing a number of prisoners and machine guns. On the battle front encounters with hostile raiding parties and patrols have taken place in the neighbourhood of Moeuvres and near Gavrelle. We have established new posts in the vicinity of Sauchy-Couchy and Oppy."

SUNDAY MOTORISTS BOOED BY CROWD OF BOYS LAST NIGHT

Many a "little-ole-bus" must have been restive yesterday, pawing in smelly garages instead of rolling along the country roads on the usual Sunday ramble. It was the first gasoline-less day, and the motorist's conscience probably welcomed the day as a reinforcement to a conscience that must have been hard-pressed had the day been one of those hazy amber days of fall, soft and soothing upon business nerves that have been frayed by the week's business.

It must be said that many of the citizens observed the request of the government with all the spirit that characterizes the class that scorns compulsion. It was voluntary whether they ignored the appeal to conserve gasoline, of which the market reports show a steadily decreasing visible supply. And these citizens revealed themselves to be made of the stuff of volunteers; the rest invite conscription—in this case a drastic rationing or other restriction, which unfortunately would be applied not only to them but also to those who co-operate willingly with the governments' tentative effort. Several instances are known, doubtless illustrating a general experience, in which elderly persons were prevented from attending church by the motor ban. There were numerous others, perhaps, forgetting the official request, who "took the air" as usual. In the evening those who rolled up George street were greeted with a warm reception by a crowd of boys between Murray and Brock streets. The booing was heard blocks away, and every car got it. There was no discrimination, and perhaps some of the cars had a good excuse for their consumption of 'gas." The youths even had a long tape across the street with which they tried to hold up some of the cars, but the barrier was too weak. A rope would have made the effort interesting, perhaps destructive, and might have led to trouble that would have been even more unseemly for a Sunday night.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.— The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

"While Austria was preparing her note to belligerent nations proposing that they meet in formal discussion of peace terms in a neutral country, Germany was making ready to make another offer of peace separately to Belgium. If official sentiment is reflected by newspaper comments at the Entente capitals, the efforts of the Central Powers to reach peace by negotiations are bound to fail. At Washington it is pointed out that the United States will not enter on any peace tentatives that can at best bring about only a temporary respite from hostilities and will leave Germany and Austria free to break the peace of the world at any future date. Even in the German press there seems to be little hope that the Allies will agree to meet representatives of the Central Powers. Along the battle line the British are creeping nearer the Hindenburg line in Picardy. Maissemy, north-west of St. Quentin, has been taken. The German retirement in the Flanders area is still going on, the British pressing closely on the heels of the enemy.

THE SUCCESS OF THE EXHIBITION.

The people of Peterborough can ...ok forward to a bigger and better ...xhibition next year, happy in the ...ealization that they, by their patron...ge and loyal support during the Ex...ibition just closed, have made it pos...ible for the directors to plan fur...her improvements for the Fair of ...919. Nothing has been made satis...ying to the Exhibition Board than the ...anner in which the people of Peter...orough and the surrounding district ...rned out on Thursday and Friday, ...n spite of weather conditions that ...ere bad enough, it would seem to ...ave kept nearly everybody at home, ...he crowd that was on hand on Sat...ay was a record-breaker, and as a ...esult, the Exhibition has been a ...nancial success in spite of the two ...et days, but what is most pleasing ...o those at the head of the Exhibi...on affairs is the moral and financial ...uppott that the big turnout on Fri...ay afternoon afforded.

The people have shown that they ...re loyally interested in the Peter...orough Exhibition. There was a ...ime, not long ago, when any mention ...f the Fair would be greeted with ...he remark, "It's the same old ...hing." The complete change that ...as been made in the appearance of ...he grounds since last year, the many ...ittle conveniences that have been add...d, the magnificent showing in all ...nes of live stock and agricultural ...roducts, the excellence of the special ...xhibits, the unusually large display ...f tractors and other farm machin...ry, the substitution of orderly sys...em in handling motor cars in the ...rounds for the hit-or-miss methods ...f other years, the manner in which ...he crowds were dealt with at the ...ates and the general merit of the ...hole Exhibition were all signs of ...he new order of things.

All credit is due to the Exhibition ...irectors and all who have assisted ...hem. The Board deserve the thanks ...f the citizens, who will generally re...oice that many months of work have ...een crowned with success. The ...irectors showed their gameness on ...riday when, in the face of what ...eemed at that time an evitable de...icit, they signed a new contract with ...he aviatrix, Miss Stinson, in order ...hat she might fly on Saturday after...oon for the benefit of those who had ...een disappointed on Thursday. This ...eavy additional expense was under...aken for the benefit of the public, al...hough there was no obligation on ...he directors to arrange a flight for ...aturday, in view of the fact that Miss ...tinson had not been advertised to fly ...n that date.

NO STOP NOW.

There are many citizens who have ...ot yet contribuated to the Navy ...eague campaign—although it is a ...leasing duty to be able to announce ...hat the total of the Peterborough ...und is growing steadily and that ...here is still hope of the city reach...g the desired objective. It is dis...ppointing that there should be any ...esitation on the part of anyone to ...ive to such a deserving object as ...he Navy League Fund which is de...igned to look after the dependents of ...he brave merchant sailors who have ...nhesitatingly gone forth to die in ...rder that our soldiers might be fed ...nd that the food stuffs and munitions ...hat they will necessarily continue ...ess in the war should not be lacking. ...The calls upon public generosity are many, but people must realize that they will necessarily continue as long as the war lasts and that any sacrifices that are made by the people at home into insignificance when compared with those of the sailors, flying men and soldiers who are fighting our battles overseas.

The following article from the Toronto Sunday World is timely:

Patriotic campaigns under various forms are now so frequent that many people seem to think they are justified in expressing disapproval. This class of the community are they who when a tagger approaches them either scowl hard, set their faces in a stony stare or honour the pleader with a "piece of their mind" on the fortunes which they know are being made by taggers and those of their ilk.

In view of conditions as they really are, this attitude is most regrettable. Without exception as far as known to a large experience in such matters the women and girls who take part in "tags" do so at great personal inconvenience, and at a certain amount of personal outlay, carefare and luncheon being the least that may be set down as the amount of their expenditure.

The men who have taken up the work of the patriotic and other large business or other interests, whose time is as valuable as the proverbial "gold," yet they, too, have not been immune from suspicions, insinuations and rude rebuffs.

At this stage in the career of the war it is time that all this were changed. After four years of strife it is quite evident that a certain portion of the people are still dead to the situation. They fail to realize that as long as the war lasts the "tag" and the campaign must keep pace that expenses are going on daily even though for a time there may a let up in actual fighting, and that it is the duty of every citizen to give and continue his giving until the war closes, and the baleful results have at least begun to be a thing of the past.

The people who retail their givings of two years ago as excuse for present refusal are people without thought. What would be the use of partial victory if we did not follow it up? The men in the trenches must continue until the final goal is won. Men and women at home must back up the men with all that they need both for fighting and as much comfort as their condition will permit. No matter what we give we have infinitely the easier part. It is our part to give and to give continuously until every call has been satisfied.

THE RUSSIAN CHAOS.

Nothing is more striking in the dispatches of the correspondents who have escaped from Russian to Sweden than their bewilderment at discovering that the rest of the world is not in the same condition as Russia—that of anarchy. In Russia, they tell us, the Bolsheviki and Germans, who control the news completely, have imbued the whole population with that belief. Russia believes that Finland and Sweden are plunged in anarchy, that the United States is struggling against a vast rising of the Indians, that there are great revolutions in China, Japan, and Siam, and that the whole world is starving to death and on the verge of a proletarian revolution

At the Germans and Bolsheviki control all the news going into Russia, so they control all the news going out of it, and the rest of the world knows only what these two allies choose to tell us; so say the correspondents. Russia is telegraphically isolated from the world. Germany excepted, so that what we get is Bolshevist news censored by Germany. This does not apply to the Archangel Government or to Siberia.

The correspondent of The World is astonished at the calmness with which he finds the other nations taking the condition of affairs in Russia, a calmness occasioned by the fact that we have not been allowed to get any idea of what is really going on there. If what he says is true, it is absurd to compare these conditions to the French Reign of Terror, which was a mild and well-regulated system of government by comparison. The Bolsheviki, he declares, have ceased to kill counter-revolutionists alone and are now "beginning their avowed purpose to kill the educated." This new phase of the Russian terror, he says, "is just beginning, and thousands of the best Russian brains and "the only ones capable of reconstructing the country are going to "be killed in the following weeks." Speaking of the hundreds of "hostages" put to death by Zinovieff, the President of the Petrograd Soviet, he says that "they were not killed by "Zinovieff because they were active "counter-revolutionists, but because "they were educated men, engaged in "some business or profession." The Bolsheviki, he declares, "are engaged "in the purpose of extermination of "all possible enemies, however pass"ive," and the basis on which arrests are made is "according to social "standing rather than political activ"ity." At least 90 per cent. of the Russian people, he tells us, are opposed to the rule of the Bolsheviki, who are able to retain their power only by terror.

Doubtless, too, the conviction that they are in a miserable minority and cannot hold their position long if unsupported has hurried them into a closer alliance with the German autocracy than they had at first intended. They may hope for German soldiers to keep the Russian people down when their own Falstaffian army of Red Guards proves unequal to the task. The offensive and defensive alliance they have concluded with Potsdam, whereby they agree to do Germany's work in fighting against the Allies in the north, is entirely one-sided. The Bolsheviki promise everything and Germany virtually nothing, the only engagement made by Germany being that she will promise not to let Finland loose at Russia's throat as long as Russia keeps on fighting against the Allies. The Bolsheviki promise not only to fight against us, but to pay Germany 6,000,000,000 marks.

The condition of Russia, then, is that of cannibalism within and slavery to a foreign power without. It is hardly necessary to say that this will not last. The first sign of hope is the evident firmness with which the Russian people and the Allies are consolidating the Government of Northern Russia. The dispatch sent from Archangel to Ambassador Bakhmetef by Nicholas Tchaikovsky, the President of that Government, is both an announcement of a successful revolution and an invitation to the rest of Russia to use it as a nucleus. This is a people's government, and Tschaikovsky declares that its final aim is "a single "government for the whole of Russia, "based on universal suffrage." Meanwhile, despite the Bolshevist fabrications about Czechoslovak defeats, such as that peculiarly impudent one about the capture of Samara, communication with Western Siberia has been opened, and it may soon be possible to do for Asiatic Russia what has been done for North Russia.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The weather man certainly did his bit yesterday to help along the motorless Sunday.

The Sammies are starting out to wind up the watch on the Rhine.

14,000,000 more of those American soldiers "who can't get overseas," but who nevertheless continue to make their appearance at the battle front have registered. The cheers that greeted the announcement in Berlin can be imagined.

The Germans say they evacuated the St. Mihiel salient without interference by the enemy. Somebody must have forgotten to notify the 14,000 Huns that were captured that they were supposed to retreat "according to plan."

Miss Stinson did not soar any higher than the spirits of the Exhibition directors when they awakened on Saturday morning to find the sun shining.

If Berlin they call the Americans the Barnums. Well the Sammies showed them all right last week.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Money Fights.

A supporter of the Allies — what does the honourable title mean? It means, assuredly, one who is careful in the use of money so that, where possible, something is saved to go into the balance against the Hun. Money fights.—Montreal Star.

Thrift a Watchword.

During the month of August Canada spent nearly $20,000,000 for war purposes. Such an expenditure should suggest to every Canadian the need of putting forth every possible effort to bring the war to a victorious close. We should "carry on" more vigorously than ever. Thrift and econony should be the watchwords of every Canadian.—Kingston Whig.

Needs Real Money.

The Kansas editors who want higher rates for subscriptions and advertising are entitled to it. There was a time when the editor could take garden truck, poultry and bacon for subscriptions and get along all right, but now he must pay the difference in cash between a bushel of potatoes and a year's subscription, and the cash for the "boot" must be forthcoming.—The Kansas City Star.

A Big Force for Russia.

We are not engaged in Russia in promoting peace propaganda. It is war we are helping to carry on, and war needs men and equipment and leadership and force and energy if it is to serve any useful purpose. It would be wise, therefore, for the Administration to overrule General March, follow the views of the military councils of the Allies and make more adequate provision for effective intervention in Russia. If we fail for lack of men, the Administration may not excuse itself by saying, "It was only such a little thing we were doing that its failure is not important." A thing worth doing at all is worth doing well.—Ex-President W. H. Taft, in Philadelphia Ledger.

The Day of the Older Man.

This is the day of the elder men. Mr. Balfour celebrated his 70th birthday the other day by an important speech on Serbia, while at the same hour, Lord Morley, who is on the threshold of 80, was making a speech on India. Like the Rev. Frederick Hastings who preached his 80th birthday sermon on Sunday, Mr. Balfour defied all the doleful medical prophecies of his youth. One recalls, too, how, when 30 years ago, he took up the Irish Secretaryship, his friends bluntly declared that the work would be fatal. — London Daily Chronicle.

D'Artagnan is Not Dead—

One of the soldiers' letters that we've seen comes from a soldier of the sea. Here's a paragraph:

"Believe me, dear, the French think there is nobody like a marine. All the French officers salute a marine, from a private up. All they look for is the marine insignia, and up goes their hand in their odd salute. From here to the front the marine brings from the Frenchman's lips the cry of 'Vive vila Americaine!' "

D'Artagnan is not dead — though he doesn't speak perfect French any more. Apparently he served a while on our Mexican border, and now he's joined the U.S. marines!—Collier's Weekly.

OSHAWA RANG IN PICKED TEAM AND BEAT RIVERSIDES BY 6 TO 4

Game Will, However, be Thrown Out by the O.A.B.A., as Six of the Players Used by Oshawa Had No Certificates—McComb Held Riverside Hitters in Check.

AN EXCITING GAME

The Riverside ball team journeyed to Oshawa on Saturday with the intention of playing the Chevrolet team in the second game of the O.A.B.A. series. That they did not carry out their intentions was not their own fault, because Oshawa instead of trotting out the Chevrolet team which played here last week, introduced a brand new picked team, no fewer than six of whom had no certificates. The Automobile town aggregation won the game by 6 to 4, but under the circumstances the Ontario Baseball Association will undoubtedly suspend the Chevrolets, and Riversides will go into the finals.

Two outfielders and the catcher were the only members of the team which performed here last Tuesday to be seen in the return game. An entire new infield was on the job and McComb, a new pitcher, and the latter turned the trick for them. He had the Riversides baffled all through, retiring fourteen of them by the strike-out route, and he only allowed five hits.

The Riversides were ragged in their playing. While they did not make many errors, they were guilty of a number of dumb plays that were even more costly than fielding errors. At that they turned in some good fielding, tearing off three fast double plays, two of them nipping off a runner at the plate.

McComb was a mystery to them. Twice in the latter stages of the game the tying runs were on the bases and a hit would have sewed up the game, but it was not forthcoming. Lebarr and Sheehy both fanned with two on in the seventh, and in the ninth with men on second and third and two out Manager Soloman tried to pull the game out of the fire by batting for Lebarr, but his best was a grounder to the pitcher.

The fielding feature was contributed by Tharan, left fielder for the Oshawa team, who made a beautiful catch of Cherrett's torrid liner. It was the hardest hit ball of the game and looked good for three bases at least, but Tharan timed the ball perfectly and made a sensational catch. From the spectators' standpoint the game was a splendid one, with plenty of action. There were four double plays, four men put out at home plate, and something doing all the way.

First Innings.

Riversides—Sheehy drew a pass, and McCarney beat out a bunt, Cherrett sacrificed, and Sheehy, by fast baserunning, scored from second on the play. Guerin fanned. Phelan hit to McComb, but was safe when Wilson dropped the pitcher's throw, McCarney scoring. Phelan died stealing, Gay to Rowden. Two runs, one hit, one error.

Oshawa—Brockman singled through short and Rowden hit a safe one down the third base line. Legg fanned, but Tharan slammed a single to centre McCarney relayed the ball to Sheehy who threw high to the plate, Brockman and Rowden scoring, and Tharan going to third. Fair struck out and Kirn threw Gay out at first. Two runs, three hits, one error.

Second Innings.

Riversides—Kirn walked, the fourth ball hitting him. Murray fanned and Kirn was out at second, Gay to Rowden, on his attempt to steal on the third strike. Murty flied to Fair. No runs, hits or errors.

Oshawa—McComb was hit Wilson beat out a bunt down the third base line. Blanchard hit to Sheehy, forcing McComb at third. Brockman rolled to Sheehy, whose throw to third nailed Wilson and Murray doubled Blanchard at second on a quick throw to Cherrett. No runs one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

Riversides — Lebarr fanned, Fair made a nice catch of Sheehy's high foul back of third. McCarney singled to right, stole second, and scored when Fair missed Cherrett's fly. Guerin rolled to McComb. One run, one hit, one error.

Oshawa—Rowden went to second on Kirn's wide throw to first. Legg cracked one through the box that looked like a hit, but Cherrett went over behind second and nailed the ball in time to throw out the hitter. Rowden scored on the play. Tharan flied out to Lebarr. Fair singled to right, but Gay ended the innings with a fly to Sheehy. One run, one hit, one error.

Fourth Innings.

Riversides—Phelan, Kirn and Murray all fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Oshawa—McComb beat out a roller to third and stole second. Wilson fanned, Blanchard's liunt rolled safe. Brockman hit to Cherrett, who threw home, too late to catch McComb and everybody was safe. On a double steal, Brockman reached second and Blanchard scored. Rowden was safe on Sheehy's fumble. Legg rolled to Kirn and Murty made a nice catch of Tharan's fly to left. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Fifth Innings.

Riversides — Rowden made a fine stop of Murty's smash and got the runner at first. Lebarr and Sheehy fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Oshawa—Fair grounded to Sheehy. Gay doubled along the left field foul line. McComb singled. Gay scored on Wilson's intended sacrifice bunt, beating the throw home. Blanchard flied to McCarney and McComb was doubled at the plate, McCarney to Cherrett to Phelan, when he tried to score on the play. One run, two hits, no errors.

Sixth Innings.

Riversides — McCarney doubled to right. Cherrett hit to left for two bases, McCarney stopping at third. The squeeze play failed when Phelan missed a bunt, and McCarney was caught between third and home and tagged out. Phelan rolled to Fair, who fumbled, and then threw badly to first, Cherrett scoring from second on the play. Phelan was caught off first, McComb to Wilson. One run, two hits, one error.

Oshawa—Brockman singled through third. Rowden was safe on a fielder's choice. Legg fanned. Tharan flied to Lebarr and Brockman was doubled at the plate, Lebarr to Cherrett to Phelan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Riversides — Kirn was safe when Fair's throw pulled Wilson off the bag. Murray sacrificed, McComb to Wilson. Murty hit to Legg, who tried for Kirn at third, but the runner was safe. Murty stole second. Lebarr fanned. Sheehy also missed three. No runs or hits, one error.

Oshawa—Murray grabbed Fair's foul fly. Gay singled to left and stole second. McComb fanned. Wilson singled to left and Murty's neat throw nailed Gay at the plate. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Riversides—McCarney rolled to the pitcher. Tharan made a sensational catch of Cherrett's line drive to deep left. Guerin struck out. No runs, hits or errors.

Oshawa—Blanchard flied to Sheehy. Brockman singled through short and stole second. Rowden fanned. Sheehy threw Legg out at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Innings.

Riversides—Phelan struck out and Kirn followed suit. Murray rolled to Wilson, who fumbled. Rowden recovered the ball and threw wild to first, the runner going to second. Murty singled to left, sending Murray to third. Murty stole second. With the two runs needed to tie the score on the bases, Solomon batted for Lebarr and rolled to McComb and the game was over. No runs, one hit, one error.

Particulars Concerning Death of Private Norman Hartshorn

Peterboro Soldier Was Attending to a Wounded Soldier When He Was Hit in the Head by a Machine Gun Bullet.

Mrs. A. Hartshorn, 512 Stewart St., has received a letter of condolence from Lieutenant J. Hubert Eastwood, son of Major (Dr.) Eastwood, Brock Street, on the death of her son, Pte. Norman Hartshorn, who was killed in action on August 8th. Pte. Hartshorn enlisted in Peterborough with the 93rd Battalion.

France.

Dear Mrs. Hartshorn,—No doubt by this time you have received the sad news of Norman's death, but I am writing to give you what few particulars I can and to assure you how much we, who knew him so well, feel the loss of so fine and brave a comrade.

He was, as no doubt you know, a stretcher-bearer in our company, No. 1, and I used to see a great deal of him. The night before the attack I had a long talk with him, and he was very keen and cheerful, and spoke enthusiastically of the "show" and the souvenirs he would get. During the "show" I didn't see much of him, as his platoon was in the second wave. But his comrades tell me he was everywhere tending the wounded throughout the advance.

About 10 a.m., when we were within about 500 yards of our objective, we came under very heavy machine gun-fire from 8 guns at very close range. Norman was dressing Pte. Burney, one of the men, and, of course, more or less exposed in so doing, and he was fatally hit in the head by machine gun bullets.

After the attack we brought his body with the rest of his comrades who had fallen to the Orchard, and though it was imposible to bring back the company for the burial service, as we attacked again, the Padre held service about 10.30 p.m. that evening over our dead, at which I was present, and after the service we laid them to rest under one of the trees which earlier in the day had sheltered the fatal machine guns.

The graves are being cared for by our surplus officers and men, and at a later date I will give you the definite location when the censorship will be lessened.

Captain Smith, his company commander, has his personal effects, which will reach you in due course.

Please accept the most sincere sympathy of us all in your days of sorrow. He was very popular, and I have heard very numerous mention of Norman's splendid work on the 8th and during his entire time in France.

Very sincerely yours,

J. Hubert Eastwood.

Prospects for Rugby League In Peterboro

There is every prospect of a revival in Rugby in Peterborough this fall, and a number of enthusiasts are endeavouring to form a junior city league with an age limit of seventeen or eighteen years. Already four teams are talked of with the veteran rughyists Jack Deannard and Bill Meagher looking after the Sacred Heart team, and Paddy Gorman in charge of a C.G.E. outfit. The Y.M.C.A. and Collegiate are said to be ready to fall in line, and there may possibly be other teams available. A meeting for organization purposes will be held this week, and all interested are asked to watch for announcements of the date.

NEW FACTORY FOR PORT HOPE

Port Hopers will be pleased to learn that through the efforts of Alderman Long and the members of the Manufacturers' Committee, this town is soon to have another manufacturing industry, known as the Allied Drug Company. Mr. W. J. Fielding, President of the Company, and Mr P. L. Brown, Secretary-Treasurer, were in town to-day and purchased the St. Lawrence block from W. H. Bradburn, of Peterborough. Next week the work of remodelling the building will be commenced and the factory will be in operation just as soon as the machinery can be installed.—Port Hope Guide.

THE ZERO HOUR

The following letter from Pet. D. H. Anderson is addressed to his sister, Miss Kate Anderson, 588 Aylmer street:

"You will all be tickled to hear of our success in pushing the Germans back. I hope you have not been worrying about my welfare? I dropped you a "Whizz-Bang" on the second day of the offensive to let you know that I was thus far safe. Hope you received it. I certainly had the time of my life and I am going to make an attempt at describing as best I can, my experience during the battle, but I will have to hurry as darkness is fast stealing over us, and it is rather distracting, trying to write when the band is playing such lovely music over in the wood, so please excuse this poor attempt.

"I want to tell you something Kitten. Now don't shudder, but I just wiped part of that score away for Stuart's death. Thursday the 8th of August is one day in my life and in the lives of those who took part and came through the "Great Battle" which will not soon be forgotten!! Zero hour was at 4.20 a.m. We had stolen up from Support Line under cover of darkness and had dropped into a big shell hole about an hour before the time to "go over" came around. It was a very foggy morning, with a chill in the air which together with the pending excitement, caused one to shiver and shake. Everyone busied himself at something to help pass the sixty minutes of nervous tension, performing unnecessary alterations to his equipment, pulling back the bolt of his rifle to see that his magazine and chamber were charged, or polished the already shining steel of his bayonet. The eerie screech of some night hawk and the croak of the frogs from the swale below, broke with a rasping harshness upon our already tensioned nerves. All kinds of pictures and panoramas of one's life floats before his mind's eye at such a moment. Then the muffled purring of a motor broke on our ears and presently the dark massive outline of a tank came into full view against the sun-tinged sky-line. Up went the signal flare—the Signal to Advance. How many anxious eyes were glued upon that signal ball of fire, which conveyed such a volume of meaning!!! The Signal had been given and it was our turn to act, and the success of the "Advance" depended on the actions of each individual. Every man was ready and as we scrambled over the "Top" the Artillery opened fire as one mighty gun, mingled with the clatter of many guns, with such a deafening crash, that the earth tumbled under our feet, and the flash from those hundreds of guns lit up the sky, as brightly as day. As we reached the level ground we extended, making one continuous line of determination, with flashing bayonets and set teeth. On we pressed behind our barrage, through wheat fields, over trenches and through broken barbed wire entanglements, droppings flat on the ground, when we crept up too close to our barrage, then on again.

A BAYONET CHARGE.

"It would be impossible to describe my feeling or train of thought at the time. I know I was a little nervous for a minute or two, but it soon left me as I have become accustomed to the terrific noise, the fumes of the bursting shells and the cruel sound of the shrapnel and machine gun bullets. I could not resist even at such a moment, looking around me at my comrades, pressing steadily onward, bayonets fixed, teeth set and the light of battle in their eyes It was very bracing and re-assuring just to know that they were by my side—fellows whom I had known for months-brothers-in-arms. Presently a "rat-tat-tat" was quite audible over the din of the bursting shell and shouts and the snap and whine of the enemy machine gun bullets sped unhealthily close to us. It was soon located however and the crew of that gun were not taken prisoners either!! It was a ghastly sight to me, those ashen-faced, prone figures stretched on the ground against the brick wall, in the grey dawn. Every little while someone would utter an exclamation of mingled surprise and pain and quietly settle down to the ground close by. Yet it never occurred to me that a like fate may overtake me at any moment. On we swept through the friendly fog, over shell hole and trench, through wheatfield and wood, until we reached his front line. Here some of them gave resistance, but the majority had their hands extended in the air, frantically yelling "Kamarad! Kamarad!" It was rather disappointing though, to have to take them after all our good resolutions before the attack, but we did. Some were mere boys and were very frightened when they learned that we were Canadians and wanted to know if it were true that we cut their ears off and put out their eyes. When we assured them that we were not savages and did nothing of the sort, they were very happy and wanted to shake hands with everybody The remainder were old men and we found out they were stretcher bearers. On through the first village we swept and out into the plain beyond. Here the Hun offered practically no resistance and we soon reached the second town and our obective where it developed into a house-to-house fight. It was a beastly job hunting them out of cellars and attics, like rats, bombing, shooting, bayonetting, until we had cleared the place up and sent what prisoners we had taken, to the rear. Through it all I had but one thought, the remembrance of the latest Hun atrocities, the sinking of the Hospital ship with its nurses and hospital staff and the bombing of our Red Cross Stations behind the lines and the brutality shown to the women of France and Belgium.

"STAND TO."

When we had reached our objective, we all flopped down and had a well earned rest and something to eat. That night we slept in a wheat field outside the wrecked village, securing sheets of corrogiated iron, old doors, etc., and constructed "obivouacs". All was sweet oblivion until four o'clock the next morning when we were aroused for something to eat and a "Stand to."

Next morning at nine we moved off in pursuit of the retreating Hun, who had been kept steadily on the run, after the infantry had left off, by the dashing cavalry. It certainly was a grand sight to see those thousands upon thousands of prancing, eager horses and their equally eager riders, prance around for a bit and then gallop away with one big shout amidst a cloud of dust and the clatter of myriads of hoofs on the hard road, and gradually grew faint, as they race into the distance. We were all very tired and sore after the previous day's exertion and excitement, yet all were quite happy that we had helped to deal a blow to such a relentless foe. The road on either side, as we passed along, was littered with enemy dead, also horses. It was pitiful to gaze on those lifeless carcasses, that such a short time ago had been such noble animals, doing their master's bidding, and it filled me with sorrow that even the lesser creatures should have to suffer, through man's calamity. On we marched, past captured guns, munitions, supplies, charred dumps, etc., until we finally began receiving a few reminders, by the way of an occasional shell that we were drawing very close to the enemy. We marched and halted all that day and night, eating such things as we had been able to carry in our packs, and in the early morning about four o'clock we received rush orders to take up our position in readiness to "go over the top" again. We were all nearly exhausted by this time, so that we could hardly stand, yet not one complained. We had been stopping and starting continually and each time some of the boys would try to boil some water for tea. When we received our final orders and were moving off somebody remarked: "Well, I nearly got some tea made that time."

"A Whizz-bang."

As we approached our positions we were greeted with a perfect hail of swishing bullets and bursting shells. It was almost a miracle that we were not all wiped out, but we received very few casualties at this point. Soon we flopped down, taking whatever cover we could find and improved it by digging deeper with our entrenching tools, then waited. My but it seemed ages before that signal came, and I am ashamed to admit, but I dozed off and was only awakened in the nick of time to scramble over the top with the rest of the boys, by a bullet hitting the earth directly in front of me, and throwing the dirt in my face. At the same time some instinct told me to "duck" real low, and as I obeyed that impulse a "whizz-bang" (not like the kind I send home) screeched over my body, so close that I could feel the heat of it, like a hot iron being drawn the full length of my body ,and burst about ten feet behind me, smothering me with dirt and smoke. "Up and at 'em, boys," our officer shouted, and away we shot. I say shot, for it best describes the eagerness and speed displayed in covering the distance between our position and his line. We did not hear those death-dealing missiles hissing passing our ears now, we only knew we would soon be there, and then—

I remember reflecting in that terrible moment and whispering to myself: "Well, Howard, old boy, you have been very lucky and are sticking it well, if only you hadn't those four hundred rounds of machine gun ammunition to carry, you would give those other chaps a run for that line." Soon it loomed in front, massed with moving, excited grey objects, which seemed to sway, then scramble over the top on the opposite side. Already our boys had entered the trench on our right and left flanks and bloodcurdling shrieks rent the air, mingled with the whining cry of Kamerad! Kamerad! Mercy! I am not going to relate here whether they received it or not. A few made a brave stand of it and it was gratifying to know that you were at least up against one brave enemy.

Soon Over.

It was soon all over and then we flopped anywhere in the trench and in any position, as the fresh troops rushed among the bloody dead, and I allowed it all to flash again before my mind—was I "mad," absolutely nutty and out of my mind as they say, chap is in such a moment? No! I had had my head and remembered it all quite clearly. I was very glad of this.

I must have slept for many hours, for when I came to consciousness again, and to realize that I was very stiff and sore, my chum was bending over me with an anxious look on his face. I realized what that look meant and I soon put his mind at ease, telling him that I was O.K. So he led the way to a dug-out he had located and we both rolled up in our rubber sheets and knew no more until we were rudely wakened about two in the morning from an unfinished sleep, and told to "Stand to" as a counter attack was expected on the part of Fritz. This would have been pleasant enough at a time when were not so tired, but it could not be helped, so we scrambled out, rubbed a little of the sleep from our eyes and got into our equipment, got our rifles and scrambled up to the trench above. We were soon relieved however, by the news that we could "stand down." We had many naps that day, beaten the bursting of shells. We remained there all that night and all the next day and really enjoyed ourselves a little, as we had the opportunity of seeing the "Frenchies" go over on our right and give Fritz another rude jolt to the rear. They simply scrambled out over the top with full pack, rifle and sauntered along as though they were out on a route march. No apparent enthusiasm or excitement— "as cool as cucumbers," as one chap remarked. But it seems that Fritz had a wholesome dislike for them from the past experience even though they did not appear at all formidable to us, for he put up a little resistance, and then hastily retired another couple of kilos.

Sees Red.

That night we were relieved and hiked out for a rest and believe me we have taken full advantage of it. We went to work and dug a hole long enough and wide enough for us to stretch ourselves out in it, then procured several sheets of corrguated iron to form a covering to keep out the weather. Then rolled ourselves up in our rubber sheets and simply slept. I do not know whether it was the sleep of the just or not. But I do know that it was sweet and refreshing if only we could have had a bath for we were all of us "crummie as coons."

When there is real fighting to be done the dangers of the after re-action are intensified. Those who have never gone through a bayonet charge and sit at home and read of glorious bayonet charges do not realize what it means to the man behind the bayonet. They do not realize the repugnance or the first thrust, a repugnance which has got to be overcome. They do not realize the change that comes over a man when his bayonet is wet with the blood of his first enemy. He sees red, the primitive blood lust kept under all his life by the laws and principles of peaceful society surges through his being, transforming him with the desire to "kill! kill!! kill!!!" Ask anyone who has been through it if this is not true and that the letting loose of a primitive lust is not going to be without its effect on a man's character. At the same time of course not all of us become animals out here. There are other influences at work, the caring for the wounded, burying the mutilated dead, cause one to hate, and to value ten times more the ways of peace. Many are saved from sinking in the scale by love of home which is able to breach the gulf which separates them from their beloved, letters, sometimes love letters, the pouring out of one's heart in sympathetic ears.

Well, Kitten, I must close now and get my kit packed as we are on the march all night. I hope you do not get a headache rearing this terrible scribble. But I promised you a letter of this kind, and this is about the best I can do just now, so will say "Cheerio" for this time and will write soon again.

HOWARD.

Anniversary of Temperance Act

Sir William Haerst Says Greater Health Results.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Sept. 16.— Speaking at noon to-day Sir William Hearst made the following comment on the anniversary of the Ontario Temperance Act coming into force:

"Each year the Act is in force only makes it more apparent that the legislation has been and is in the best interests of the whole province. The benefits accruing therefrom are fundamental and will be realized in the ever greater degree on the conclusion of the war.

"It has resulted in less crime, greater health, more prosperity and larger war effort than would have been possible under the conditions that prevailed before the Act was enacted."

Exhibition Attendance Was 599 Less Than 1917, But the Gate Receipts $1,638.25 More Total Attendance Was 16,552 This Year and 17,151 Last Year—Gate and Grandstand Totals $6,001.15 as Compared With $4,362.90 in 1917.

FINE SHOW OF HORSES

Saturday afternoon's crowd of 6,500 brought this year's total attendance for the three days of the Fair up to 16,552 as compared with 17,151 last year, a decrease of 599 admissions: but the receipts at the gates and grandstand placed this year's total just $1,638.25 over last year. Mr. Felix Brownscombe's tabulated statement is as follows:

Pair Admissions.

	1918	1917
Thursday	929	859
Friday	9123	11280
Saturday	6500	5029
	16552	17151

1918 decrease—599.

Receipts.

The following are the combined receipts from the gates and grandstand for all three days:

1918 ..... $6,001.15
1917 ..... $4,362.90

1918 increase $1,638.25

Last year the grandstand yielded a total of $630.75, and this year's sum was $811.75.

Directors Satisfied.

The directors of the Exhibition are more than satisfied with the tangible results of this year's Fair. The weather for nearly a week has been cloudy and wet, and for Saturday's sunshine Mr. R. Denne and his assistants are deeply grateful. Had all three days been bright and inviting it is believed that the aggregate attendance for the three days would have reached 20,000. The directors have simply deferred their hopes for another year, with their "morale" unwavering.

The improved weather on Saturday afternoon touched everybody with the holiday mood. Everything, even the inanimate grounds, seemed to fit into the spirit of the Fair with the bright touches that lend colour and light to the background. The grandstand performance pleased the crowd. Every feature drew applause, and Raffles' straightjacket specialties proved an interesting attraction. The race track had dried and was fairly fast. Miss Stinson's airplane flight gave the attractions the desired fillip, and the judging of the carriage and saddle horses was an extra that held the attention of a large section of the crowd long after the regular programme was concluded.

Splendid Horses.

Mr. W. J. Maher, of Cobourg, was the judge of the light horses. He is regarded as one of the most competent judges in the province in this class. At that he had no easy task in deciding the merits of the splendid drivers that were paraded before him on Saturday afternoon, and even the exhibitors who failed to get a ribbon were by no means outclassed. The evidence of the farmers' interest in good carriage horses is most gratifying in these days of automobiles. Their appreciation of gasoline as a facility in farm work has not displaced their love of equine qualities. In brief the large entry list indicated that the motor car's supremacy will be restricted, and that well-bred spirited horses will retain their universal appeal.

DISTINCTIVE EXHIBITS

DISTINCTIVE EXHIBITS

Continuing our description of the special exhibits in the main building and on the Fair Grounds, the following were specially worthy of notice:—

GILLESPIE GARAGE — MAXWELL EXHIBIT

In a large tent next the Woman's Building, the Gillespie Garage showed a Maxwell Touring Car of the latest make and a Maxwell Truck, designed "for every business." The Maxwell Touring car has had a rapid and steady growth. Four years ago the Maxwell was first offered to the public. Improvements have been added but the fundamental idea was always kept in view, viz: to produce the best, lightest, most efficient and enonomical car possible to manufacture.

Regardless of the fact that to-day the car is larger, roomier, handsomer than ever before—that it is now equipped with every convenience in use on the highest priced cars, such as electric starter and lights, one man top, demontable wheels, longer wheel base, longer springs and numerous other refinements—the weight has been held down and tests show that greater efficiency and economy of operation has been obtained than ever before.

The interest taken in the Maxwell at the Fair exhibit this year was greater than ever; and according to those in charge of the exhibit, the showing resulted in good business.

"I like the Maxwell truck as well as any of them, and, for my business, a little better." That was the nature of some of the expressions regarding the Maxwell truck shown at this exhibit "Our truck is in use nearly a year and has stood up fine under some rough work," and is a big asset in our business," said a Peterboro Milk Products representative.

The Maxwell is an enclosed worm drive truck, and is noted for its remarkable economy in gasoline and oil During the cold winter and the deep snow the truck just enjoys its work. Its stocky frame of hydraulic pressed steel, extra heavy wheels, solid tires and all other structural features make the Maxwell proof against the heavy loads and constant jarring of any strenuous class of service. With a well-designed body, the truck may be used for any business to equal advantage.

The Maxwell truck does not plod. It carires its load with a facility that puts snap and ginger into delivery work, enlarging the day's operations and minimizing the running time.

Its lightness guarantees low operating cost, and its sturdiness insures aganst those vexations and costly periods of inactivity resulting from petty or even serious breakage.

R. G. STURGEON & CO.'S INTERESTING DISPLAY

This was one of the most attractive and instructive exhibits made in the Main Building and was a busy centre for visitors during the Fair.

The firm of R. G. Sturgeon and Co. Charlotte street make a speciality of new combined types of stoves and ranges, somewhat distinctive from the general run. For instance, the "Pennant, Jr." is a two-piece range, adapted for either gas, coal or wood. Reference might be made to the statement which the firm gave out, to show the suitability of this two-piece range, that already three carloads of them have been sold in Peterborough and district without a single complaint. Many use the gas for a short service rather than open up a coal fire. One oven is used for all fuels, and it is a guaranteed baker with either fuel. A special feature of this stove is that it answers both summer and winter purposes; in summer it gives you lesser heat by the use of gas, in the winter it is a coal or wood range. The use of the Pennant Jr. means kitchen economy and convenience.

Only one stove in your kitchen for winter or summer and always ready for coal and gas or both simultaneously. Simplicity itself in changing from one fuel to the other you may run both coal and gas at the same time if you want to. Many use the gas for any short service rather than open up the coal fire. It certainly is one of the handiest and most complete ranges made.

The "Quick Meal" oil stoves and ovens shown attracted hundreds of visitors eager to learn how to simplify and economize fuel. With these stoves coal oil or gasoline may be burned. Half a cent an hour is the approximate cost to operate these stoves and the heat furnished will warm a room comfortably.

R. G. Sturgeon Co. are well known throughout this district as experts in heating and sanitation, having carried out important contracts for plumbing sewage disposal and water systems with entire satisfaction. The firm has devoted considerable attention to putting in simple and efficient systems for heating, water supply and sewage disposal in rural homes, schools and factories. The Sturgeon Kawartha Water System was fully demonstrated at the Fair to appreciative country visitors. This system gives to rural homes the same water pressure as enjoyed in cities or towns. It is operated by either gasoline, hand or electric power, and its installation will give suburban residences and farms the convenience of bathrooms, shower baths, power, electric light, and fire protection. In conjunction with this water pressure R. G. Sturgeon & Co.'s sedimentation tank has been found a convenient and sanitary means of disposal of all sewage in a simple and affective manner.

R. G. Sturgeon & Co.'s place of business is 202 Charlotte street Peterborough, where all inquiries will receive prompt attention.

BRANTFORD RED BIRD BICYCLE.

Mr. T. H. Ashby, of 214 Stewart Street, who is the agent for the Brantford Red Bird Bicycle, made an interesting exhibit of 1918 models. The display embraced samples of 24 and 22-inch frames, a motor bike and a lady's wheel. Bicycle accessories, tires, saddles, etc., were also shown, the whole exhibit being a creditable exhibition in the bicycle line, and was the only one at the Fair.

The Red Bird has been well represented in Peterborough, and the number of machines sold here this season alone is said to be up in the three figures. Mr. Ashby's methods of selling wheels have proved highly satisfactory, and, being a proficient repairer of bikes, his shop has become a favourite with riders.

It is claimed that the first bicycles to be built in commercial quantities in Canada were "Brantford Red Birds." From the very beginning these machines have been what they are to-day — leaders amongst high-grade bicycles. Year by year, the "Red Bird" has been perfected and improved. It is a much better machine to-day at $45 and $50 than when the price was about $100.

CHEVROLET GRAND EXHIBIT FROM THE MANNING GARAGE.

The big display of Chevrolet motor cars made by the Manning Garage, Water street, was the largest motor exhibit on the grounds. It embraced:—

One Chevrolet "Baby Grand" Touring Car, Model F.A.

One "New Series, Four-Ninety" Roadster.

And three "New Series," Five-Passenger "Four-Ninety" Touring Cars.

The two energetic partners of this busy garage, Messers. Manning and Howson, were present and had their hands full satisfying all the enquiries that were "fired at them" during the Fair.

Chevrolet Motor Cars are a big factor to-day in the nation's business. Over twenty-five thousand "Four-Ninety" Models alone perform their daily mission of crowding more time, more energy and more activity into the busy day. So popular has the Chevrolet become that for months demand has outpaced supply. The new series "Four-Ninety" more than maintains the high reputation of its predecessor.

The "Baby Grand" Model F. A. has won a nation-wide reputation for power, efficiency and comfort, and bids fair to become one of Canada's most popular models.

The "Royal Mail" two-passenger roadster is sure to interest those who are in the market for a car like this. Mechanically and artistically, the "Royal Mail" model measures true to Chevrolet standards. The body is streamlike in design, well-proportioned, and finished with the care usually given costlier machines.

In spending over a thousand dollars for an article, you are entitled to receive something that will last—endure. The use of Chrome Vanadium steel at every point that must stand great wear, where unusual strength is necessary, or where the strain is severe, is sufficient evidence that the Chevrolet make certain, long life to Chevrolet cars. And this same care has been exercised in the selection of all other material used.

THE EMPIRE MECHANICAL MILKER.

It is safe to say that no other exhibit on the grounds received greater attention from the farmers than the display made by Mr. F. J. Doughty, the enterprising representative for the Empire Mechanical Milker. The "Empire" is known over America and Canada as the great and most efficient milker. In the county of Peterborough many of our prominent farmers and dairymen have already installed these milkers, with the best of results. It is needless to say, that since being installed, the greatest interest has been taken in the milker, because of the remarkable success which has been accorded it, and the number of dairymen who have decided to have it introduced as soon as possible.

Along with the mechanical milker there was shown a lighting plant for farm requirements and rural homes. This outfit has a 80 ampire battery, with a 30 volts system, to furnish light, without charging the batteries, for ten nights, supplying four lights at one time for three hours each night; or, with batteries charged and generator running, will handle 46 to 50 lights 5 to 8 hours. This plant can be operated with an Empire gasoline engine, at the same time running the mechanical milking machine. The lighting outfit exhibited was sold to one of Canada's most successful Holstein breeders, Mr. J. A. Brethren, of Norwood. The milkers exhibited were also sold to prominent farmers in the county.

The exhibit was under the personal charge of Mr. F. J. Doughty, 649 George Street, this city, who is a constant exhibitor at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. He was assisted by Mr. R. H. Heard, of this city; Mr. Thos. E. Whibbs, of Lakefield; Mr. Cottingham, of Omemee, and Mr. Jos. O'Reilly, of Douro.

PETER HAMILTON COY'S FARM IMPLEMENTS.

A goodly portion of the grounds were occupied with a strong exhibit of modern farm implements by the old established Peterborough firm of Peter Hamilton Co'y. The display received large attention from farmers, who took real pleasure in inspecting the various points of interest in the display.

The principal interest was bestowed on a new cultivator, with a horse lift, and fore carriage, and carried 17 spring teeth. Another cultivator was shown without the horse lift, which carried 13 stiff teeth. Each machine had its special class of admirers, and some good prospects were obtained for early sales this fall.

The Hamilton Co. also exhibited their "Tornado" Blower, a turnip pulper, a straw cutter, and their "Comet" scuffler. Needless to say that these machines have met with ready sales all over this county, as well as among many well cultivated farms throughout Ontario.

A number of different types of Hamilton farm ploughs were also shown. These ploughs were similar in construction to hundreds of others from the Hamilton foundry that have found their way on to the best farms of this county. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. Nicholls, one of the oldest of the company's salesmen.

THE STORY OF A HAWAIIAN BUTTERFLY

Company of 20--NATIVE UKELELE PLAYERS, SINGERS and DANCERS

THE GRENFELL MISSION FUND

The secretary-treasurer of the Peterborough Branch of the Grenfell Mission has received the following letter from the nurse-in-charge of Harrington Hospital. Those who helped to send clothing and bedding to the needy ones along the coast, will feel glad to know that the bales reached their destination in good time for distributions:

Harrington, Canadian Labrador,
August 1st, 1918.

Mr Dear Mrs. Wood,—I wonder if you could have known when you were getting your bales and boxes ready for Harrington, just how badly I need baby clothes. On opening a bale I found the most wonderful little things, and I am so grateful. The poor mothers grow nearly distracted, so many mouths to fill and so many little tots to clothe, that "Little Mr. Newcomer" is sometimes not welcomed very warmly, on account of additional expense, but through the generosity of our kind Canadian helpers, this problem has been solved. The other clothing and quilts are most acceptable, and have been nearly all disposed of. I sent over eighty bundles down the coast since the goods arrived, and have about forty more ready. After navigation closes it is impossible to get it sent, so I work steadily all summer, and the coast missionary reports any really destitute families I may have overlooked, so none are neglected. We have had a very cold summer, too cold to sit around without a fire.

We are hoping to have a visit from Dr. Grenfell next week.

With best wishes to my diligent co-workers, I am, gratefully yours, (Miss) M. A. Murray, R.N.

Three Arrests at the Exhibition

One Being Held on a Nominal Charge of Vagrancy.

Three light fingered artists were garnered in by the police on Saturday evening and in this morning's police court were nominally charged with vagrancy. The men, Frank Miller, Louis B. Connor and Malley Hay, are Americans, who, the police allege, have been "working" all the Canadian fall fairs. Mr. V. J. McElderry appeared for the accused. Mr. McElderry asked for bail.

"$5,000 each," murmured the Chief.

"$2,000 each will be enough,' said the Crown Attorney.

"I should think that $500 would be enough," said Mr. McElderry.

The prisoners were unable to pay $2,000 and will spend the next eight days at Castle Nesbitt until their record is looked up. When apprehended they had very little money in their possession.

A Sunday Drunk.

"I was a little beet drunk," said an Italian when asked if he was guilty. He and another Italian were found drunk on Sunday evening and spent last night behind the bars.

Each Italian was fined $10 and costs, in all $14.10, after paying 40c each for their breakfast.

FOUNDER OF EMPIRE DAY MOVEMENT.

Mrs. Clementina Fessenden, Noted for Patriotic Zeal, Passes Away.

Hamilton, Ont., September 16. — Mrs. Clementina Fessenden, founder of Empire Day, a patriotic movement that became nation wide, died at her home here on Saturday, following a severe illness lasting for three weeks. The deceased was over seventy years of age.

Mrs. Fessenden, who was noted for her patriotic zeal and service to the State, was the widow of Rev. E. J. Fessenden, rector of St. John's Anglican church, Ancaster; the sister of Judge Treholm, of Montreal, and mother of Professor R. A. Fessenden, of Boston, who gained much distinction for his discoveries in wireless telegraphy. Two other sons, K. H. of Kamloops, B.C., and C. R. T. Fessenden of this city, survive.

Mrs. Fessenden witnessed the crowning of her patriotic endeavors when the Imperial government established Empire Day, which is now celebrated throughout the British Empire.

Mrs. Fesenden was a sister-in-law of Mr. Cortez Fessenden, late of the Collegiate staff, of this city.

WINTER MILK PRICES WILL BE UNCHANGED

There will be no increase in the price of milk this winter, Mr. G. A. Gillespie said this morning, speaking for the Peterborough Creamery. From the present prospects the supply should be well maintained. The autumn flow of milk has been well maintained, and there is every probability that the price to the consumer will remain at the summer figures. Citizens will find some comfort in this announcement that at least one staple food will rest awhile in the price column, instead of soaring beyond reach.

New Barracks at Barriefield

New Structure Will Cost Over $300,000.

Baith and McMahon, of Ottawa, have been given the Government contract for the erection of a barracks at Barriefield which will accommodate two complete battalions of infantry, and these must be ready for occupation within eighty days.

The new barracks is to be built on the lower commons at Barriefield, directly opposite the Military College reserve, and at the end of the causeway. Nearly twenty years ago the cavalry used to camp on this spot. The 4th Hussars, commanded by the late Lieut.-Col. Duff, for many years police magistrate, and later by the late Lieut.-Col. Clyde, in their blue uniform with gold trimmings, and the 3rd Prince of Wales' Dragoons of Peterborough were the last to occupy this spot as a camping grounds.

For years it has been used as a training grounds by the R.C.H.A., and since the present war broke out, hundreds of horse and field artillerymen have been taught to ride horses and drive their guns on this spot. The last field day of the R.C.H.A. was held here, and it was a sight to see the horsemanship of the men, many of whom will never again ride a horse on Barriefield commons.

The ground at this place is nice and flat, and well adapted to the purpose for which it has been selected. It is convenient to the city. A short walk of five minutes will carry the soldier to the city, and a jitney service will be unnecessary. It will cut out the long drag over the hill to the upper camp with teams heavily loaded with supplies, and its nearness to the water will make it a most happy spot in summer. In winter, too, the soldier will find it convenient to a fine sheet of ice for skating.

At High mass an invitation was extended for all Catholics to bring their non-Catholic friends to the services, to which all are welcome.

Shortly after enlisting the deceased was promoted to the rank of corporal, but he reverted in order to get to France.

London Sees Signs German Public is on Verge of Panic, Army Seething With Mutiny

Demoralization of Morale at Home Given as Much Space as Reverses of Army.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Public interest is quite equally divided between the uninterrupted advance of the allied armies and the apparent signs that the German people are in a state of nervous anxiety bordering on demoralization. More editorial space is being given here recently to future events than the retreat of the German army.

The belief that something like a panic has seized the German populace is not based upon stories from neutral sources, which have raised false hopes in the past, but upon the utterances of the leaders in the German nation and the appeals of German newspapers to the public to keep its head, while they themselves admit the seriousness of the military situation.

The Emperor's bold vein of assurance, Chancellor von Hertling's franchise speech, General Linsingen's stringent order, and above all Field Marshal von Hindenburg's proclamation are cited as manifest efforts to check the decay of the German spirit, which it is contended must exist to have called them forth. In short, it is declared, that the German people and perhaps also the military chiefs evidently are greatly disturbed by recent events.

The interest of military commentators, while not ignoring the continued British progress, centres chiefly on the important French successes on the southern end of the line of attack. The stiffening of the enemy's resistance on this front is noted and the difficult operations before the French and Americans is recognized.

The Times, referring to the Franco-American arrival before the great pivotal position of the enemy in France, of which the forest of St. Gobain forms the glacis," says a frontal attack in this forest is out of the question, and now, as last year, the French doubtless prefer to go round but have some very difficult ground to cover before they are on the Chemin-des-Dames.

General demoralization of the German population and widespread and growing dissaffection in the German army, accompanied by mutiny and desertions, are described in a despatch to the Daily Telegraph from its Rotterdam correspondent under date of Thursday.

He asserts that the German army is filled with despondency and seething with mutinous spirit and that alarming outbreaks have occurred in several units, principally Bavarian and Silesian. One incident on the Arras front terminated in a whole Bavarian division being disarmed and transported to Bavaria, where it was placed in a prison camp, and the mutiny of one of the Silesian regients resulted in nearly a hundred of its men being put to death.

A huge number of desertions are occurring, the correspondent says, and it is estimated that there are more than twenty thousand deserters in Berlin alone. Hundreds have been arrested and generally these have been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment. A great number of imprisoned deserters, broken by solitary confinement, have been released and sent back to the ranks.

Disobedience and defiance of officers is common at the front, according to the correspondent's information, and a similar spirit is shown in the munition factories where the workers deliberately are slowing up, with the result that the output has been seriously decreased.

NIGHT AND DAY IN A HOSPITAL IN FRANCE

By "CANADIAN OVERSEAS"

NIGHT.

The sun had long set and night had spread her mantle over the land. It is the hour for rest. In the wards the lights are out all but one shaded in red, which casts a peculiar gloom and shadows amongst the beds.

As the final duties for the night have been finished the sister goes to her desk, from which the red light shines, to see what cases need special attention that night.

It is the hour when sleep walks over the land and waves her soothing wand. But here she is baffled, a restlessness stirs through the wards — groans and moans, tossings and sighs mingle with the red glow and the dark shadows and a stuffiness hangs in the air.

The sister moves up and down the two rows of cots assuring herself that all are asleep or dozing.

Here at night when the lights are put out and the red gleam comes down the ward the spirits are unchanged and wander abroad. The men in their half dozing state watch curious and impossible things. Shadows hang over them and torment them, chase them and almost reach them, gibbering ghoulish wraiths of dreams unrealized, spring up and mock them, then they awake and the desire to call the sister for the sake of some one to talk to is very strong.

Most of the convoys come in at night; empty beds are suddenly filled; men everywhere lying on the stretchers on the floor waiting to be put into them; men sitting in twos and threes waiting their turn to be dressed. Outside the abulances come and go, filling the air with a low hum and a flash of light and then vanishing.

The stretchers tramp in and out in endless procession, and an almost soundless bustle goes on for a long time, after the men come in. In turn these are all in bed, unable to realize tha they are once more between white sheets. The ward settles down again, the lights, all but the red one, are put out; this casts flitting shadows which move about from bed to bed. The ward is quiet, yet the restlessness of the men permeates it — they doze and moan and toss and turn. With the darkness the spirits of the ward come forth from the corners and the hiding places; the red light casts shadows unreal and illusive, and all but the spirits wait for the day to break.

DAY.

In the far east night is making her last stand, and as the sun begins to shoot long crimson tongues into the sky, she hastens to the west and dies with a moan, and the morning drips with a golden mist.

Night with her shadows and mysteries has left the ward. The sister is on her rounds and the orderlies are busy with the men. After breakfast the doctor comes on his rounds with a cheery or severe word as the case demands. The "up patients" wait on and amuse their less fortunate pals —always with a joke and a pleasant word. Some lie in a dull state of mind, incapable of receiving acute impressions; some worry over trivial things.

The general feeling is that one has come to a full stop for the present. The future can be thought about when it gets nearer—things will just be taken as they come and, after all, nothing matters much. Self pity is not apparent, but one hears badly damaged men speak sympathetically of another whom they consider worse than themselves.

In hospital in France one hears very little talk about experiences at the front. A man will give news of a certain sector each knew, since his hearer had left, but there is seldom any personal discussion. A man who talks war to any extent is taken off as soon as he begins.

In hospital in France red tape is conspicuous by its absence, though things are in order just the same.

No fuss but straightforward friendliness and common-sense. Everyone is a friend, and one is not there long before feeling more or less at home.

The men have songs and talks around the stove; they help the orderly get tea at the far end of the hut, they can sit on their beds if they wish or lie on them or lie on the floor, as many prefer to do, with their heads pillowed on a pair of boots. Some take the medicines around for the nurse while she gives them to the patients.

The one disturbing feature of hospital life is the approach of the convalescent period. None like it, not because it may mean the front, for it may also mean discharge, but it is a period they dislike. It begins to dawn upon them clearly that life has to be faced under entirely new circumstances and the future to the soldier, whether up the line or as a civilian again, is an uncanny thing.

In the afternoon a few visitors come to the ward. These visitors the men share, and very soon they have shown them all their souvenirs, photos and trinkets. They know about their wives, sweethearts or children, but not much about themselves in the life they have just left.

There are many patients not able to be up who can sit up in a bed. These are always cheery, full of jokes and always busy. They do embroidery, make toys, bead chains, baskets, nets, scrap books; they crochet, weave, draw, fold dressings and cover splints. They work and they talk and they jest, but they are very thoughtful for the badly wounded in the ward. It is like a large kindergarten with something deep and binding lying underneath.

When supper is over they take their medicines and are made ready for the night.

Over in the western sky, day and night are struggling, the sun spreads its glow into the heavens, long isles of sunset clouds poise in an ocean of gold and the water is richly tinged with evening hues. But from the east night has crept quietly and softly over the land and the stars have come out one by one and once more she enters the ward with its red light and mysteries and shadows.

COLD STORAGE ON TRAINS.

Government Considering Plans for an Improved Refrigerator System in Canada.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16. — Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, speaking at the Ottawa Exhibition, announced that the Department of Agriculture had under consideration and study a first-class refrigerator and cold storage system on trains in Canada.

He said he was surprised to learn that a shipment of beef destined for overseas had to be sent back from Montreal to be re-frozen.

He predicted that there would be an increasing demand for Canada's foodstuffs in the United States after the war.

COULDN'T BELIEVE WHAT SHE'D HEARD

Trys Tanlac Herself and Finds Everything Said About it True.

"I could hardly believe all the good things I heard about Tanlac till I tried it myself, and it did me so much good that I started my husband on it, too," said Mrs. Ethel Burns, of 2038 Dundas Street, East Toronto, the other day.

"For about a year," she continued, "I suffered from a stomach trouble and nervous breakdown, brought on largely by my worrying about my husband, who was with the army in France. My appetite failed and I couldn't eat even a piece of toast without having trouble afterwards. My stomach felt like it was burning up inside and I was constantly belching up gas and pieces of undigested food mixed with nasty bitter water. The gas would press against my heart and my left side hurt so I could hardly bend over or do any work. I was so nervous that I would lay awake sometimes all night without sleeping a wink, and though I took all kinds of medicines I couldn't get rid of my misery.

"I have taken four bottles of Tanlac now and can eat anything I want and never have a touch of indigestion or gas afterwards. That nervousness is all gone, I sleep like a baby, don't have that tired, miserable feeling and have picked up some in weight. I am entirely relieved of that burning in my stomach and pains in my side and am feeling better than I have in a long time."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelack by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

U.S. GOVERNMENT WANTS FAMILIES TO TELL WHAT LIVING COSTS

Information Desired for Wage Adjustment—Continued Increase Shown in Food Prices.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Labour has begun a nation-wide inquiry into the cost of living in the United States. The purpose is to gather information for wage adjustments.

Agents of the bureau will call on representative families in different communities for information as to expenditures for one year for food, clothing, fuel, furniture and miscellaneous expenses. This information will be held strictly confidential.

The work began in Baltimore, when six agents started there.

"Every housewife is urged to furnish the information asked for," says a departmental bulletin just issued. "Not only will the information be of service to the Government, but it will help the housewife in knowing exactly what she is getting for her money. This is one way to help win the war."

The Department of Labour authorizes the announcement that retail prices of food in the United States continue to mount.

"Retail prices of food, as reported to the Bureau of Labour Statistics, July 15, 1918, show for twenty-two essential food articles an increase of three per cent. as compared with June 15, 1918," said the statement.

"Prices of several articles decreased. Five cuts of fresh beef show a decline of one per cent. each. Navy beans were two per cent. cheaper, and lard, lamb and coffee decreased less than five-tenths of one per cent.

"A comparison of retail food prices for July 15, 1918, with prices a year previous to that date, shows for all the articles combined an increase of fifteen per cent. The greatest increases were for fresh beef and hens. The cheaper cuts of beef, plate, boiling beef and chuck roast, advanced thirty-six and thirty-three per cent. respectively, showing greater advances than did sirloin steak, which increased twenty-nine per cent. Hens were thirty-six per cent. higher than a year ago. Lard, pork chops, bacon, ham and lamb show increases ranging from nineteen per cent. for lard to twenty-five per cent. for lamb. Beans, potatoes, flour, coffee and bread were cheaper than in July, 1917.

"For the five-year period, July 15, 1913, to July 15, 1918, all food combined showed an increase in price of sixty-nine per cent. For every article for which prices are secured by the bureau there was an increase of over fifty per cent. in the five years, and for four articles the increase exceeded 100 per cent., as follows: Meal advanced 123 per cent., potatoes 105 per cent., lard 104 per cent., and flour 103 per cent.

"The relative price figures for the United States for all food combined, as compared with the year 1913, are 162 per cent. in June and 167 in July, 1918; or an increase of sixty-two and sixty-seven per cent. respectively. Comparing the month of July with June, figures indicate an increase of three per cent."

GOOD VOICE A BIG ASSET

Worth a Lot to a Woman in Business and in Society.

An advertiser recently desired "a gentlewoman with a pleasant telephone voice." "Gentlewoman" takes one back to the good old days when peculiarly English terms were common on Boston's street signs, as "licensed victualer," "baiting," and other terms that now excite the curiosity of the younger. "Gentlewoman" means a woman of good birth or breeding. In this country we can easily pass the matter of birth, for, according to Thomas Jefferson and his friends, the French philosophers, all men, and presumably all women, are born free and equal. Surely there is no better opportunity for showing good breeding than when the telephone is taken in hand.

Pleasant telephone voices are by no means rare in Boston. There are business offices whose telephone girls cheer by their voices, even when they cannot give desired information. Their voices imply anxiety to be of service; they express tonally the regret at not being able to answer satisfactorily. They are calm, subdued, one might say leisurely, voices. They suggest neatness, something light and fluffy in dress. These voices surely are not associated with chewing gum and "cent man friends"; voices that are low and distinct even in giving numbers.

The wonder is that women not connected professionally with the telephone do not consciously learn from these gentlewomen. Was it Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes who said that the Bostonian's voice was the product of the east wind and codfish? It is not a matter of enunciation, pronunciation, accent. Southern women, Virginians especially, may say "poach" for "porch" but their voices are are as Cordelia's. Some New England women when they speak at the telephone or in the parlour bring to mind the sound made by a barkeeper cracking ice. Others are not so brittle, so staccato; in speech; they are raucious or shrill; voices of the nervous, high-strung, domineering.

Poets and novelists endow their women and beautiful voices. Thomas Hardy's Eustacia reminded one of the viola when she spoke. One cannot imagine Sophia Western, Beatrix, Amelia, (Fielding's or Thackeray's,) Bathsheba, or poor Tess stabbing the ear. Disagreeable voices even come out of studios in spite of singing teachers and masters in elocution, for agreeable singers and declaimers have sometimes a raw, a coarse organ in conversation. There is a lack of home training, and too often children follow the example of the parents, although the latter may be happily matched, even agreeing in vocal accordance.

Food Board Flashes

Is it by our sweet tooth that we are going to prove ourselves unworthy of the record made by Canada's sons? More hullabaloo has been raised over the sugar question than over anything that has yet been asked of us in a material sense.

"This sugar question certainly brings the war home to us," is a remark you hear on all hands.

Rather a good thing it does, too. The fact of the matter is that Canadian households have been running riot on sugar. They blame it all on the candy manufacturers but they are not the guilty ones. Figures go to prove that the candy manufacturers use only a small proportion of the sugar annually consumed in Canada. Moreover, the Food Board has cut their sugar allowance in half.

The present sugar ration in England is 2 pounds per person per month; in France 1 1/5 pounds per person per month including all foods and drinks containing sugar; and in Italy 1 pound per person per month.

"The Short Sighted Mayor"

(A Fable).

The Long Suit of the Mayor of Spotless Town was scrubbing up the town, whereas this Mayor's big idea was keeping the tax rate down.

The City Fathers argued about the need of adequate fire protection; they spoke of the rapid growth of the city; they pointed with pride to the fact that, in spite of poor fire protection, new industries were constantly coming in; but they likewise bewailed the fact that, because of poor fire protection, many desirable concerns which the Board of Trade had expected to induce to locate there had gone to other towns where they could get proper protection.

But all to no purpose. "I am strong for municipal economy," said His Honour. "That was the platform on which I ran, and it's the platform on which I stand. Our present apparatus has been putting out fires ever since I was a boy, and I guess it's still good enough to do the job."

So the proposition met with such strong opposition that it was passed up for the time being, much to the regret of the chief and his men, who feared that sooner or later the big fire would come and they would not have the needed equipment with which to fight it.

"Talk about the Devil and he is certain to appear," is an old and true saying. And, sure enough, one night he did appear. For several hours it certainty looked as if he had not only come himself, but had also brought his place of abode with him. It was the big fire, all right.

It was a group of large factory buildings, in one of the outlying districts, a mile and more up the railroad track. By the time the horses had pulled the apparatus through the deep mud up several steep hills, they were badly winded, and the fire was beyond control long before a single piece of apparatus arrived.

Motor apparatus would have plowed through that mud in quick time. The fire was what the cub reporters called a great conflagration, and the loss was what the insurance companies called a total loss.

Moral: When a growing community needs the protection which only the best type of motor fire apparatus can give, there are bigger things to consider than a possible rise of a point or two in the tax rate.

LENINE AND TROTSKY OFF TO SWITZERLAND?

Bolshevik Leaders Said to Have Prepared For Flight.

LONDON, Sept. 16. —The Government is still without news from Robert H. B. Lockhart, British Consul-General in Moscow, and the other British subjects held prisoner in Russia, but indirect negotiations for their release are continuing.

The latest information in official quarters confirms the reports of the desperate situation in Russia, indicating the break up of the Bolshevik regime. Premier Lenine and War Minister Trotsky, it is declared, made all preparations a month ago to escape to Switzerland.

Never air the faults of others until after deodorizing your own.

NEW PEACE PROPOSAL

Nothing to Lose.

The Daily News favours Austria's proposal for a conference, declaring that "Only actual discussion can prove whether a discussion at this stage can lead the world nearer peace. Austria's dominating motive hardly can be doubted, and there is no doubt that for more than any other belligerent an early peace is imperative. Such a conference would not compromise the Allies' fundamental principals; on the other hand there is more than a remote prospect that a discussion that might leave Germany obdurate might be different in the case of Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria. The Allies have everything to gain and nothing to lose by discussion.

Important Conferences.

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 16.—There were important conferences in Berlin on Sunday regarding the Austrian peace note. Chancellor Von Hertling presided, and all military and State leaders of Germany were present.

"A Catspaw."

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Austria's invitation to belligerents to meet in informal peace discussions is given a warm reception by the London morning newspapers. The warmth, however, is not that of cordiality, but of indignant repudiation. The note is seen by commentators as a German trick by which Austria is made the catspaw, in an endeavour to gain time to enable the German high command to reorganize its shattered troops. The offer of peace to Belgium is regarded as a shameless insult.

"Brest-Litovsk Scheme."

"The Austrian note does not bring real peace any nearer," says the Express. "Preliminary conditions to peace have been stated over and over again by the Allies, and there is not the faintest suggestion that the Central Powers will agree to anyone of these conditions. They who drew the sword are scheming to save themselves from perishing by the sword. The disingeniousness of the note betravs that it was written in Wilhelmstrasse, Berlin."

Relative to the offer of peace to Belgium, the Express says: "This is another Brest-Litovsk scheme, and part of a scheme for preserving the power of the Hohenzollerns."

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Former President Taft to-day disposed of the Austrian peace manoeuvres with neatness and despatch to wit: "It is not only laughable, but it is ridiculous."

A Clumsy Effort.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Foreign Secretary Balfour, speaking at the Hotel Savoy to-day, declared as his belief that the Austrian proposal cannot produce peace nor divide the allies.

"There is something almost cynical in the Austrian proposal, coming within a few hours after the speech of Vice-Chancellor Von Payer," Balfour said.

"I cannot believe it is the enemy's desire to reach an understanding which we can possibly accept. It is an attempt to weaken the forces which have proved too strong for them in the field. I am sure it cannot produce peace, and I am just as sure it cannot divide the allies. When the Germans try to dress themselves in President Wilson's clothes, or try to play a part they think Wilson wants them to play, they are clumsy actors."

Canada's Position.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Sept. 16. — Germany's latest peace offensive through her agents in Vienna is not seriously regarded in Government circles. From an official source came the intimation that so far as the Dominion was concerned the Teutonic peace feeler would find no response. Canada's attitude, it is pointed out, was enunciated by the Prime Minister upon his return from the Old Country and was in brief that there could be no peace with an unregenerate Germany. As the terms of the Austrian note make no mention of restoration or of reparation, Canada it is stated, could not become a party to any negotiations upon such a basis without departing from the principle laid down by the Prime Minister.

In official channels here the note from Vienna is accepted as confirming information previously received to the effect that conditions in the duel monarchy are becoming intolerable and that Austrian statesmen are leaving this last chance of saving their Empire from complete desolation.

Goal of Peace.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A. J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, speaking at the luncheon given to-day to a number of visiting Dominion journalists, said he had read of the proposal made by one of Great Britain's principal enemies, and as an individual he said: "I cannot honestly see the slightest hope that the goal we all desire, the goal of a peace which shall be more than a truce, can really be attained." The Foreign Secretary said he was utterly unable to see that a conference proposed by Austria could have the desired end.

Canadian Press:

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, Sept. 16.—Field Marshal Haig's forces continued their steady improvement of the British line at numerous points yesterday and last night. The most important gains recorded were in the Ypres-Comines Canal sector, where an advance of about 1,000 yards was achieved in the neighbourhood of the Canal and in the Havrincourt zone, where posts were established along the Canal Du Nord to the north-east of Demicourt, thereby giving the agressors a better position for future operations, should they be undertaken. The German artillery has maintained a steady bombardment at Havrincourt and in the surrounding territory.

French Official.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(Official).—The town of Vailly, on the north bank of the Aisne, east of Soissons, has been captured by the French. The French have continued their progress between the Oise and the Aisne, and captured Mont Des Singes.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Several enemy squadrons came in the direction of this city during the night, dropping many bombs in the suburbs and causing a certain number of victims and material damage.

BRANTFORD'S PLAN OF COAL DISTRIBUTION

Dealers Will Deliver, Using Their Best Judgment.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 16. — At a joint conference of the coal dealers of the city and the City Treasurer and City Solicitor, arrangements were completed which it is hoped will meet the fuel situation. All coupons which were filed at the City Hall by citizens were allotted to dealers, who will make deliveries of coal as fast as possible, having regard to their receipts of coal and to any special emergency. The dealers have agreed to use their best judgment and deliver supplies of coal as received to the best advantage, and will make a return at the middle and end of each month of the tonnage delivered.

The city has made arrangements with a coal company for the supply as rapidly as possible up to 1,000 tons of the requirements of soldiers' wives and families. This distribution will be handled by the company in conjunction with the Brant Patriotic Association.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS AT MARK STREET.

Rev. Mr. Whattam Preached at Both Services.

The largest congregations, both night and morning, which have ever attended Mark Street Methodist Church, attended Flower Sunday yesterday. In the morning, when the pastor, Rev. Mr. Whattam, preached on "The Rose and Chrysanthemum in Legend and Story," the children brought their floral offerings to the sanctuary, where two immense crosses of flowers stood.

In the evening Mr. Whattam chose as his subject, "Flowers Frost Touched." After the service those who desired took flowers from the crosses to the sick in the parish.

The music at both services was particularly good and much appreciated.

JEWISH DAY OF ATONEMENT.

The Jewish Day of Atonement commenced last night at sundown, and following the orthodox custom, the ancient rites will be observed until to-night's sunset. Total abstinence from food or drink will be maintained during the 24 hours.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Creation of Belgian Town in Great Britain

Bit of Pure Belgium Hidden Away in Colliery District of English North Country—6,000 Inhabitants.

BRUTE AROUND SHELL PLANT

There's a bit of pure Belgium hidden away amid the colliery-dotted green of the English north country. It is a town of 6,000 Flemings and Walloons. There is probably no other town in the world like it. It is called Elizabethville, after the Queen of the Belgians, and surrounds a 50-acre shell factory.

The inception and growth of this city has been simpler possibly than might be thought. Back in the summer of 1915, when the British Ministry of Munitions was formed, one of the most difficult problems it faced was that of labour supply.

A proposal was then made to equip one of the munitions factories which were being set up all over England exclusively with Belgian labor. Highly-skilled Belgians were found to be unavailable in England. Further investigations proved that they were not to be had in Holland or France, either. There was but one place left to go for them, and that was the Belgian army. For, in peace-time, Belgian army were the skilled men who had carried them out.

As the result of the international convention thus reached, the requisite number of skilled men were withdrawn form the Belgian army, and the semi-skilled and unskilled men were found almost entirely among the wounded soldiers who had passed through, or were about to pass through, Belgian hospitals.

The town—rows upon rows of concrete cottages —is as thoroughly Belgian as the Queen after whom it is named. There is nothing English about it, except its policemen. Belgian gendarmes were tried for a time, but the Beligans themselves by acclamation asked for the substitution of the British bobby. The post office is run on purely Belgian lines. There is a Belgian market place. Belgian methods of boxing, fencing, and wrestling are used at the recreation hall.

Model Dwellings.

Belgian plays, many of them written by the employes of the factory, are given, and the cinema advertises its programmes in English, Flemish and French. The Belgian rest intervals prevails at the factory, and the Belgian factory custom of innumerable cigarettes is quickly noticed. Hair-dressing saloons, drapery, and shoe-making stores, fancy depots, etc., with their quaint inscriptions, and un-British character of many of the goods on sale, make one forget that one is still in England.

The size of the town is shown by a summary of its buildings; town offices, police and fire station, church schools for 700 children, provision and meat market, twenty-two sleeping hutments, twenty-four hostels, three dining-halls, laundry and bath; hospital with laundry, isolation ward, nurses' pavilion, disinfector, and mortuary; staff hostel, six bungalows for officials, two presbyteries, 532 three-bedroom cottages, 342 two-bedroom cottages ,sewage disposal works, seventeen foremen's cottages, and a cemetery. And the latest addition is a large tract of waste land which has been converted into allotments.

While, from the point of view of housing, the most important buildings are the three-bedroom and two bedroom cottages, one cannot fail to be impressed with the single men's dwellinsg, where thre men sleep in a room and forty-five in a building. These are steam heated and well ventilated, and in the winter are quite comfortably warm.

WELL FED THOUGH RATIONED

The dining-halls afford another instance of well-ordered system. Here 1,200 can be seated at once, and 900 meals have been served in twenty minutes. The men pay two shillings a day, or thirteen shillings odd a week in advance, being provided with tickets. Three meals are served daily ,one hour being allowed for the principal meal in the middle of the day. The diet varies. For breakfast there is bread and butter, honey jam and cheese; for dinner, soup, meat or fish, potatoes, vegetables, rice-cake, and, of course, coffee; for super, potatoes with meat and coffee Tea has not found favor, and porridge for breakfast had to be abandoned. It may be mentioned in passing, too, that every article of diet is strictly rationed just as is the case elsewhere in England.

In their cottage homes, the Belgian women use furniture and pots and pans of every sort, which are the property of the Ministry of Munitions. Each house has its own water- supply and sanitary accommodation. Electric light is universal. From six to eight shillings a week covers ren of house and use of furnishings. In the series of small barracks, single men pay from 3s. 6d to s. 2d. a week.

When one turns from the spotless Belgian homes to the vast, droning black factory, one finds the crowing achievement of this inter-allied enterprise. Its output of shells is certainly up to that of any in the country, and is steadily increasing. While the Belgians, who are paid the piece-rates usual in the district, are earning such incomes as most of them never dreamed of in their Belgian homes.—(Answers.)

The option markets show but little change, the trading being generally within a narrow margin. Rains in the Western States and Northwest have tended to create a more nervous feeling among the bulls.

Gaffney Reported in Gray Automobile But Search Fails

Commissioner Enright Tells 800 Policemen Man Finding Slayer Be Promoted to Detective.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.— Policemen in the city have been notified to be on the lookout for a gray automobile, displaying a New Jersey license, in which Vincent Gaffney, escaped slayer, was believed to be a passenger. Automobiles throughout the city were stopped by the police, but the elusive Gaffney was not found. Where the information emanated from could not be learned, as the police declined to divulge its source.

Commissioner Enright stated in the gymnasium at Police Headquarters to eight hundred policemen, representing squads from every station in the city, that the policeman capturing Gaffney would be made a first grade detective with a salary of $2,450, a yearly increase of $950 above the pay of a patrolman.

The trial of John Callahan, who tried to escape with Gaffney, but sprained his ankle, was resumed yesterday in General Sessions before Judge Knott. John J. Hanley, warden of the Tombs, testified that the window through which Gaffney escaped, is equipped with bars which may be deetached to aid mechanics who have occasion to repair the roof.

Five Hundred Little Patients Victims of German Cruelty

Were Located in a French Hospital—Many of the Children Have No Parents—One Little Boy Explains the Disappearance of Mother.

HAVE SEEN MEN HUNG

PARIS, Aug. 16. — Through villages swarming with troops and packed with ordnance we arrived at an old caserne, which had been converted into the children's hospital of the district. It is in charge of one of the first of America's children specialists.

Here are 500 little patients. This barracks converted into a hospital is full of babies, the youngest being only six days old when I was there. Many of the children have no parents. Others have lost their mothers; their fathers are serving in the trenches. It is not always easy to find out how they came to be orphans; there are such plentiful chances of losing parents who live continually under shell fire. One little boy, on being asked where his mother was, replied gravely: "My mamma, she is dead. Les Boches, they put a gun to 'er head. She is finished. I have no mamma."

Spent Two Days.

The unchildlike stoicism of these children is appalling. I spent two days among them and heard no crying. Those who are sick lie motionless as waxen images in their cots. Those who are supposedly well sit all day brooding and saying nothing. When first they arrive their faces are earth coloured. The first thing they have to be taught is how to be children. They have to be coaxed and induced to play; even then they soon grow weary. They seem to regard mere playing as frivolous and indecorous; and, indeed, is in the light of the tragedies they have witnessed Children of 7 have seen more of horror in three years than most old men have read about in a lifetime. Many of them have been captured by and recaptured from the Huns. They have been in villages where the dead lay in piles and not even the women were spared. They have been present while indecencies were worked upon their mothers. They have seen men hanged, shot, bayoneted, and flung to roast in burning houses. The pictures of all these things hang in their eyes. When they play it is out of politeness to the kind Americans, not because they derive any pleasure from it.

Troublesome Time.

Night is the troublesome time. The children hide under their beds with terror. The nurses have to go the rounds continually. If the children would only cry, they would give warning. But instead they creep silently out from between the sheets and crouch against the floor like dumb animals! That is what they are when first they are brought in. Their most primitive instincts for the beginnings of cleanliness seem to have vanished. They have been fished out of caves, ruined dugouts, broken houses. They are as full of skin diseases as the beggar who sat outside Dives's gate, only they have had no dogs to lick their sores. They have lived on offal so long that they have the faces of the extremely aged. And their hatred! Directly you utter the word "Boche" all the little nightgowned figures sit up in their cots and curse. When they have done cursing of their own accord they sing the "Marseillaise."

Goes to Battle Fields to Establish Her Good Name

NEW YORK, Aug. 17. — Beulah Binford decided a long time ago to play the game of life from the other side. When she was eighteen years old, with yellow curls hanging down her back, she played the role of "the girl in the case" in the most sensational murder case of the decade, that in which Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., of Richmond, Va., was tried for and convicted of the murder of his wife on the Midlothian turnpike of Virginia the night of July 18, 1911.

The object of the curious eyes of thousands wherever she went, she faced about a few weeks after the murderer, her sweetheart, had been put to death and declared she would show to the world that if in a girl's heart there was a desire to be honest and good there was no power that could keep her from being just that.

Beulah Binford, with the same sweet face, if a bit older, with the same yellow hair, with the same determination to live the part of her life that still is before her in the way girls should live, was in New York, and she is on her way to France as a Red Cross nurse.

True, no one knows her as Beulah Binford now. For she is using an assumed name, so it will not be so difficult for her to make her way. She is going to France and help the wounded soldiers of her country.

All she wants now, she made it known when she was found in the throngs of a large hotel lobby, is that when she comes back from the battle-front the world may look upon her and admit the thing that she says she has striven to prove—that Beulah Binford has made good! If that can be brought about she feels she will have won a victory.

FREAK WIND STORM DAMAGES WARSHIP.

Was Rescued When Only a Few Feet From Bank.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Serious damage was caused Thursday by a freak wind storm which swept a section of the Hudson River around 225th Street, and a part of the upper west side.

A foreign warship anchored in the Hudson, dragged her anchor in the gale and was swept helplessly toward the rocks on the New York shore. Six tugs steamed full speed to the war vessel's assistance in response to signals for help. They threw lines to the helpless ship when she was in shallow water only a few feet from the bank and dragged her out into the river. Considerable damage was done by the wind to the war vessel's super structure, but her officers reported it could be repaired without trouble.

The fury of the wind was felt especially along Riverside Drive, where it swept against the towering apartment houses which line the east side of the thoroughfare. Large sections of roofs were ripped from one or two of the buildings.

ELLICE FARMER COMMITTED.

Stratford, August 15. — George C. Schmidt, an Ellice farmer, was committed for trial in court on a charge of harbouring two deserters, Frederick Schmidt, his son, and John Pehlke. Schmidt's house was searched on Monday night. Pehlke was captured, and Schmidt escaped, but came to the city on Tuesday and gave himself up. Schmidt was remanded till Friday, when Pehlke will be brought from London to give evidence.

TELEGRAM FROM DEPT. OF LABOR TO ARBITRATORS

The Board of Arbitration which has been in session at the Court House since Wednesday morning, receiving the evidence in support of the C.G.E. employees' demands, adjourned yesterday p.m. till Tuesday morning. Both parties (the men and the company) desired time to obtain confirmatory evidence to substantiate certain statements that have been presented.

Judge Snider read a telegram yesterday from the Minister of Labour, directing the Board to give special attention and consideration of the question of classification of the workmen. This point is really the salient contention thus far discussed. During the past three days the Board has listened to protracted expositions and debates on shop customs and practices in the C.G.E. and other factories. At noon yesterday they were still debating the question of the rating of what the men call specialists, as freshly as if the proceedings had just begun.

Mr. F. H. Harper, Canadian Representative of the International Association of Machinists proposed to Col. Watt of Toronto, who with Mr. E. G. Patterson, represent the company, that he nominate a third party, some man familiar with machine shop conditions, to advise or decide the rating of specialists. This suggestion may be followed up next week.

Before the noon adjournment the Board heard the first argument dealing with the brass workers, and at length Mr. Harper agreed to eliminate that designation and call them machinists and specialists as in the case of the machinists themselves.

Judge Snider voiced his position this morning by stating that he was spearing around in the dark trying to find firm ground upon which the company and the men could meet in regard to the disputed question of classification.

Mr. John Noble, representing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, went to Toronto at noon yesterday.

CROP EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD.

Latest Reports Justify Recent Prediction.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The latest reports received by the Food Production Department justify the recent prediction of an exceptionally good harvest in England and Wales. They are more optimistic in tone than at any time since the end of the spring. The Daily News representative was informed that the reports all tend to confirm the expectation of a yield equivalent to 40 weeks' supply of foodstuffs.

Under the influence of the July rains the crops generally have recovered from the setback caused by the early summer drought, although in some districts the harvesting operations may be lengthened by a fortnight because the laying and twisting of corn will compel the use of hand labour. The yield of oats is expected to be rather light, but the wheat crop will be a phenomenally large one, while barley will also be pretty good. Potatoes are expected to give an average yield, whereas a few weeks ago they promised a very poor one.

PUTTING THE LID ON TIGHT IN MONTREAL

Over Two Thousand Police Cases During July.

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—The first official report of the work of the new regime that is cleaning up this city was handed in to Joseph Tremblay, director of public safety, by Deputy Police Chief Grandchamps. In it is stated that during the month of July the first month in which the new administration got to work, the police handled 2,666 cases, an increase over July, 1917 of 35 per cent. A series of big raids was made upon slot machine keepers, gambling houses and places of ill-fame and as a sequel the lid on vice in this city is securely clamped down. Seventy-two disorderly houses have been closed down and their inmates to the number 297 women and 220 men arrested while it is claimed that gambling is now at a complete standstill in the city.

PRINCE ARTHUR LEAVES.

Prince Arthur of Connaught and party, who were visiting the city on Wednesday, left early yesterday morning for London, and they all but missed the royal salute with which the cadets of the Royal Air Force were anxious to speed them on their way. The Prince's party entrained quietly at the siding near Government House, while the cadets of the R.A.F., some 200 strong, were lined up at the North Toronto Station waiting for the party to arrive. It was only when the party passed through the station on the train that the cadets were able to bestow upon the Prince the token of respect which they had expected to display when he entrained. In order not to disappoint them, the Prince stopped off long enough to inspect the cadets, after which he complimented them highly on their military appearance. Col. Bickford, Major Mitchell and a number of other headquarters officers were on hand to say farewell to the visitor.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

BABY'S FIRST OUTING

CHAPTER CXLVI.

The first time I was able to take my baby out, I was so proud and excited that George declared if I didn't behave, he wouldn't let me go, that he and Kenneth would go without me.

I suppose every mother thinks her baby the sweetest, prettiest baby in the world. I am sure I would have scorned the idea that there ever could be so pretty a one as my little brown-eyed Kenneth. I think George felt exactly as I did, even if he did make fun of me.

We stopped at Evelyn's on our way home. Kurts' mother was there, and while agreeing that Kenneth was all that was desirable in so young a child, she warned me not to give up all my time to the baby.

"Young wives with their first babies are apt to forget that they have a husband, or that they owe it to themselves not to neglect other duties. Don't fall into that error. Love and care for your baby all you want to; but remember that Mr. Howard has some rights also."

I was astonished to have her talk so to me. She had made such a fuss over Evelyn's baby. But when I spoke to Evelyn about it, some days after, she said her mother-in-law had talked just the same to her—that she had cautioned her not to neglect Kurts, or her home and social duties. When I repeated what she had said to George, he returned:

"She's a very level-headed woman. Because you love Kenneth, it is no reason why you should stop loving me."

"Why—whoever heard of such a thing! 'Stop loving you'—that's not what she said. She meant not giving you as much time as before and"—

"Well I said it, and I do not intend to be shoved aside for that young rascal. Remember that, please, Mrs. Howard!" His tone was light, but I had a feeling that he really meant what he said.

FOOLISH DEVOTION.

As the months passed and my boy grew more interesting, I could scarcely drag myself away from him. He was so cunning, and he seemed to love me so dearly. He satisfied that longing for expressed affection that I had felt since my marriage. He was such an affectionate little fellow.

"I am glad he is affectionate," I said to Evelyn.

"Why?"

"Oh, George is so undemonstrative, and it is hard for a woman to take everything for granted when she is married to a man who never shows that he cares."

"Don't marry that baby off just yet!" she laughed, then. "I'll bet a pair of gloves that Mr. Howard cares just as much for you as if he made a fuss over you, Helen. I have seen him look at you with such a proud sort of look in his eyes."

"I know—occasionally. When I please him he does look that way, and once in a while he acts loving. But I would give anything in the world if he was like Kurts, and would give me a bear hug, and dance me around the room kissing and teasing me as I have seen Kurts do with you. Sometimes I fairly ache to have him do something like that. I don't mind so much now that I have the baby, tho. When I want to be loved and petted, I just hug him so I almost hurt him, and he loves me back in the same way, his little arms tight around my neck."

"You are worse than I was when Helen was his age. You are perfectly foolish over him. If he isn't spoiled, it won't be your fault."

"I'll be strict when he gets older."

"I see you being strict with him. That's a joke!" Evelyn returned with a laugh.

DISTURBING THOUGHTS.

I wondered, after she left, if I was foolish to be so entirely devoted to my baby. I concluded I was not; that he was MY baby, and I was going to be just as silly as I wanted to—if it was silly.

Then one evening as I sat alone sewing on a dainty dress for him—I loved to make his clothes—it came to me with a sort of shock that George was again staying out or going out nearly every evening. He had remained home with me often, in the months before baby came, and afterward he had not gone out as frequently as had been his custom when we were first married.

I dropped my work. Where was he? WHY had he begun to again spend his evenings away from home and—me? Julia Collins was eliminated. She was married and lived in Chicago. Was there someone else? Had he found some other entertaining woman with whom he now spent the time he used to devote to her? The thought was disturbing.

I tried to sew again, but found I could not put my mind on my work, so took up a magazine and tried to read. I glanced at the clock. It was a little after eleven. I must go to bed. He would not like it if I was waiting up for him. It had become a habit, since baby came, to go to bed very early unless we had guests or had gone out. I recalled that I had no idea what time George had been coming in. I had been tired and gone directly to sleep.

But although I went to bed I could not sleep. I tossed and tumbled until after one o'clock. When finally I dropped into an uneasy, unrestful sleep, George had not yet come in.

WAR BEGAN IN APRIL, 1913

Huge War Credit Was in That Year Voted in Germany and Supported by Socialists.

When did the war begin? April, 1913; not August, 1914, as the press always has it, writes Charles Edward Russel in Harper's. The real declaration of war was made by the German reichstag when it struck observing Europe dumb and chill by passing, an extraordinary war credit of $250,000,000; and to that act of belligerency in a time of profound peace the socialists in the reichstag gave practically their support.

All men in the world accustomed to make upon the day's news an intelligent diagnosis must have gasped and stared at this portent. Unless Germany deliberately planned now to bring down upon mankind the war her armament had silently threatened these many years, there was no good reason for this perilous saber rattling; certainly none appeared in the state of Europe. Yet the socialists seemed to be for it; that was the incomprehensible fact.

August Bebel, then still active, was the ablest and most famous of their leaders, and criticism from many lands seemed to goad him into a defense. It was of a nature to chill the last hope in any friend of peace. Two reasons he gave for the reichstag's action. One was that President Poincare of France, who had been but newly elected, was a warlike and dangerous man, and no one could tell to what lengths he might go. The other was that in the Balkan wars the Turks, taught by German officers, had been beaten by the Serbians, taught by French.

The judicious might grieve indeed when they came upon such an offering from such a source, and anybody able to read might see that war was close at hand.

ANGRY AT BEING DISTURBED

Old Gentleman Vastly More Annoyed at Constable Than He Was at Hun Air Raiders.

"He wasn't half angry," said a constable to me, smiling reminiscently as he cast his eye over what remained—mostly top story only—of an old-fashioned house which had suffered in a recent air raid. "You should have heard his language!"

"Curious thing," I said, "the top floor doesn't appear to be touched."

"Yes, that's where he was," said the constable. "Of course, we thought he was a casualty. We cleared away the rubbish, and somehow or other got up to his rooms with an ambulance and the doctor. The door was closed, so we started prying it open. That's when the fun started.

"The door was flung open, and there stood the old gentleman with a big book in his hands, his 'specs' on, and in a proper temper. I just caught a glimpse of a cosy armchair drawn up to a blazing fire.

"'What the —— does this mean?' he says. 'Haven't I been disturbed enough this evening? Get out of it all of you.' And without troubling to shut his door, he went back and sat down with his book beside the fire, muttering most awful. It gave me the biggest shock of the raid."—London Mail.

Vanity.

There is a stirring of the spirit captive in the worn mesh of the body. People are breaking down under the tyranny of material possessions. There was never a time when women's intelligence was so eager and inspirational; never a time when men were so weary of metal and meals and miles. It is all clear to a prophetic understanding that we are nearing the end of our lessons in three dimensions and five senses.—Will Levington Comfort.

CAPTURED ENEMY MOTOR.

French Airman Figured In Very Daring Exploit.

On the occasion of the bestowal of the rosette of an officer of the Legion of Honor upon the famous French airman, Nungesser, who gained 35 to 36 victories, the Paris newspapers recounted some of the deeds which have earned this brilliant officer the honor. The following is one of the most picturesque of his adventures:

Nungesser gained the Military Medal on Sept. 3, 1914, when he was a Hussar. His detachment had been surrounded, and Nungesser carried his officer, who was wounded, into shelter.

Then with two infantrymen he attacked a 40 horse-power Mors motor-car, containing four German officers, including a colonel. In the fight which ensued a shot from the car went right through Nungesser's hat, but he succeeded in killing his adversaries, and, changing clothes with one of them, jumped into the car with his comrades and regained the French lines.

It was thought at first that he was a spy and he was taken before the general officer commanding, to whom he delivered the papers he had found on the Germans, which included a map indicating the route by which the Germans intended to march on Paris.

The delighted general invited the hero to lunch, and made him a present of the Mors car, with the words: "You are a Hussar. You have captured a Mors. You will henceforth be a 'Hussard re la mort' (a death's head Hussar). The nickname has stuck to Nungesser.

The papers point out that Nungesser has probably been wounded more times than any other airman, as he has 17 wounds to his credit.

Cramps and Pains In The Stomach

QUICKLY CURED BY DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY.

Mrs. J. Fawcett, Hopewell Hill, N. B., writes: "I am writing you of my experience with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Last summer I was taken so very sick with cramps and pains across my stomach that I sent for the doctor. He said I had summer complaint and gave me some medicine, but it did me very little good. As I was reading your B. B. B. Almanac, I saw Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry advertised, so I asked my sister to go to the store and get me a bottle, and before I had taken all of it I was a well woman, and have not had the slightest return of the trouble since. I cannot say enough for your valuable medicine, and always keep a bottle in the house."

You run absolutely no risk when you buy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, as it has been a standard remedy on the market for the past 72 years. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting it, as the cheap imitations are dangerous to your health. Price, 35c. Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How Your Neighbor Ends Her Corns

HAVE you noted how uncommon corns are nowadays? That pained look — that slipped-off shoe — are not very often seen. The reason lies in Blue-jay, which millions have adopted. An easy, gentle, scientific way to forever end a corn.

Those corn-free folks don't pare corns. They don't merely pad them. They don't use old-time treatments, harsh and mussy.

When a corn appears they wrap it with a Blue-jay, then forget it. It never pains again.

In two days, usually, the corn disappears. Only rare, tough corns need a second application.

The way is simple, easy, quick. It is right and scientific. A noted chemist evolved it. And it is made by a world-famed surgical dressing house. Don't keep paring and protecting corns. They are deformities — remove them.

Learn how Blue-jay does it. It will be a revelation. After that test you will never again let a corn annoy you.

Make the test tonight.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Old Hero's Story

By F. A. MITCHEL

An old Frenchman, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, who had been in America long enough to speak English as he would if it were French, told me this story over a glass of French wine raised in California:

Eet was in ze beginning of ze war when ze Prussian haf not yet conquer ze French people and we do not think zey will overrun ze country and dictate terms of peace in Paris. I was with General le Fevre, who commanded a brigade near ze frontier. We have ze railroad and ze locomotif and ze cars, but when ze Prussians cross ze border all ze employees of ze road run away.

In ze evening just before sunset an officer ride up to ze camp of ze Ninety-eighth regiment of ze line and say:

"Any of you men locomotif engineer?"

I have been locomotif engineer before I enlist in ze army, so I shake my hand in ze air. Ze officer he took notice and he call for me to come to him. I go with him to General le Fevre's headquarters, and ze general ask me how much I know about locomotif, and after I tell him he say to me:

"I send a thousand men to ze other terminal of zis railroad at once. Zere is one company zere and ze captain telegraph zat ze Prussians are coming to occupy ze high ground zere, but eef he have a thousand men he can hold eet till General Bazaine send a large force. Eet is sixty miles to go, and you must tak ze train zere in leetle more than an hour. Eef you git zere before ze Prussians you may save France. Zey are six or seven miles from ze place and march on foot.

I say, "Yes, general, I tak ze men zere in one hour if ze locomotif will pull it so fast as zat."

It was ver' dark when we start. Ze moon only leetle crescent, nearly gone down. We run from north to south, ze same way as ze border line between France and Prussia. We do not know if ze Prussians haf advanced so far as ze railroad. Eef they haf zey fire into ze train, zey try to throw it off the track, zey do all zey can to keep us from going on.

My engine ver' good engine, one of ze best of eets kind. I run sixty miles an hour, sometimes more, sometimes less. When I come to ze curves I slow down leetle bit, but make eet up when I have a straight road before me. A few Prussian cavalrymen, ze advance of ze Prussians, have come so far as ze railroad, and zey put obstructions on ze track. Suddenly I look ahead and see a tree felled on the rails. I reverse, zen shut my eyes to wait for ze smash. Eet does not come, only a leetle bump.

When an engineer runs into ze dark night he feels like Columbus when he sail into ze dark ocean. I nevaire know when I round a curve, but I run into a big rock or some othaire obstruction zat kill me and wreck ze train behind me. I see specter all ze time. Suddenly a great black someting seem to spring up on ze track right before me. I reverse, but before I come to a full stop I see zat it ees nothing but a leetle bug which haf fly on ze glass before ze headlight.

All at once I hear a cracking above ze noise of ze train, and bullets whistle through ze cab. Some Prussian horsemen fire zere carbines at us. But zey do leetle damage, nothing but break my right arm. So I cannot hold ze throttle with zat arm. But what for I want two arms when one will do as well, except for sudden reverse, and by zat time I come within about ten miles of ze end of ze journey? Nevairezeless I call ze fireman, who come and look ovaire my shoulder.

Ze Prussians were by zat time ver' near ze point we wish to reach, and we both approach at an acute angle. Zey hear ze rattle of our train, and we hear zere huzzas. By gar, we have to stop to take away ties zem scouts put on ze track, and while we make no sound we hear zere tramp at double quick. Zen we hear a gun, and I think we too late. Ze Prussians must be attacking ze post. But I go on, and pretty soon I come to a leetle earthwork our men haf thrown up beside the railroad and see that they have a gun there and ha e dropped a shell into ze Prussian advance.

In a few minutes we reach our point I whistle down ze brakes, ze train stop, and our men jump out and run up to ze top of ze hill, where ze French have work two, three days on ze fortifications.

Zat was ze end of my work. I get surgeon to fix my arm and am ready with my musket to receive the Prussians when zey come. Zey have twice as many men as we, but we have very strong position and no trouble to hold out till Marshal Bazaine send large force.

When I get back to my command my general he throw his arms about me and hug me like a bear. He say to me: "You have done great service. You shall be a captain; you shall have a medal. I will report what you have done to the empereur."

Pouf! What was it all worth? Ze Prussians march right on to Paris, and after the capitulation our people pay big ransom to get zem out, besides giving our beautiful provinces Alsace and Lorraine. Some day when we get strong we tak zem back. But what good zat do me? I'm too old now to fight, and by zat time I sleep under ze sod.

French Labor Shortage.

The lack of labor has become more acute in almost all the vital industries of France. There are many soldiers of the old classes in the French army, men 40 years of age or more, whose usefulness at the front is a question open to debate. Agitation has been going on since the time when American participation in the war made the demand for men less acute at the battle front to relieve the old Poilus. Early in 1917 the doubtful privilege of an honorable discharge was granted to carefree fathers of six or more children. The real problem before the chamber of deputies is whether to take up the question of the old classes in a large spirit or whether to continue to make slight concessions to the demands of their constituents.

MYSTERY HOVERS OVER LAKE

Body of Water in Central Africa Has Most Curious Effect on Minds of Travelers.

Cold and gray are the waters which Lake Tchad spreads over the lowlands of central Africa. The traveler in Africa finds the mystery of the dark continent more haunting and unfathomable here than in the baffling mazes of the jungle or in the silent smile of the sphinx. Heavy winds toss the shallow waters about and whisper their secrets through the reeds. But the lake makes no answering confidences. It stretches on and on, measuring its miles of surface in sweeping wave lengths.

As far as the eye can see ahead are the reeds and rushes reaching up through the water in tangled masses. Here and there the line of the gray expanse is broken by slender islands bearing up a few round-topped native huts, outlined dimly against the skyline. The effect is that of a painting seen through gray glasses, reducing the whole to a low key. It is in the grayness that the lake's effect of mystery lies, the grayness that hovers dull and cheerless over waving reeds.

The traveler gazing across Lake Tchad for the first time feels the thrill of discovery. The knowledge that he is not the first to stand upon the banks does not dispel the feeling of entering the most shut-off place in central Africa.

The Culprit.

A schoolteacher complained to the principal one day that one of the big boys was flirting outrageously with the music teacher, who came in once a day. The principal spoke severely to the class and ended by saying that out of consideration for the feelings of the culprit he would not name him in public. At the close of the session, however, he was to come to the principal's office for an interview.

Yes, you guessed it. All the boys in the class showed up.

Her Party Speech.

Lucille was a carefully brought up little girl of five, and she returned in high glee from her first party. "I was a good girl, mamma," she announced, "and I talked nice all the time."

"Did you remember to say something nice to Mrs. Applegate just before leaving?" asked her mother.

"Oh, yes, I did," responded Lucille. "I smiled at her and said: 'I enjoyed myself very much, Mrs. Applegate. I had lots more to eat than I 'spected to have.'"

LIKE BOLT FROM HEAVEN'S BLUE

A happy discovery of Cincinnati chemist interests women here

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

A genius in Cincinnati discovered a magic ether compound and named it freezone. A quarter ounce of this freezone can now be had at any drug store for a few cents. Apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with your fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses for a few cents and without suffering one particle, without the slightest irritation of the surrounding skin. Just a touch of this marvelous freezone on a sore, troublesome corn gives instant relief.

SHAVES IN STRANGE PLACES

Daredevils Who Remove Their Beards Under Difficulties.

Konschel, an Austrian aviator, performed an unprecedented feat a few days ago for a bet, when he shaved himself while circling the Vienna flying ground at an altitude of 3,000 feet. During the operation — after the preliminary and comparatively easy process of lathering was concluded—he had to steer with his feet as he required the left hand to hold his cheek, while with the right he wielded the razor.

On more than one occasion the celebrated Blondin undertook successfully a similar achievement while standing upon a rope stretched across a giddy gulf. Indeed, he once performed this item of the toilette while carrying a passenger on his back—a passenger who in this case must have been himself a cool-headed gymnast, as after his supporter had finished he in his turn took the razor in hand and removed a day's growth from his chin.

Every now and again some daring Figaro has gained bold advertisement by exercising his calling in the unrestrained presence of the king of beasts. During the stay of Myers Circus at Huddersfield a local barber wagered $25 that he would enter a cage of lions and shave their trainer within a space of five minutes. He won his bet with two minutes to spare. Even more foolhardy was a Norwich (Eng.) barber, who, in similar circumstances, shaved the trainer at Day's Menagerie, for, on one of the lions approaching somewhat too near, he gave the inquisitive carnivore a taste of the lather-brush.

Guillaume Duprat, Bishop of Clermont and founder of the College of Jesuits, at Paris, narrowly missed being shaved in his own cathedral. Duprat was the possessor of a beard so magnificent and luxurious in its growth as to awaken envy in all clerical hearts—envy even in those of his canons, who, so far from being proud of their chief's hirsute adornment, assembled in full chapter and resolved upon its removal. Preparations were made, and when next the bishop appeared in the choir a procession of ecclesiastical dignitaries, headed by the dean, advanced down the aisle carrying barber's basin, hot water, soap, and razor. The bishop, however, divined their intention, and promptly taking to his heels, managed to reach his castle of Beauregard, where, after a brief illness, he died of chagrin at the indignity which he had so narrowly escaped.

Louis I. of Bavaria issued an ordinance in 1838 forbidding citizens under any pretext whatever to wear moustaches, and directed the police to see that his will was promptly obeyed. Moustaches disappeared with astonishing celerity, the authorities having only on rare occasions to exert their power, which they then did with drastic promptitude, as when, on receipt of information that a wealthy banker, who had not yet complied with the order, was enjoying a bathe in the Isar, they procured a boat and, having supplied themselves with the necessary implements, overtook the swimmer, whose moustache they cut off there and then while he trod water.

Not Equal to It.

They had not been married very long, but she had grown cold and listless; so one evening, after she had yawned about seventeen times, he said:

"You seem to be so cold and indifferent, Malvina. Have you forgotten those happy days when I was paying you my addresses?"

"I should think I haven't! I should think I haven't forgotten those happy days. I never had less than three fellows every evening calling on me."

"But, dear, haven't you got me to pay you attention now?"

"Yes, I suppose I have. You are doing the best you know how; but you don't flatter yourself that you are equal to three, do you?"—Stray Stories.

Her Strategy

By MILDRED WHITE

As the new doctor passed down Main street, admiring glances and friendly greetings came to him from every side. Though he had but lately come to fill the place of a former classmate gone to war, Bruce MacDonald had quickly gained the confidence of the community. But in one manner he disappointed, positively he persisted in refusing all social invitations.

His life was to be one of duty, not pleasure, he announced. And interested maidens lamented.

There were few desirable men left in the suburban town, and they had counted much upon the diversion of his brilliant companionship. The record of "brilliancy" preceded him. Had not his pictured face appeared in city papers in connection with various worthy activities? But all unheeding, the new doctor passed indifferently upon his way, that is—until his foot stumbled against some object lying directly in his path on Main street. Curiously, he stooped to pick it up, the crumpled object was a woman's rubber. Small, high-heeled and new it was, some one had evidently dropped it, perhaps entering an auto, and had not noticed its loss. Doctor MacDonald turned the rubber over in his hand, there upon the white lining were inked initials and an address. J T, he deciphered, 24 Main St., West; 24 must be—why, it was just opposite. It would delay him but a moment to run up the steps and leave the shoe at the door.

A maid opened the door, but when he would have delivered the rubber into her care, she withdrew, leaving the young doctor standing in a sunny reception hall. But he had not long to wait, down the stairway came swift feet, a girl stood before him. Absorbed, as was his custom, in thought of professional duties, he might have neglected to observe this young woman's many and evident charms, had she not delayed him by professing doubt as to the rubber's ownership.

"This address is plainly written upon the inside," he told her. But in that moment of delay, her eyes twinkling with some hidden merriment, caught and held his own bewilderingly.

"So kind of you to trouble," she murmured.

"No trouble at all," the doctor returned, and still lingered in the hall.

Confusedly he picked up the morning paper lying upon the vestibule floor and handed it to her.

The girl gave a little cry of distress. "Oh, do you see the heading?" she asked. "More of our boys leaving for the front. Isn't it all—dreadful?" Her sympathetic face questioned him. "And you," she said, "are you—?"

The doctor shook his head. "I am a little beyond the age limit," he answered, "and I am taking Doctor Smith's place here during his absence."

"Yes, I know," the girl replied, she smiled, "we soon learn all about strangers." Impulsively she put forth her hand. "I am glad to meet you," she went on frankly cordial, "you see, your fame had traveled before you. We have been counting greatly upon your help in the Red Cross lectures, and all that."

Doctor MacDonald was embarrassed, it was such public affairs to which he had been obliged to give resolute refusal. "My regular work takes every moment of my time," he murmured.

The owner of the little rubber was plainly disappointed, also she was determined to be cheerful in her disappointment.

"Oh, we shall no doubt find some one else," she said. Her bright gaze fell upon him. "Though of course we would have preferred our own resident physician."

The doctor hesitated with his hand upon the door knob, the charming girl hesitated, looking down upon her recovered shoe.

"If you had not found this," she remarked, "I might have been obliged to remain home from tonight's Red Cross meeting. Good morning, doctor, and thank you."

Suddenly the door opened from outside and a tall youth burst into the room.

"Great Scott!" he exclaimed.

"Billy!" cried the girl, she gave him a little shake. "Doctor MacDonald," she introduced, "this is my brother."

The doctor's face expressed amused astonishment at the boy's continued perplexing stare. But when he had gone, that youth dropped in mock helplessness into the nearest chair.

"You are a wonder, Josie," he said. "How did you do it? Here it was only last night that I bet you a five pound box of chocolates, you couldn't get acquainted with Doctor MacDonald. You came right back, that you would bet he'd call at the house in a day or two, and here he is, first thing this morning. 'Course, now he has met you, we know the rest of the story. The chocolates are yours, but by George! how in the world did you do it?"

"Billy," reproved his sister, the dancing light of her eyes had given way to an unusual softness. "I do not want your candy. He—he is far too nice, to bet about."

And a few moments later, Doctor MacDonald, with a like softness in his own keen eyes was at the telephone.

"As to that Red Cross meeting this evening Mrs. Benson," he was saying, "I have reconsidered. You may count upon me sure, to be there."

Democracy.

An endless line of drafted and enlisted men with not a stitch to their backs was slowly passing through a room where important-looking men gave each one a glance or a prod, or listened to his heart or lungs, or looked to see if he had fallen arches, and so on. The men were of many ages, shapes, sizes, dispositions and nationalities. Papadoupoulos was followed by Lafferty, and he by Cohen, and he by Jones, and he by Bogdanski. It was a typical melting-pot crowd. At the beginning of the line stood a man who merely asked questions — singularly foolish ones too, as many thought. In fact, they were very foolish indeed, but if you happened to be subnormal mentally it was very likely that you would give yourself away when you tried to answer them. That is what they were for, and the questioner, of course, was a psychologist.

He asked the track-walker the usual series of questions, and the poor fellow was bewildered somewhat, but managed to get through without calamity. Then the examiner turned to the next man, a singularly uninteresting specimen.

"What was your job?" asked the psychologist, in a manner meant to be reassuring.

"Such-and-such a university faculty," replied the man calmly, "department of psychology."

There were mutual grins of commiseration.

The examiner found that this enlisted man had worked a great deal with mental tests, so he followed the man along, as the line of men slowly made its progress down the long room, and the final turning of the column arrived just as they were discussing the psychological analysis of behavior differences in children!

Then the examiner began making a hurried retreat back to his post at the other end of the room, upon which the track-walker turned around with pained and sincere bewilderment in his eyes and expression.

"Holy smoke!" moaned he: "that was the worst blame high-brow talk I ever heard in my life! What was it about? Latin?"

"If I knew as much junk as dat," quoth No. Three, who in private life operated a push-cart, "I'd git me a better job 'n bein' a soldier."

No. Four, a typical business man, merely chuckled.

Electric Lights.

An English authority assures us that we need not be afraid that the ultra-violet rays in the electric light will harm our eyes, for the reason that, since glass of all kinds is opaque to these rays, no form of incandescent lamp having a glass bulb can emit them. Nor can any arc lamp or mercury vapor lamp be harmful which is so inclosed.

Can't Even Have "Near-Beer."

Germany's brewers hoped this year to produce a beer substitute that should really resemble beer, but the Prussian minister of finance has issued a decree that puts an end to the dream of the foaming stein.

A new process has been patented by which near-beer was to be made from beetroot, hops, yeast and water. Many breweries had already installed machinery required under the patent.

The minister of finance has decided that the sugar of the beetroot, upon which the substitute depends for alcohol, cannot be spared for beer. Beets, he says, are badly needed for manufacture of sugar, dilution of jam and making of coffee substitutes.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Paspebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, AUGUST 17, 1918.

Very Heavy Artillery Fighting West of Roye

The Allies Are Creeping Nearer To Important Position

Thompson-Gillespie Alliance to Trim Reeves Who Are Against the Ontario Good Roads System

Rumour Reaches County Council That War is to be Declared in January on Those Who Refuse to Pledge Support to the Policy—November Session May Forestall the Promised Ructions.

GOOD ROADS

The municipal elections in Peterborough townships next January promise a degree of interest that is usually absent from the unexciting duty of choosing a reeve and a handful of councillors. Occasionally some local question of economy or management, when personalities refuse to ruffle, develops a contest that resounds along the concession lines, but during the past four years, at any rate, parochial differences have been lost in the shadow of war.

This year, it is rumoured, the Provincial Good Roads system will be introduced as an issue into every township. Mr. James Thompson and Mr. George A. Gillespie, the representatives in the Legislature of East and West Peterborough respectively, will join forces, it is said, in support of candidates for the County Council, who will be pledged to lead Peterborough to the vacant chair that has been so long waiting for her in the Good Roads household. These two M.P.P.'s, supported by spell binders from the Department of Public Highways, will go up and down the townships, holding the county before the farmers as the blacksheep in the Ontario fold.

Reeve Matheson stated on Thursday afternoon that he heard, on good authority in Havelock, the occasional resting place of Mr. Thompson when he finds time to get away from his interests in Toronto and New Ontario, that every candidate for reeve next January will be asked for his promise to vote "Yea" whenever the Good Roads question is introduced in the County Council. Mr. Thompson will not find it necessary to threaten many of the candidates in the East Riding. He has a following down there, it is said, that eats out of his hand. It is not suggested that any of the present members of the Council are so-called Thompson men. Perhaps they are; and in any case they may not be so sure that Mr. Thompson's arguments in this cause will be as potent as the glad-hand that wins Provincial elections.

However, Reeve Matheson wasn't communicating a State secret when he reported the rumour from the railroad town. It has been understood for some time that the fiat has gone forth that Peterborough has been coaxed long enough. It is now time to go and get her. And to deliver her into the hands of the Good Roads Department, the surest method is to get rid of the present recalcitrants.

In justice to Mr. Thompson, it should be said that the issue is not a political one, but old political associations should help some in the east. If the present expectations are fulfilled there is bound to be a few interesting debates, especially in the townships now represented by "holdout" reeves. The farmers will be fully acquainted with both sides of the question, the smooth places and the ruts in the Good Roads system, and in the meantime the Council is going to imprint maps of the county in its separate minds, and prepare to dispose of the project, once and for all, at the November sessions. All of which is a guarantee that the countryside will understand the details of the Provincial system as never before.

As already reported recently, the Reeves of this county want good roads but they don't want them at a premium. It is but natural that any of the present Reeves who happen to live near or directly on any main road that would receive first attention under the Good Roads scheme are stronger advocates of the Provincial system than those buried on back forties. Generally speaking, the councillors are entirely happy in their isolation from the rest of the Province.

If the conditions of membership in the Good Roads fraternity were altered a trifle, Peterborough would have been long ago knocking at the door. Just now the Council has its foot on the bottom step, and in November may climb the rest of the way and walk right in with their hand out for the welcome that goes to the prodigal and the lost sheep that has been found. In that event, the Thompson-Gillespie entente would find no townships to conquer, and most of the present Reeves would be back again probably expecting a banquet from the Motor League and a big joy-ride from the Kawartha Park Association.

MR. HENRY MULLIGAN, OF MILLBROOK.
Who on Monday last celebrated the 86th anniversary of his birth.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—The Associated Press summary this morning says:—Roye the central bastion of the German defense line from Peronne to Noyon which has withstood the allied thrusts for nearly a week is menaced seriously by the advancing French, British and Canadian troops and its fall would appear to be a probability within the next few hours. With town in allied hands the southern end of German line at least undoubtedly would have to retire, although the northern end through Chaulnes to Perone would be affected. Allies are now but scant one and one quarter miles west of town while they are pressing eastward in north and in south.

Along front of nearly nine miles north and south of Avre, which flows through Roye allies have pushed back enemy in Stubborn fighting. The most notable advance was made on front of three miles in centre by French and Canadian troops who now are fighting in line through Goyencourt, St. Mard Les Treot and Lacourt.

Ald. Dobbin Assumes Fuel Position Until Vacancies Are Filled

Deprived of its Fuel Commission, the city has practically been forced to call in Ald. Dobbin to fill the position until the wreckage has been cleared away and a new start made. Mr. Malcolm Campbell is the only Commissioner who has accepted the Council's appointment, but he is unable to assume the duty for the reason that the by-law required three Commissioners.

Ald. Dobbin held a conference with the coal men on Wednesday night, at which an important question was discussed and plans laid for meeting a situation that might lead to a considerable decrease in the city's receipts of coal.

OUTING FOR PETERBOROUGH MUSIC DEALERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Mason and Master Melbourne were the guests Thursday afternoon of the Music Dealers' Association of Peterborough. The party, numbering about thirty, left Peterborough about 2.30 by motor for South Beach, from which place they went by boat through the beautiful waters of Stoney Lake. Then a most excellent fish dinner was served by Mr. Brooks at his summer hotel. After a number of games the party returned to Peterborough. Mr. and Mrs. Mason arrived home Friday morning.—Lindsay Post.

FRENCH TROOPS ARE WITHIN A MILE OF ROYE AND LASSIGNY

(By John De Gandt—United Press Service.)

PARIS, Atgust 17.—French troops are within a mile of both Roye and Lassigny. Camp DeCesar, a mile west of Roye, has been captured while the Midian trench and Pressis-De-Roye, less than a mile southwest of Lassigny, have been occupied. A number of prisoners and a great quantity of material were taken. The enemy is reported to be preparing for evacuation of the Roye-Lassigny-Noyon salient. German pioneers are said to be constructing another Hindenburg line.

On June 3rd of this year he was shot through the arm, and while in the hospital was notified of his promotion to the rank of sergeant and also that he had been awarded the meritorious service medal. Sergt. Carpenter is a brother of the late Corporal Bert Carpenter who was killed in action.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 17.—The Germans are preparing to evacuate Roye, also the Lassigny and Noyon salient, says the Echo De Paris. It is indicated, the paper adds, that German pioneers and labourers are at work behind the German front lines on a new Hindenburg line. The German position in Roye is serious. Not only are the Allies a mile and one quarter west of the town, but the roads leading out of it toward Peronne, Nesle and Noyon are under fire of the allied guns.

The Tanks Played An Important Part

Went Ahead and Cleared Out Wire, Machine Gun Nests and Other Obstructions.

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES (By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent), Aug. 17.—All ranks of the Canadian forces freely admit the great part played in the victory by Imperial tanks operating under the commander of the Canadian forces. The tanks are an Imperial force, exactly as is the Royal Flying Corps, and in both are many Canadian enlisted men. In this battle the tanks went ahead of our infantry, clearing the war, beating out roads through entanglements, overwhelming the enemy trench system, breaking up machine gun nests, and even coming to grips with concealed enemy batteries. The tanks are commanded by Imperial officers. Each ran his own show, and a gallant and resourceful lot they are. Many of them fought with us at Vimy, and they are our tried comrades. We will go anywhere with Canadians. Such a show as you put on has never been seen in this war, said one of them.

PRIZEWINNERS AT ENNISMORE PICNIC

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

British Lines Have Been Pushed Forward at Several Points on the French Front.

HEAVY FIGHTING

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(Official.)— In Picardy the British troops have made additional progress. The British lines have been pushed eastward north of the Amiens-Roye road, and north of the Ancre.

The text of the statement reads:

The pressure of troops north of the Roye road and north of the Ancre continued, and progress has been made by us in both sectors. In the neighbourhood of Vieux Berquin, our patrols had sharp fighting yesterday, and further encounters took place during last night. Our troops made progress in this sector and in the neighbourhood of Merris and have taken prisoners. The hostile artillery has shown considerable activity about Mount Ruge and Scherpenberg, and in the vicinity of Zillebeke Lake.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 17.—(Official.)—In the region south of Roye, French troops have made further progress in Loges Wood and have reached the outskirts of the Wood east. There was heavy artillery fighting west of Roye during the night. North-west of Ribecourt and other points the French have repulsed two strong German attacks.

THE STATEMENT READS:

In the region west of Roye there was heavy artillery activity during the night. South of Avre French troops continued to make progress in Bois Des Loges and reached the eastern outskirts of the Wood. Between Matz and the Oise we repulsed two heavy enemy attacks against Monolithe and Carnoy Farms, and maintained our positions. Northwest of Rheims, an enemy raid near La Nouvillette was without results.

The Germans Made Some Important Concessions at the Recent Conference

Matter of Sending Troops to the Western Front Was One of the Points Discussed.

OTHER MATTERS

(Canadian Press.)

London, August 17.—Germany has made concessions to Austria on the Polish question, in consequence of the strong stand taken by Emperor Charles and the Austro-Hungarian government, according to information received by the correspondent of the Daily Mail at the Hague, to which the Mail gives much prominence.

It is possible there will be no union of the Crowns of Poland and Austria, but the King of Poland is certain to be an Austrian Archduke, says the correspondent, who adds that the discussion at the German main headquarters had the following bases:

The Germans demanded that Austria send to the western front from 10 to 15 divisions of picked troops. Emperor Charles and his advisers made a counter demand that Germany make further declarations regarding Belgium, guaranteeing evacuation, restoration, and an indemnity, and made a powerful movement in the direction of peace; and that the Polish question be solved in a manner favorable to Austrian wishes. Advisers of the Austrian emperor, it is declared, emphasized that the opposition of Austrian military and public opinion to transfer troops to the western front was universal. This opposition could only be quieted if the government was assured of Polish support, which could be obtained by securing from Germany concessions on account of Poland, and if the public could be shown that the German government had been influenced in the direction of another strong effort to obtain peace. Short of this Austria would not send troops to the western front.

PETERBORO CAUGHT THE SPIRIT OF THE CHAUTAUQUA YESTERDAY

Welsh Quartette Made a Hit—The Junior Chautauqua Attracted a Large Crowd.

Peterborough caught the Chautauqua spirit well yesterday, and by the evening session there were few seats available.

In the morning the Junior Chautauqua attarcted a large number of young and old who came to see just what a supervised playground could be, and the parents and children alike were delighted by Miss Johnston's splendid management of the kiddies. Miss Margaret MacDonald, of the Conservatory staff, very generously supplied the music, and her time and technique were appreciated by both the management and children.

In the evening the Welsh quartette of singers kept the audience in roars of laughter by their humorous songs. "They Go Wild Over Me" especially took the fancy of the public. Rev. Dr. Davidson's originally intended address on the "Camouflage of Kaiserism" was changed to an interesting talk on Ireland, illustrated by a series of beautiful slides of the prominent men in church and politics, and of the beauties of the country.

Whistle of G.T.R. Engine Not Blown Because of City Bylaw

Coroner's Jury Found That George Morrison's Death Was Result of an Accident—He Was Struck at G.T.R. Crossing on August 9th.

WALKED ROUND THE GATE

That George Morrison died from the effects of a shock caused by his injuries when he was struck by a G.T.R. train at the King Street crossing on Friday, August 9th, and that the circumstances were wholly accidental, was the verdict presented by the coroner's jury last night.

Mr. A. S. Ross testified that the late Mr. Morrison had passed the gates before they went down.

Mr. Seth Adlam, a shipper at the Peterborough Lock Co., stated emphatically that the gates were down before Morrison came to them, and that he (Morrison) walked around the end of the gate.

The gateman, John A. Horner, said that the train was a block away when he put the gates down. He also saw Morrison come around the end of the gate, but as many pedestrians do this and wait until the train goes by, he did not take any more notice of him. Morrison was right on the track when Horner noticed him next. He was using crutches at the time.

Mr. George Jobbitt, a G.T.R. conductor, did not see the accident, but said that he prevented Morrison from being run down about ten days before.

By-law Against Whistling.

William Dolby, the engineer, said that there is a by-law against blowing the whistle on the train, but that the bell must be rung. It had been ringing for two miles down the track, and was ringing when the accident occurred.

Frank Raines, who was with Mr. Adlam at the time, corroborated the latter's evidence.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch, who attended Morrison, found him on the enclosed space just south of the station. He was suffering a great deal, and was taken to the hospital. Dr. McCulloch stitched his wounds, but the case was hopeless. He died about three o'clock the same day. He had a lacerated wound over the right eyebrow, some injuries on his arm, one of the ribs on his right side was fractured, and another bone was crushed.

The jury returned their verdict at 10 p.m.

Are Pushing Enemy Back

Only Matter of Time Before Germans Will Have to Evacuate Lassigny.

(United Press Service.)

(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, Aug. 7.— Almost yard by yard the French and British are prying their way between five villa points in the Germans' Picardy line, rendering the enemies' hold on certain places more and more precarious.

At the extreme southern corner of the battle front the French already have shoved Gen. Von Bohem over the edge of the important Lassigny heights, dominating the country for miles around. They are now pushing slowly over the difficult country south-west of Lassigny, which is cut up into little hills and valleys that are ideal for machine gun nests.

Tightening the Line.

Carefully and methodically, Marshal Foch is tightening the crescent shaped line around both Lassigny and Roye, exerting pressure on the corns of the crescent between Chaulnes and Roye, between Roye and Lassigny, and in the centre of both crescents. Meanwhile, he is aiming a thrust directly between Lassigny and Noyon. Further north the crescent is less pronounced. From their new positions the French hold under their guns Butte De Plemont, Bois De Reserve and Mont Reinaux. They also cover Noyon from the westward and southwestward, wherefor it seems but a matter of time before the Germans will be forced to evacuate Lassigny, the second of the bulwarks of the present line to go.

PETERBORO MUSIC DEALERS MOTORED TO SOUTH BEACH

On Thursday afternoon the six music dealers in Peterborough — the J. M. Greene Music Co., the Heintzman Co., F. Whitehouse, J. W. Stewart, the Peterborough Music Co., and J. M. Fife—joined forces and entertained their employees, numbering thirty, to a delightful trip to the lakes. The party motored to South Beach, where a sumptuous dinner was served at the hotel, after which the dealers and representatives from the employees delivered eloquent speeches. After dinner some sports, such as pillow fights, baseball and racing, were indulged in, then to vary up the programme, the yacht "Alberta" took the party around the lakes. Returning, a splendid musical programme was given, contributed to by Mr. Asa Huycke and Miss Great Lebar, who sang, and some choruses by the guests. A charming little dance was given.

Returning home by motor, the picnickers declared they had never spent a happier day, and the employees expressed their hearty appreciation of so generous an entertainment. The officers who were responsible for the trip were J. M. Greene, president; J. Fife, secretary; F. Whitehouse and H. Britton, the committee.

SEPTEMBER IN ALGONQUIN PARK.

September in Algonquin Park, Ontario, is one of the most delightful months of the year. A beneficial holiday can be enjoyed with all the comforts of home at "The Highland Inn," situated in the midst of a charming wilderness on Cache Lake. It is also a good month for the camper and canoeist. Splendid fishing is found in the innumerable lakes (over 1500) that nestle in the forests of pine and balsam. Don't leave it until the last minute to make your reservation at the Inn, and write to Miss Jean Lindsay, Manager, Algonquin Park Station, Ontario, for rates, etc., or to any Grand Trunk Railway agent, or C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, for handsome illustrated booklet, telling you all about the district.

SAILORS' RELIEF WEEK.

The announcement that the week of ...ptember 1st to the 7th has been ...osen for the Sailors' Relief Fund ...ds our people animated by the deep... gratitude inspired by the enemy's ...verse on the Marne. The German ...ient thrust at Paris has been sent ...ck and straightened out along the ...ale river, after an alarming ad...nce had been turned into a rout. The armies of the Allies struck the ...ow, but the dim, grim power of the ...itish navy was behind them. The ...mely assistance of the American ...ldiers was effected by their safe ...ansport, a shipping feat that has ...en astonishing in its magnitude and ...berity. If some of us are unable ... appreciate the service of the fleet ... maintaining our supremacy of the ...as, we must all realize its share in ...is latest triumph. Our sighs of re...f therefore, if sincere and heart...lt, should be coined during the first ...ek in September for the aid and ...sistort of the wives and soldiers of ...e sailors whose sacrifice paid for ...ir restored sense of security.

MAY CURTAIL COAL SUPPLY.

Is there a danger of diminished coal ...upplies for Peterborough next win...r as a result of the Fuel Controller ...xing the gross margin for this city? ...The gross margin, he explained in ...is notification, means the difference ...n the const of the coal f.o.b. Peter...borough and the retailer's selling ...rice in lots of one ton or there...bouts.

Coal dealers augment the supplies ...hey receive from the mines with ...hich they have established a con...nection by purchasing in the open ...market from what the trade calls in...dependent companies. Large ship...ments of this independent coal saved ...Peterborough last winter from a short...age that would have caused wide...spread suffering. But this coal costs ...he dealer considerably more than that ...which he receives from the companies ...for whom he is virtually a local dis...tributor. Hence if he continues to ...buy from these two sources, it fol...lows that he will have two different ...cost prices.

Since the gross margin is fixed, he ...must quote two selling prices, and two selling prices of coal of equal quality promises no end of trouble for him. For example, to-day the dealer receives a carload from his regular company and sells it at $11 a ton. To-morrow a shipment arrives from an independent company to whom he had to pay $1.50 a ton more than the other coal. It is manifest that he must quote this coal at $12.50 to maintain his profits. The result would be one group of customers paying $11 a ton and another group paying $12.50. Such a discrepancy would lead to loud complaints, and the dealer may be tempted to depend upon his "line" company for whatever quantity they can supply him.

The coal dealer has had more than his share of worries during the past two years, and it would be natural to expect that he would avoid the difficulties that loom behind purchases of independent coal under the new regulation. As a direct result, the city would be deprived of the emergency supplies bought from the independents, and the apparent shortage would become more threatening. It seems to be a matter the Council's Fuel Committee might investigate for the purpose of assuring the people that the dealers will not relax their efforts to obtain all the coal possible for next winter. Should their intentions be as feared, then the Council faces the duty of increasing the reserve it is gathering for the citizens in order that there may be no deficiency from any curtailment in the retailers purchases.

TWO WAR-TIME ELECTIONS.

In a few months a new House of Representatives will be elected in the United States, and in all probability there will be a general election in the United Kingdom. Votes representing about 150,000,000 English-speaking people will be cast. It will be impossible to keep party politics out of these contests. The old alignment of partyism, it is true, may not be preserved, but there will be a government seeking vindication and support, and a party or a group of parties opposed to the government. There will be charges and counter-charges, and it will be difficult for the antagonists to keep their heads and to be fair.

In the United States, although the maintenance of President Wilson in office does not depend on the party complexion of the House, he is, to quote the Washington correspondent of the New York Post, "strongly suspected of wanting a Democratic Congress elected next fall," and such suspicion is "well founded." The correspondent, Mr. Lawrence, adds:

"The President doesn't see why Chairman Hays, of the Republican National Committee, and Col. Roosevelt and former President Taft should be pointing out that the country can be kept out of ruin and disaster only by electing a Republican Congress, while he as the leader of the Democratic party, which they hope to oust, should have to remain absolutely silent and without means of defence. Certainly Mr. Wilson will want a Democratic Congress elected, and when the opportune time comes in the autumn, no doubt he will say so in his own way, and give reasons."

There will probably, however, be nothing out of which the friends of the Kaiser can take comfort. The Republican party is as strong for the allies as the Democratic party; and if there are pro-Germans, they are probably in both parties, and have little hope of any result that will please them.

In Great Britain the situation will be much more complicated. The Government is composed of Liberals and Conservatives. The opposing elements are even more varied. There will be Irish Home Rulers, followers of Mr. Asquith, and followers of Mr. Henderson, the Labour leader. As to the war, Mr. Sydney Webb, in an article in the New Republic says: "Substantially, the official programmes of all three parties (Government, Asquith and Henderson) will be identical. Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Asquith, and Mr. Henderson—differing mainly in phrascology and in the proportion allowed to particular details — will alike declare that we must fight for the aims laid down by President Wilson; and nevertheless neglect no honest overtures of peace from the enemy." This, however, is a declaration made in a period of comparative calm and may be shaken to pieces by the shock of a fiercely-fought election. We can hardly expect the Government to take any other position than that its return to power is essential to the allied cause. Fair and unfair arguments will be used. Lloyd George has made enemies as well as friends, and around his personality the battle will rage furiously. There is a pacifist element in the Labour Party, and it will be exceedingly difficult to maintain unity in its ranks. The Labour party has a comprehensive and intelligent scheme for social reconstruction after the war. It is unfortunate that this cannot be considered on its merits, and this can hardly be done in a war-time election.—Toronto Star.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Unanimous.

"The worst days of the war are still in store for Germany," the Kaiser is quoted in a German newspaper. Wherein, for the first time in four years, the Kaiser and the rest of the world seem to be in full accord.—Detroit News.

Go Out to Meet It.

Should a future coal shortage be judged inevitable, the public would welcome now emergency measures of whatever nature to relieve the situation after the snow flies. Efforts of a "heatless day" character, adopted in time, might save considerable hardship later on. After the warning of last winter's abnormal conditions, there will be little excuse for anyone in a responsible place who is caught napping this winter.—Montreal Star.

All In a Day's Work.

With one or two halts for petrol two British army aviators have just completed a flight from England to Egypt, a distance of two thousand miles. The story is told in a ten-line cabled despatch. Were not things of greater interest happening every day those aviators would find themselves and their feat the centre around which news stories consuming pages would be written. As it is the official report dismisses the feat as "merely a bit of routine work." Some day that will be said of a flight across the Atlantic.—New York Herald.

"No Nearer Solution."

"It was to have been taken for granted that the United States and Japan would reach an agreement with the Entente Powers in regard to joint action in Siberia. But whatever is done in Siberia, the Russian problem is little, if any, nearer solution than it was before. Any policy that is adopted must necessarily be a matter of guesswork. The opportunities to go wrong are almost infinite and the chances of going right are few and doubtful."—New York World.

What Prussia Has Done.

Germany has lost in potential lives the equivalent of 4.5 per cent. of its total pre-war population, Austria 5 per cent., and Hungary 7 per cent. The present war, by the fall of births it has occasioned, cost belligerent countries of Europe not less than 12½ millions of potential lives. While the war has filled the graves it has emptied the cradles. At the present time every day that the war continues means the loss of 7,000 potential lives to the United Kingdom, France, Italy, and the Central Empires. Race suicide among European people on the most colossal scale has been the outstanding result of German militarism.

SMALL STORES need advertising as well as large ones. If the small dealer fears that his little ad. will be lost in a newspaper carrying large ads., he should be reminded if this were true, it would follow that his little store located in a city with large stores, would also be lost.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Every child has a right to such an education as will qualify for life's duties. This is recognized as a patriotic duty by the state. The permanence of our political institutions depends on the intelligence of our citizenship. "The bayonets of foreign soldiers are less to be feared than are the ballots of ignorant voters." The welfare of the state depends more on the moral and religious training of her citizens than on their intellectual training, yet the state makes no provision for this moral discipline. In some cases it makes it difficult or even impossible to secure such training. The training of the mind is not all. There must be a training of the moral sensibilities, particularly the will. Not all this is the duty of the public school; part is the duty of the church, but the largest part is the function of home. Every child deprived, by what ever means, of the education and training is defrauded out an inalienable right, and when he comes into the inheritance of citizenship, may be depended upon to avenge himself on the society that perpetrated the fraud upon him.

MOTHERS VACATION.

One of our exchanges says that we hate to admit it—we men folks—but mother is about the only person around the house who never gets a real vacation.

Mothers are peculiar, from the standpoint of husbands and sons and daughters. A husband will go on a vacation just as sure as the season for vacation comes, and no matter whether business is flourishing or not. Perhaps the fish are not actually calling him—but he thinks they are. Daughter, too, packs her travelling bag when she wants to and starts off for some college mate's home for a few days or weeks. Brother starts off on an automobile tour or goes to some river resort for a week or so.

But mother too often stays at home and makes things comfortable and happy for the members of the family who happen to be there.

Does mother ask for a vacation? Of course not! Mother doesn't have time to ask for one. She works from sun to sun and longer. She sews for daughter, mends for son, fixes up the last summer's Palm Beach for father. She gets daughter's vacation clothes ready. She sends her boy away on an excursion. She sees that dad's apparel is fixed up all right before he leaves for the fishing waters—but she stays at home.

All of which shows that there is something vitally wrong with the make-up of ordinary folk in these days. If we had the proper respect for mother we would compel her to take her vacation—and then we would take ours, if conditions are right.

So why not change things a mite this summer.

Why not go to mother and insist that she go away for a couple of weeks or months to visit back home or to get a change of living at a little summer resort?

There are many so-called homes that do not deserve the name at all. Home means comfort, but when we have it fixed up so elaborately that we must sit in the garret or the back within, does a good work for civilization.

If you ask a child where home is he would say where mother is. Home of our childhood, where mother reigns queen, soothes our heartaches, ministers to our needs, protects us from the blasts of life. This is home on earth. But we must strive to secure the home yard to genuinely enjoy ourselves, then it is the time we made a change and turned out the too-good-to-use articles and substitute for them real homely things that we could enjoy every day of the year and every moment of the day.

The housewife, who at night raises the shades of her prettily furnished parlour, that the world in passing may catch a glimpse of the happy picture "where they know not the sorrow of time." Home beyond the dark river of death, where no sweet ties are severed, with God the Father, God of Son, our Saviour, our mother and father, brothers and sisters, all there, in that beautiful "home of the soul."

Is not the happiest man or woman the most successful in the highest sense of the word? Given the comforts of life, is a thing more desirable than the sunshine of a happy home, where a loving wife, and merry, happy children abide, and where friends congregate for cheerful, inspiring association? Industry and temperance and courage will bring to any man the comforts of life. Add to this a kind heart and a generous, tactful consideration toward all men and life is complete.

Some men say they are perfectly willing to spend their whole lives in making their wives happy, but they don't spend any money for the same purpose.

The roots of nine-tenths of the failures in integrity, the departures from honesty, the deceits, the trickery, lies in the false standards of the home.

Marriage seems never so much a failure to a man as when something goes wrong at home that he can't possibly blame his wife for.

When a man has no mind of his own he can easily find a woman who will give him a piece of hers.

The world would be much better than it is if people would live up to their obituary notices.

The way never to have cloudy weather is to have the sun inside of you.

Count no expense loss that makes the home more delightful.

We are happy in this world just in proportion as we make others happy.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

FILM INSTRUCTS AVIATORS.

Various Problems in Machine Gunnery Taught by Motion Pictures.

AN AMERICAN AVIATION TRAINING CAMP IN ENGLAND.—The moving picture is being widely used in training of American pilots in this country. The young flying officers who are sent to the Armament School here to acquaint themselves with the use of airplane guns and gun gears find their three weeks' course a most interesting one, owing partly to the large share which the moving-picture machine plays in the instruction.

The pupil is not required to sit out a lengthy lecture read aloud from the notes of an instructor. Instead, the various branches of gunnery training, such as the stripping and assembling of guns and the various points to be observed before, during, and after flight, are demonstrated by films, accompanied by concise explanations by competent officers.

Frequently a film is run over the screen several times at different speeds, so that the pupil gets a very intimate idea of the process being illustrated. Monotony and complexity find no place in this method of training.

The films standardize the correct methods, and their instructional value is far reaching. The film work is not confined to gunnery alone, but is continued in the other technical courses, such as aerial tactics and bomb dropping. According to British instructors, the use of the film has shortened and improved the course of training in these departments very materially.

COLLARS ARE BARRED FROM THIS PARADE

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. — Charter members of the Anti-Collar League announced last night that their campaign for the emancipation of male necks would be formally launched with a mass meeting at Coney Island to-day. S. Leighton Frooks, father of the movement, will preside.

From the Island the regulars and the recruits will move upon Manhattan, assembling at Columbus Circle in the evening for a parade down Broadway to demonstrate devotion to the cause.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

Pains and aches, stiffness of the joints, lumbago and rheumatism tell of poisons left in the blood by sluggishness of the liver and kidneys.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

ROMANCE OF WAR BY CRIPPLE WHO "FAKED"

Rene Betrand Was a Great Hero Till the Police Got Him.

HAD MANY MEDALS

PARIS, Aug. 17. — The heroic exploits and hair-breath escapes of D'Artagnan, as narrated by Dumas in "The Three Musketeers," fade into comparative insignificance when compared with the achievements of Rene Bertrand, as told by himself. Minus an arm and a leg, with nine medals glittering on his breast, and asserting that his body more than 30 bullet bullet and bayonet wounds, "Pte. Rene Betrand of the French colonel infantry" posed in Paris as the greatest hero of the war.

Now he has been arrested as perhaps one of the war's greatest fakirs and the police authorities declare that he lost his leg and arm in a railway accident and that imprisonments instead of five citations compose his record. It was the publication of Betrand's photograph in a French newspaper that led to his undoing.

Meantime, while reveling in the fruits of his own romance Betrand enjoyed the confidence of army officers and the credit of the leading Paris cafes. One famous and fearless aviator made Pte. Betrand his godson and "adopted him for the balance of the war."

The medals he wore included the Cross of the Legion of Honour, the Military Medal, the War Cross with seven palms and five stars, the British Military Cross, the Belgian War Cross, the Colonial Medal, Medal of Morocco, and the medal for saving life, and the medal for wounds. In addition he wore the "fouragere" of the legion of honour.

Where he got them has not been disclosed, but to account for them Betrand constructed a story of wonderful incidents. According to his tale he won the military medal by saving the lives of two officers and was himself wounded in the thigh when surrounded by natives while fighting with the French Territorial Forces in Morocco, in 1913.

Then according to his own story, Betrand won the war cross in a patrol exploit in the present war, when, after his companions were killed, he captured a whole German cooking outfit at Laon, having killed most of the cooks. Next, fighting with the British on the Somme he won the military cross by capturing 12 Germans single-handed. Meantime he had been captured five times by the Germans but always managed to escape.

In the next chapter of his biography Betrand appears in the fight around Monastir on the Macedonian front where he simultaneously operated four machine guns and wrecked such an awful havoc with the enemy that their attack was beaten off. At the battle of Monastir he essayed to rescue an officer who lay wounded in No Man's Land and was himself wounded in the abdomen. Despite his pain he dragged the officer back to safety and went out again to rescue a wounded nurse. In the last trip his arm was shattered by a bullet and later was amputated.

Next we find Betrand a passenger on board a ship bound for France. The torpedo which hit the vessel shattered one of Betrand's legs. Calmly amputating it with his knife Betrand bound up the stump, dragged himself to the rail, threw himself overboard, paused long enough to rescue the captain and swam to a piece of drift wood where he lived for three days and three nights before being rescued by a Spanish vessel. For this Betrand said he received the medal of the legion of honour.

Numerous stars and leaves of palms that Betrand wore upon his war cross had been acquired, according to his tale, by 12 distinct acts of heroism worthy of the coveted cross, but the details of these incidents have not yet been given to

NO ANTHRACITE COAL FOR RAILWAYS THIS WINTER

MONTREAL, Aug. 15.—The supply of anthracite coal for Canadian householders next winter, will be helped out by an order of the Canadian Railway Board, directing the railways to use no anthracite in stations or elsewhere except in the Baker heaters used in passenger cars when heat from the engine is unavailable. These require anthracite. In addition to the annual ten million tons of bituminous coal required for locomotives and in railway shops, the roads had estimated their requirements of anthracite this year at 96,000 tons. Of this amount the new orders of the Canadian Railway War Board will save over 60 per cent.

Would Beat Charlie Chaplin.

An irascible and not very judicial person had been listening to a lengthy argument on whether Ireland should or should not have Home Rule. Finally he could contain himself no longer and burst out: "I wish they'd give 'em Home Rule and then give me the motion picture rights."

Chautauqua Music

The Artists Use a Williams' New Scale Piano.

An interesting feature of the musical part of the Chautauqua course of entertainments now going on is that the piano used is a WILLIAMS NEW SCALE, supplied direct from the factory. It is an extremely rich-toned instrument and the attention of those who attend is directed to it.

The Williams New Scale Piano, has been the favorite instrument of so many of the great artists who have visited Canada that its purity of tone is becoming more and more known throughout the world wherever these talented people travel. Peterborough people can hear it any time at the Green Music Store.

The "Williams' New Scale Piano" is the big leader.

Canadians a Band of Brothers Show Same Old Dash and Bravery

No Jealousy Between the Divisions and Battalions, Esprit de Corps is Splendid—Took Gallant Part in Recent Battle.

A WELL ORGANIZED "SHOW"

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES IN FRANCE, Aug. 16 (by J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent).—The better one comes to know the Canadians the more one realizes the band of brothers they are. There is no jealousy between divisions and divisions, brigade and brigade, or battalion and battalion. All have the highest admiration for the other fellow, and most modest conception of the value of their own particular job. There is a total absence of "swank." They have pride in their force and in the intense satisfaction that they are Canadians, but there is nothing personal about it. They are part and parcel of a wonderfully efficient machine, each carrying on his allotted job in humbleness of spirit.

TYPICAL OF FORCE.

The anecdotes of battle that follow are garnered in a visit to a couple of units and are therefore typical of the entire force. The diaries of battalion commanders must teem with them, and in time these will be available to the Canadian people as a priceless record of a great feat of arms. In the meantime, such as these may serve. All day Thursday, when the battle opened, great difficulty was met in advancing on our extreme left. The nature of the ground and strength and depth of the enemy defence made of this a much harder nut to crack than the comparatively free going over the prairie to the north. Finally it was decided that the only way to advance was to turn the left flank. A famous Quebec battalion was entrusted with the task. They had to take up their position in the dark by the aid only of the stars, maps and compasses. Only military men can comprehend the difficulty of the undertaking. At the appointed hour—half-past four in the morning—they were on their ground, whence they advanced and took the position, forcing the entire enemy line in this sector to fall back, with trifling loss to us.

WON THE BET.

One officer had a bet with another that he would be in the Boche divisional headquarters at Quesnel first on Thursday night. It was a wild race, and was not settled until Friday morning, when the winner actually took possession of the quarters while his troops were still fighting at the far end of the town. He captured the entire enemy divisional plant. Shorly after the loser came along and had to content himself with humbler billets. This was nine miles from the starting point of Thursday morning.

The advance of a Manitoba battalion was the record of the battle, being over twenty thousand yards from our front line. One officer fell while leading on his men against a machine gun nest that was enfilading the line. "Come on, boys," he cried, "we don't care for machine guns."

FIVE WOUND STRIPES.

He bore five wound stripes. Another battalion was directed to take a wood. The colonel found it alive with Boches, making it impossible to pass without being mowed down by machine guns. The first three companies were hotly engaged, and could not be broken off. The colonel got hold of the fourth company and personally organized an attack on a corner of the wood in face of heavy machine-gun fire. That portion of the wood was cleared, making it possible for other companies to proceed towards their objective and outflank the entire position, compelling its garrison to surrender. While marching down a road this battalion was attacked by eighteen German aeroplanes flying low and sweeping the road with machine-gun fire. The order was given for the men to scatter, and not one was hit. A cavalry squadron galloping down the same road also escaped without a casualty.

BEST ORGANIZED SHOW.

One officer, summing up the battle, said it was the best organized show he had ever seen. The arrangements were perfect and worked without a hitch. Within twenty-four hours of the casualties the men reported to replace them and the supplies came through as regularly as in the camp.

THE FIRST LINE OF DEFENCE

Pure blood is the body's first line of defense against disease. Strong, healthy blood neutralizes the poisons of invading germs, or destroy the germs themselves. That is why many people exposed to disease do not contract it. Those whose blood is weak and watery and therefore lacking in defensive powers are most liable to infection. Everybody may observe that healthy, red blooded people are less liable to colds and the grippe than pale, bloodless people. It is the bloodless people who tire easily, who are short of breath at slight exertion, who have poor appetites, and who wake up in the mornings as tired as when they went to bed. While women and girls chiefly suffer from bloodlessness the trouble also affects both boys and men. It simply affects girls and women to a greater extent because there is a greater demand upon their blood supply.

To renew and build up the blood, there is no remedy can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They tone up the entire system, make the blood rich and red, feed and strengthen starving nerves, increase the appetite, put colour in the cheeks, give refreshing sleep and drive away that unnatural tired feeling. Plenty of sunlight and wholesome food will do the rest.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Voice of The People

Peterborough, Aug. 16th, 1918.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the Examiner of August 15th, I have seen that Mlle. Therese Clemenceau, daughter of the French Premier, the "Tiger of France," is to marry Sergt. J. Jung, of the French army. This is very welcome news to me, as Jules Jung is an old chum of mine. We were brought up together and spent our carefree boyhood days together in their manor, "Petitville," at Bischwiller, in Alsace, where my father was the manager of their estate, and where his parents came from Besancon (France) to spend the most part of the year.

When the French frontier was closed in 1887 by severe passport regulations, their visits became seldom. He afterwards took up the career as lawyer at the court of Paris. Both his parents are Alsatians. His father died on May 24th, 1894. He was supreme judge of the court of appeal at Besancon. He had a state funeral and his body was brought over the frontier for burial in the family vault at Bischwiller. Only last week I received a letter from his mother, wherein she tells me that her son Jules went through the battles of the Marne, Amiens, the Champagne, and is now at the Somme, near the British troops, where he is sergeant-artificier in an artillery unit, sending over greetings to the Boche lines in form of shrapnels. About a year ago the German government sequestered their manor at Bischwille, and where there used to be a merry gathering of high French nobility, cultivating French art, music, literature and sport. A Prussian looting junker holds his diabolical sway, and makes good use of all the stock in stable, barn and cellar. But he will not enjoy it for long. The French Poilus mean it, when they say, "On les aura," and they will get them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the kindness in giving me a space in your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours truly,
EMILE BAUMER.

Birthday Parties.

On Wednesday, Aug. 14th, Master Donald Richardson, of Viamede, celebrated his birthday. A large cake was sent to him by a Peterborough friend, and the little fellow took the greatest delight in passing plates of his cake so that everyone in the dining room would have a piece. As he is a great favourite in the house, he received several other gifts. In the evening the guests at Viamede were taken out for a launch ride by Mrs. Richardson. The launch was full and a number of boats were towed. The weather man was kind and the day was a great success.

Wednesday was also the birthday of Flight Lieut. Goubjila, and it was suitably celebrated by the many friends the young man has made since he came to Viamede. He also received gifts and congratulations.

WHAT SIMCOE THINKS OF THE CHAUTAUQUA

An Unqualified Success—Arrangements Made for Next Season.

The following letter has been received by Mr. C. E. Smith from Mr. H. S. Macpherson, Principal of the Public School in Simcoe, who was chairman of the Chautauqua Committee in that town. It speaks for itself.

Dear Mr. Smith,—The Canadian Chautauqua series just concluded in Simcoe was an unqualified success We entered into the contract with some little trepidation as it was a new undertaking for us, but soon found we had no grounds for fear of success. The programme was of a very high order and so varied as to meet the tastes of everybody. It was interesting, educative and inspirational to children and adults alike. Those who attended one session rarely missed the remainder of them.

The superintendent in charge was very gentlemanly in his business relations and exceedingly thoughtful of the enjoyment and comfort of the audiences.

So well pleased were we that the committee immediately signed the contract for a Chautauqua next year.

Baby's Great Danger During Hot Weather

More little ones die during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and stomach troubles come without warning and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly, the short delay too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in homes where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if these troubles come suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will cure the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Harden in Big Protest Against Prussian Policy

Says Frankly British and Americans Are Fighting and Dying Simply for Their Ideals.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Another violent attack on Prussian policy, with a warning of the storm brewing in Russia, and a frank tribute to British and American soldiers fighting for their ideals, has just been published in the Zukunft by Maximilian Harden, the free-spoken German editor. An official despatch from France quotes extracts from the article, commenting particularly upon the action of the German censors in permitting it to appear.

"At the moment when the fire of Slavic hatred coming from the four corners of Russia is developing into one single immense flame," Harden asked, "how can our rulers think of finding supporters for throne and supplying candidates for them? Are our rulers desirous of supporting the plans of the adversary and uniting in one single fire all the sparkling flames which are burning or smouldering between Vladivostok and Sebastopol, between Murmansk and Flume?"

Harden declared the soul of modern Germany is dominated by the idea of bondage; is summed up in "down on your knees." He attacked the Prussian House of Lords, and especially Prince Salm-Horstmar, who said, like his Emperor, that the present war was nothing but the conflict between the American conception of the world and the Germanic one.

"You think that the British and Americans are such as the conservative papers represent them," he wrote. "They have proved themselves to be very different on the Yser, at Arras, and at Dormans. They have shed the best of their blood, spent hundreds of thousands without dreams of conquest, simply for their ideals. Does this in any way correspond to the picture that you have drawn of them?"

WERE BRIDE AND GROOM IN NEWARK SIXTY YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamilton Celebrate Their Diamond Wedding Yesterday.

Sixty years ago in the parsonage of a little Methodist church in Newark, N.J., the wedding was solemnized of Jane Wilson and Francis Hamilton, yesterday surrounded by their children and friends, the bride and groom of 1858 celebrated their diamond wedding at their home since 1866, 173 Hunter street east.

The bride and groom, who are in perfect health after a long and happy married life, look forward with their children to many more such years. Six children, sixteen grandchildren, and six great grandchildren are living, and of these, six grandsons have served for their King. Lieut. W. Hamilton, at present recruiting in Chicago, won his Military Cross and was wounded twice while serving with the Canadians; Sapper Edward Carl Russel, Winnipeg, returned shell-shocked; Gunner W. Patterson has been gassed twice; Sergt. Edwin B. Patterson has been at the front since the first; Gunner Walter Patterson is in training at Petawawa, and Driver Albert Huffman is in England in hospital after along period at the front.

Interesting Memories.

Mr. Hamilton, to-day as hale and hearty as many a man of 60, although he is 86 years of age, has many interesting memories. Born in Ireland, he crossed the sea in a sailing ship in four weeks when a mere boy. He lived from '56 to '62 in Connecticut, when he came to Canada to reside for four years in Manvers, and reached Peterborough in '66. Naturally most of his early friends have gone, but that he and Mrs. Hamilton are still well beloved, is testified by the showers of bouquets received on their anniversary yesterday. Ten years ago they celebrated their golden wedding.

Barbers in Bronx Converse Loudly About "More Pay"

Their Topic Turns From War to Wages—Want Minimum of $20 a Week.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The barbers of the Bronx, as fine a group of artists as ever lathered an ear, held an indignation meeting and decided to strike while the towel is hot. After due consideration and undue conversation ,it was determined that war conditions, including tipless Tuesday, has driven the tonsorial trades to the wolves, and that, unless the shop owners get down on their elbows and surrender the works, not a chin in the Bronx will be nicked for the current year.

According to Frank Alter, of the Bronx local of the International Journeymen Barber's Union, the increase in cost of shaves and haircuts has literally wrenched the heart of the Bronx type of shavee. Heretofore, when a Bronx customer had been changed from a ruin to a Rembrandt with the assistance of a sane skilled and sanitary barber, it was his custom to place at least one dime in the plump palm of the operator. Of late, according to Mr. Alter, the barber has been the recipient of one hard look at the end of each tonsorial attack, and indignation has grown from a pate to a pompadour.

Three hundred barbers gathered at Bathgate Hall, No. 500 East 172d street, and, after cheering lustily at every mention of money, decided to walk out until such time as the owners of shops recover from the hot spell and consider the help. All that the men desire, as their speaker's explained at the top of their superior lungs, is to make something more tangible than lather. They want $20 a week in North American money as a minimum and they want what they earn when they get it. Furthermore and nothwithstanding, they desire half of all profits of their chairs exceeding $26 a week, and will work from eight in the morning until eight at night with one day off each week. The Master Barber's Association has read this demand and issued a collective growl which could be readily heard in Newark. They intimate that they would rather have the residents of the Bronx look the way they do than open their shops under such conditions.

How to Look and Feel Bright In Hot Weather

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, just bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. You will find this more refreshing than an hour's rest.

As a wrinkle-remover the saxolite lotion is remarkably successful. Its action is almost magical. The deepest furrows, as well as the finest lines—whether due to age, illness, weather or worry—are immediately affected. Enlarged pores are reduced, flabby skin is "drawn in," facial contour is improved wonderfully. The simple, ingredients of course can be had at any drug store, and you need not hesitate to try the lotion, as it will not harm any skin in the least.

The Council is confident that a large number of citizens desire to hear Mr. Bancroft, and it is likely that Victoria Hall will be engaged for the meeting, further particulars of which will be announced later.

MR. ED. ELLIOTT ISSUES WARNING TO PETERBORO COUNTY FARMERS

Condemns Scheme to Shoulder Farmers With the Burden of Increased Expenditures for Roads.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS

Mr. Editor,

Dear Sir,—Having been a close observer of municipal expenditure for 25 years, I have honestly opposed the adoption of the county road system by the County Council. Some 20 years ago, when the Reform Government of Ontario set aside the million dollar grant for such purpose, and on a similar basis as to expenditure, after careful consideration, I, publicly and in ordinary conservation with any fellow-farmers, opposed it. I pointed out the facts as I saw them and see them to-day, namely, that 100 per cent. of the farmers contributed heavily to an expenditure when only 20 per cent. of them benefited directly.

The present Government has added and in many ways established an improved system, such as suburban roads, that would receive assistance from the cities and towns where there is a certain population, yet it is so provided that not more than ½ mill on the dollar can be spent by the cities or towns in any year for that purpose. Farmers may be taxed any rate that such road building or maintenance demands. Where does the traffic come from that destroys the roads to-day? Any ordinary gravel road such as we had on the main roads of this county five years ago would carry the lighter cars that are used by the farmers, or in fact carry the 3-ton cars used by many of the citizens of the cities 15 miles an hour without being more than ordinarily deteriorated, but nothing short of a paved road will stand a heavy car driven at from 30 to 40 miles per hour. What roads do the city and town people use in the country? Why practically none but the main roads, therefore the condition of the main roads to-day, where rough and being fired into the ditch is due to traffic such as referred to. Yet ½ mill is all that can be raised by the city and town, and the distance is limited. According to population, from 4 to 6 or 8 miles from the city is town. On the side roads and concessions throughout the county are they not in as good condition to-day, or are they not better, than they were ten years ago? You will all agree that they are. Then the trouble crops up on the main roads, and that trouble is due to autos and largely, if not altogether, to the excessive speed of these heavy cars. These people from the cities and towns pay a substantial license for the privilege of driving autos, and why should the farmers of the whole county be asked to provide 80 per cent. of the funds to keep up the main roads, or 20 per cent. of the roads of the county, when those license fees could be expended on such roads without the burden to the general farmer? In a letter from the Department to our Board of Trade, it is pointed out that some $14,000 was collected from within the boundaries of the county of Peterborough as auto licenses during 1917, and that there is nothing to hinder the county from earning the same back to the county by the adoption of the country roads system, and also stating that the expenditure of the ratepayers of the county would be very little increased. The expenditure of the rural municipalities now taking in statute labour at one dollar per day, all cash appropriated, all grants from the county and the meeting of debentures by the county does not reach $30,000. But to earn the $14,000 back for maintenance of main roads of 20 per cent. of the roads of the county, the farmers would have to raise $56,000.

Do not lose sight of the facts, if the Government can legislate, which we know they can, and are doing, to have all that auto license money expended on the main roads of the county through the county road system. The Government can legislate to have those same monies paid by the citizens of the cities and towns expended on the main roads those people constantly use without burdening, as stated before, the whole farming community in order to obtain the people's own money for their benefit, and to maintain the roads that are suffering as a result of the said heavy and fast auto traffic.

It has been, and no doubt will be, used as argument to induce you to advocate the adoption of the county road system that all the other counties are drawing those licenses and you are losing that much. Do not forget to get $2.00 from the Government for road maintenance. You raise $8.00 and that is expended on 20 per cent. of the roads of the county, and do not forget that the auto money could be made available without such unequal burden. Eighty per cent. of the farmers are better without $2.00 expended, where they never benefit, when it would cost them $8 to get it or, as pointed out in the letter to the Board of Trade, "earn it back."

It is not that any glory or popularity will come to me that I have taken this stand. On the contrary, it would be much easier for me to remain silent in the matter, but I am interested in the farmer, and am ready at any time to advocate his cause, and I would be sorry to see this the last county in the Province walk into a yoke that makes the farmer more or less the human ox, providing speed ways for joy-riders in heavy automobiles.—Yours respectfully,

Ed. Elliott.

Escaped Prisoner Wants Job Of Guarding a Pen of Germans

Enemy Submits Our Men to Harshest Treatment—Now Hate the Americans—Use Russians to Build Railway Lines in Occupied Part of France.

ARE SHORT OF SUPPLIES

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 16.—While the German imperial propagandists are spreading lies alleging mistreatment of captured German wounded by the Americans, I got some first-hand information about how the Germans treat American wounded.

My information comes from Corporal M. P. Purvis, of the British Army, who was captured at Craonne on May 27, and who, escaping, entered the American lines near Fismes Monday. The prison camp in which he was held is at Ramecourt, thirty-five kilometers north-west of Fismes and near the main railroad which ran from the German Soissons-Rheims salient. The work he did took Purvis onto this railroad. He said he saw American wounded men on flat cars. They told Purvis they had been wounded seven days before. Purvis said (150 words deleted here).

The Germans were very short of medical supplies and all they had were used for their own soldiers. There were no anaesthetics for the wounded prisoners. They have almost no cloth bandages, but paper ones are used instead, even for their own wounded.

All Captives Cruelly Treated.

Unwounded American prisoners also are treated terribly, as are the English. Around the prison camp he had seen a number of signs, "Gott strafe England." After the Americans helped to drive back the Germans from the Marne some of these were changed to "Gott strafe America."

Corporal Purvis was a bank clerk before the war and is an intelligent man. I believe the utmost reliance can be placed in his story. All he said was corroborated by Private Isaac White, of the British Army, who escaped with Purvis.

Purvis also revealed that while Germans who were captured by the Russians are fighting for Germany in Russia, the Russians who were captured by the Germans were kept in prison camps and used as labourers by the German Army. Purvis said that the elaborate railroad system built by the Germans in the Soissons-Rheims salient was constructed by 2,000 Russians and by a number of English prisoners of war. He said the English also were used to harvest the wheat back of the German lines.

I asked Purvis to tell me exactly what the Germans fed him. He said that at 4 o'clock in the morning, when they started to work, they received one pint of "coffee" made from hawthorn berries; at 2 o'clock they got one pint of soup made from dried vegetables, and at 6 o'clock "coffee" again. Each day they received three-fourths of a pound of black bread, which smelled like swill and felt like rubber.

"The Boche is in a terrible predicament," he said. "They use substitutes for all foods and for everything, except three things — men, guns and ammunition. Thank God, they can't get a substitute for those!"

Worried by Americans.

Purvis said that the morale of most of the German troops was deteriorating. He also said that the success of the Americans was worrying them.

Purvis and his partner had an exciting time escaping. On Aug. 7, when they started out to work, it was not yet light. He and White slipped into some bushes and hid in a dugout all day. That night they walked toward the south. They kept this up until Monday morning, when they got in front of the American lines.

Dressed in dirty German prison garb, they looked in the early morning light like German infantrymen. An American doughboy rushed at Purvis with a bayonet. Purvis grasped the rifle and got it away from the American, who leaped upon him with his fists. With White looking on, they rolled about in the mud until their profanity caused each to recognize that the other was not a German, for Purvis thought that after his seven days' fight he had run into a German patrol, while the doughboy thought he was trying to repel a German attack. When they recognized one another the American escorted the two Tommies back to his mess and fed them.

Wants to Guard Germans.

When I saw Purvis he was bending over a tub of water, and two doughboys were scrubbing the dirtiest back I ever saw. It was the first time he had seen a piece of soap since the day he was captured, when the Germans started the drive which took them to the Marne. When I saw Purvis and White later they were dressed in American uniforms.

"Where to now?" I asked.

"Lad," said Purvis, "I'm going back to Blighty to ask King George to give me a job to guard one of our Jerry camps. That's all I ask in life. Give me that job for one week, and I can die happy."

"Now, if you have that in your head," said a professor, who had just explained a theory to his students, "you have it all in a nutshell!"—American Boy.

LAST DAY FOR DEFAULTERS.

Heavy Penalties for Infringing M.S.A. for Draft Evaders After August 24.

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—The Government emphasizes the fact that Aug. 24 is the last day upon which pardon is granted to deserters or those who have failed to report to the military authorities. The extreme penalty of the law will be visited upon defaulters after that date.

FOOD STILL SOARING.

MEATS, EGGS AND POTATOES INCREASED DURING JULY.

Ottawa, August 16. —Upward movements in wholesale and retail food prices were again recorded by the Labour Department during July. PETERBORO SIXTY YEARS AGO

The advantages of the Trent Route were thus epitomized in a letter recently addressed by W. S. Conzer, Esq., to the Chief Commissioner of Public Works:

"First—It is shorter and more direct than any other—except the Toronto and Georgian Bay, which, from its great cost may be set down as impracticable, from Chicago and the Sault Ste. Marie to the Seaboard, whether via Montreal and Quebec, or Portland, or New York.

"Secondly—It passes through a rich and fertile country, and presents fewer engineering difficulties, and could therefore be constructed for a much smaller sum than either of the two other proposed routes.

"Thirdly—Being at least two degrees further south than the Ottawa Route, it would have the advantage of being open for two or three weeks longer every season.

"Fourthly—Its terminal harbours would be large and commodious—particularly that at the mouth of the Trenton, having on one side Bay of Quinte, and on the other, by a short and comparatively inexpensive cut, the Presque Isle Bay—the safest and most commodious harbour on Lake Ontario, thus affording an easy and safe entrance to Trenton from Lake Ontario to the River St. Lawrence.

"The advantages of the Trent Route in point of distance, may be estimated by the following figures:

	Miles
From Chicago to New York via Buffalo and the Erie Canal	1615
From Chicago to New York Welland Canal and Oswego	1638
From Chicago to New York via via Huron, Nipissing, Ottawa and Caughnawaga Canal	1358
From Chicago to New York via Georgian Bay, Valley of the Trent and Oswego	1232
From Chicago to Montreal via Lake Nipissing	1005
From Chicago to Montreal via Georgian Bay and the Valley of the Trent	1003

"It will thus be seen that in point of distance to New York, the Trent Route has the advantage over the Nipissing and the Ottawa Route by 125 miles. While between Chicago and Montreal the distance is in favor of the Ottawa route 28 miles; an advantage, however, more than counterbalanced by the intricate and difficult navigation of the latter."

But the pages of a work like this are hardly the place wherein to discuss the subject, and the reader is therefore requested to regard the remarks relative to the merits of the different canal schemes now before the public as parenthetical in their character.

In 1839 the townships adjacent to Peterborough had attained to sufficient importance to be set apart as a separate district. Provisional Council was established, and a Court House and a jail erected under its auspices. It was built on the knoll or mound in the centre of the town, a beautiful site, and is a substantial and handsome structure. In 1841 the new District was declared under the name of the Colborne District, in honour of the Governor, under whose auspices, the Canal survey had been projected and carried out. A new Council was elected, and assembled for the first time in the town of Peterborough, in 1841. The Council was composed as follows:

George A. Hill, Warden.
Councillors—
Monaghan—Thos. Harper, Esq.
Smith—Stephen Nichols, Esq.
Douro—Smithin D. Gibbs, Esq.
Otonabee—Thomas Carr, Esq., Jas. Doris, Esq.
Otonabee—Jas. Doris, Esq.
Asphodel—Richard Birdsall, Esq.
Emily—Josias L. Hughes, Esq., W. Cottingham, Esq.
Ops—Francis Keely, Esq.
Fenelon—John Langton, Esq.
Verulam and Harvey — Thomas Need, Esq.
Ennismore—Daniel Costello, Esq.
Mariposa—Samuel Davidson, Esq.
Eldon—Alex. Campbell, Esq.
Dummer—Alex. Kidd, Esq.
John Darcus, Clerk.

Under its new auspices the district continued to advance with great rapidity. Among the tabular statements will be found abundant attestation of this fact; and to those statements the attention of the reader is directed. They show a steady progress in each of the townships, as well as in the district as a whole that is exceedingly gratifying.

In 1846 a charter was obtained to construct a railroad from Port Hope to Peterboro. Stock books were opened, and a considerable amount, £10,000, was subscribed. Public meetings were held both in Peterborough and Port Hope, and for a time considerable enthusiasm prevailed. But the days of railway construction in Canada had not yet commenced; that most ingenious contrivance, the Municipal Loan Fund Act, had not even been dreamt of, and owing to the difficulty of raising money, the project, unfortunately for the interests of both towns, dropped.

Until 1852 but little occurred in the history of the counties to interest the general reader. The town continued to progress slowly but steadily; but it was not until that year, when Peterboro shared largely in the railway interest that about that time seized the public mind, that any marked advance was made. It was the peculiarity of the railway legislation of 1852-3, that the large proportion of charters granted had Peterboro either for a terminal point, or an important station. The interest then excited resulted in a large influx of population and an important impetus was given to every branch of industry.

Have Purchased Two More Lots

Fine Lots Secured for Site of New Church in South End.

Two additional lots have been purchased by St. Alban's Mission which, together with the three previously purchased, will provide an area of one hundred and fifty feet by one hundred and twenty-two and a half feet, upon which to erect a new church. The plans for a church have been submitted, but there is little hope of the work being started at present. It is the intention of the officials to first build a basement and occupy it until such time the additional funds can be raised to complete the edifice.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Cleveland Owners Make Strong Appeal to Indians To Nose Out Red Hose

President Jim Dunn of the Cleveland Indians started his final pennant drive by having Manager Lee Fohl assemble all the athletes in the club house and when the bunch had seated itself and quit shuffling feet, Dunn delivered himself as follows:

"Boys, I want you to win this pennant. You can do it. You are a better ball club than the Red Sox. I know it and so do you. They are playing away from home at the present time and are losing ground. You are playing at home and gaining. But you must gain more if you are to overhaul them.

"I don't want any of you boys to feel nervous over the government's ruling. If any of you want to start work immediately at something else that comes under the government's ruling, just come to my office and I'll set to it that you are started right away. There is absolutely nothing to worry about, however, for you will all be able to finish the season and find other employment in ample time to satisfy the government officials.

"I want the pennant this year, boys, and you can deliver it to me, if you will set yourself to the task. Of course it will be a source of satisfaction to me to be the owner of the club that wins the flag, but that's not why I want it. I want to reward the fans of Cleveland for their loyalty to you through thick and thin. We have had more people patronize our games this year than any city in the American league and they have some reward coming to them. You have it in your power to produce the reward. Now if you don't think you owe it to yourselves to put your best foot forward or even to me, then by all means do it for the men, women, and children who make the grand old game possible, your loyal supporters in the Sixth city. Will you?"

That was the sum and substance of Dunn's talk, fans, and the response from the players all but raised the steel and concrete stand overhead. It was a chorus of "You bet we will, Jim" And the players meant it, too. They, like Dunn, realize this may be the last pennant race to be decided for several years to come and they will work tooth and nail to bring home the bacon.

Officers Were Elected To-day

Jack Sahrpe Was Elected Mayor of Peterboro.

The Junior Chautauqua elected officers this morning for the duration of the entertainment as follows: Mayor—Jack Sharpe, Town Clerk, Agnes Logan, Commissioners—Robert Fowler, Vernon Fuller, Paul Koster, Marguerite Tewsley and Marcelle McNulty. The little people spent a very happy morning at the "supervised playground" and were entertained by Miss Davidson, Mrs. Clayton and Miss Margaret McDonald who assisted Miss Johnson.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

THE REPLY SHE SENT.

A soldier at the front got short of money, so he sent home the following letter:

"Dear Mary,—We lost a trench this morning, and we must replace it at any cost, so will you please send me five pounds at once."

Sad to say he had a wily wife, who sent the following reply:

"Dear Jirm,—Sorry, I have not five pounds towards replacing the lost trench, but I enclose two candles to help you to look for it."

FIND BABY DEAD, BUT GAS FAILED TO KILL PARENTS

Quarter-in-the-Slot Metre Supply Caused Unconsciousness for Metcalf Couple.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17. — Mrs. Christopher Metcalf was found unconscious with her dead son in her arms in her home at No. 1,775 West Sixth Street, Coney Island. Her husband was on the floor unconscious beside the bed where the mother and boy lay. The police broke into the house. Physicians said the boy had been dead two days. Mrs. Metcalf left a letter indicating she intended killing the three. One letter, addressed to a brother, Charles Georgia, No. 26 Broadway, read:

"Dear Brother,—When you read this I will be dead. I am going to turn on the gas for Christopher and myself and also for Chris, if he is here.—Blanch."

Christopher was the son and Chris, evidently, the father. Another letter, dated August 9, and signed "Mrs. Blanch Metcalf," was as follows:

"When this reaches you it no doubt will be a great shock, but I send it to you because you are stronger and it will be more easy for you to break the news than the women folks. It will be all over when this reaches you. In the envelope you will find the key for the letter box, also in the envelope you will find papers containing the deed for this house. A life insurance policy of $2,000 of my husband is in the mortgage on the house. You will also find a policy for $500 on my life and a policy for $200 on our baby's.

"I wish that our bodies be cremated and that the funeral be very simple. Then there will be money left. The home will then be free and clear."

If Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf live, which physicians said was probable, they will owe their lives to the fact that in their apartment is a gas meter of the quarter in the slot type. The jets were turned on full. The quarter's worth of the poison was not enough to kill two persons.

A partly emptied bottle of poison was evidence of how the boy had died. The physicians said the boy evidently had swallowed half the contents.

Neighbours told the police that the Metcalf family quarrelled frequently. They were unusually noisy last Friday evening. There was a crash of glass, and a woman's voice cried, "Now it's broken." Then there was silence. For two days no sound came from the apartment. Neighbours notified the police, who made a charge of homicide against Mrs. Metcalf.

Munition Workers in Germany Are "New Rich" Class

New York, August 16. — "Conditions were terrible in Germany," said Mrs. Ida M. Otz, who has just arrived here from Dresden. "We were not allowed to talk English, and if we did in the privacy of our hotel room, some German spy in the shape of a waiter or bell boy would be sure to report us, and then an officer would come around and warn us. The Grand Union Hotel, which was always the mecca for American travellers, threw all its American guests out of the house when the United States declared war.

Uses Freight Car to Beat Huns.

"For four years we tried to get out without success. When we finally got passes out of the country we found that we would be allowed to carry nothing on the passenger train with us except the clothing that we wore. I found that there was nothing in the German regulations against our hiring a freight car and attaching it to the passenger train. We had much bric a brac, porcelains and some paintings that I simply insisted that we should not leave in Germany. Had we been unable to take it along we would have destroyed it rather than to let the Germans have it. So in March we finally succeeded in getting out, freight car and all.

"Conditions in Germany were indescribable. The one time wealthy autocrates have mostly vanished, and in their places are the munition workers, whose families form the nouveau riche in the Kaiser's land.

"I was in a candy shop one day when a man over-dressed woman came in and purchased a pound of candy, for which she paid the equivalent of seven dollars. I asked the saleswoman whether her customer was one of the town's wealthy citizens. 'Oh, no,' she replied. 'That is the wife of a munition worker. She never had any money until lately.' That illustrates the condition in Geramny today. The children all appear terribly emaciated and the old people are dying off by the thousands. The only young or middle aged men one sees are either blind or hopelessly maimed otherwise."

The Big Issue in South Africa

Reason Why the British Will Not Restore East Africa to Germany.

The insistence of Germany upon restoration of her colonial possessions in Africa, together with substantial additions to them at the expense of France and Belgium, and the equally persistent demands of Australia, of South Africa, and of many of the public men of Great Britain that Germany must not be allowed to regain her hold upon the soil of the Dark Continent, serve to lay emphasis upon the importance assigned to that portion of the world in the years following the war.

Much was heard before, the beginning of the conflict, of the Cape-to-Cairo Railway. This great project, like so many others, has had to yield its place in the public interest; but it remains a great world issue, and at the conclusion of peace negotiations, if not during them, it will emerge as a greater one.

The significance of the British determination not to allow East Africa to revert to German hands is largely concerned with the Cape-to-Cairo enterprise. It is now realized that Germany had laid plans for checkmating both the political and the commercial aims of the great transcontinental system. German maps of East Africa, drawn before the war, show several projected parallel railroad lines crossing the German territory from the coast, and stretching out their tentacles to the Congo and beyond toward the Atlantic seaboard. These roads crossed at several points the proposed route of the Cape-to-Cairo line. Had they been completed, they not only would have enabled Germany to control strategically the whole rival system extending north and south, but to extend her grip on the entire basin of the Congo; eventually she might even have essayed to conquer, as well, the Portuguese and French Atlantic colonies.

Fortunately these contingencies are made remote by the events of the war. Germany no longer has a foothold in Africa. The course of the Cape-to-Cairo road lies entirely within territory controlled by the Allies. The war has not arrested the progress of construction, and each year some notable additions are made to the long line.

It is not unlikely that the great road from end to end of Africa will figure in the peace councils. Eradication of Germany from participation in the undertaking, and from all opportunity of continuing active hostility toward it, clears the ground for an amicable programme of joint effort among the allies, and assures a peaceful and generous development of Africa's resources. Although Great Britain, France, Portugal, and Belgium are the only nations now concerned in building up means of communication in Africa, there is indeed, a strong probability that some degree of railway internationalization will result from the peace-council endeavours to adjust the colonial claims of the belligerents. This would be a long stride in the direction of international control of Central Africa, between the Zambesi and the Sahara, as advocated by the British Labour Party, and by a growing number of publicists and statesmen in Great Britain and the allied nations.—The Beilman.

Pte. Philip Russell, No. 195424, a former member of the 247th Battalion, has been severely wounded in France. His wife, Mrs. Philip Russell, 617 Downie street, has received word from the Adjutant-General at Ottawa, that he was admitted to No. 13, General Hospital, Bolonge, France, suffering from a gunshot wound in the left hip, on August 9th. Military News

Tenders for the new barracks on Barriefield reserve have been received and were forwarded to Ottawa on Wednesday. It is expected that the decision will be made promptly as the season is already well advanced. The Department of Public Works is represented in Kingston by Power & Son, architects. The barracks proposed will be permanent buildings, and will form winter quarters for the soldiers stationed here or in training here.

NO MOTIVE

The official view respecting the disappearance of Major W. J. S. Sharpe is that he disappeared of his own volition for reasons known only to himself. Nothing in connection with his official duties or any relations with his fellow officers constituted a sufficient motive for his action. Word of his whereabouts is expected before very long.

RETURNED SOLDIERS

General Mausell has issued instructions to commanding officers of units regarding recommendations for the appointment of instructors and clerks. There are still some vacancies on the subordinate staff, and preference will be given to returned soldiers when the positions are being filled.

SIBERIAN FORCE

Instructions have been received at district headquarters to recruit quota required for the Siberia Expeditionary Force. Many applications have already been received from returned officers who are eager to go. Enlistments for this force will be received at 1st Depot Battalion, at Ottawa.

DEFAULTERS ATTENTION

There still remain eight days for defaulters under the M.S.A. to report at the depot battalions and by doing so take advantage of the provisions in the proclamation regarding immunity from punishment for failure to register or otherwise comply with the Military Sercie Act. Definite results of the Government's act of clemency will not be known until after the last day, when the provost marshal's lists will be revised by striking off the names of those who have reported to the depot battalions. It is stated that drastic action will be taken to round up all defaulters after the 24th inst., and the letter of the law will be carried out in every case.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday, 67 cars, with 1,294 cattle, 140 calves, 606 hogs, and 1,888 sheep and lambs.

The market steadied yesterday, with prices practically unchanged from Monday. There was the usual light run of fresh cattle in, but with a good number left over from Monday there was no reason for anyone going short unless it were of the choice quality butcher, which were comparatively scarce. Choice heavy steers continue in good demand, at $16. Good to choice butcher continues firm from $13 to $14, but the common stuff, of which there is an over-supply this week, averages 25c. or more lower than last week.

Lambs a little better than Monday.

Hogs are still quoting at $19.50, fed this week a quarter higher was paid for several lots.

German Workmen Are Demanding More Money

Trade Unions Send a Bitter and Threatening Appeal to the Imperial Chancellor—Rising Discontent Everywhere. Unionists Assert—Must Have More Bread and Potatoes.

HIGH WAGES SWALLOWED UP

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18.—More potatoes and bread! That is the demand made on behalf of Germany's working classes by the country's trade unions in a bitter appeal sen to the Imperial Chancellor. The appeal, which Vorwarts prints, speaks of "the rising discontent in all parts of the country" and of clamant protests and angry demands which reach the trade unions from the workers and give evidence of "a most serious state of affairs."

Food conditions, so far as the working classes are concerned, the appeal says, have steadily become worse. All increases in wages have been long ago swallowed up by the rising cost of the necessaries of life. The policy of the Government leads to constant raising of prices.

"While millions of men," says the appeal, "must give their blood for the Fatherland on the battlefield, it must be regarded as the eternal shame of our time that their dependents at home are impoverished by our own people, who, by heartless profiteering, sap the last strength of the poor. The well-to-do so benefit by secret traffic in food that they do not feel the effect of the meatless weeks and other privations, but the poor and the middle classes have to go for half a month without even a single miserable piece of meat."

Under present conditions, the appeal points out, bread and potatoes are the mainstay of the working classes, and it calls upon the Chancellor to increase the rations of those commodities, as the quantities which have been given during the last year have proved to be hopelessly inadequate. An increase of the potato ration from seven to ten pounds per head weekly is especially insisted on as an "absolute necessity." The appeal concludes by warning the Chancellor that "there is no doubt but we were driving toward affairs which will be fateful unless the Government at last decides to break with the policy of favouring the producing interests and to take into account the vital needs of the people."

War Cost the States a Billion Every Month

Tremendous War Expenditure of U. S. Since Entering Struggle—Revenue From Lands.

TAXES A MINOR SOURCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. — Seventeen months of war have cost the United States Government $17,339,681,342—a billion dollars a month. This rate has increased so rapidly, however, that August expenses ran up to $1,805,513,222, or nearly $200,000,000 more than the highest previous record set in July.

These figures from the Treasury show that less than one and one-half years of modern warfare have cost the United States more than four times the combined Union and Confederate outlays for three years of the Civil War, calculated at $3,660,000,000 for the Union and $1,500,000,000 for the Confederates.

The report also shows double the rate of increase in expenditure estimated by the Government in June, then set at $100,000,000 more each month. If this rate continues, expensese for the year ending next June 30 will be much more than the $24,000,000,000 estimated, and the country may be called on to absorb more than the $16,000,000,000 of Liberty bonds now tentatively planned.

The Treasury reports also shows further that of the $17,339,000,000 cost of the war to date, $10,989,077,000 has been spent for ordinary war purposes, and $6,245,764,000 has gone as financial aid to the allies. This will be repaid eventually, and consequently may be deducted in calculating the net war expenses to the United States Government.

Taxes a Minor Source.

Only $5,631,478,000 has been gathered by the Government from taxes, customs and other minor sources of revenue since the war started, and $12,300,000,000 for Liberty loans and sales of certifictes of indebtedness, which are to be converted into Liberty bonds. This indicates that only 29 per cent. of war expenses to date have been drawn directly from the pockets of the people, and that 71 per cent. has come from popular borrowings, which will necessitate heavy tax levels long after the war.

The third Liberty loan has now brought in $4,165,635,000, which leaves only $11,000,000 of the $4,176,000,000 original subscriptions yet to be paid in. The last instalment was due three weeks ago. Income and excess profits payments trickling in during August raised the total from this source within the last year to $2,842,298,000, and officials expect this to rise gradually to $3,000,000,000 as delinquent payments are rounded up by internal revenue agents.

Millions of thrifty citizens investing in war savings stamps have piled up $647,554,000. In August receipts from the stamps were $129,044,000. Even with this total, comparison shows that war-savers did not keep up their pace set in July, when the Government collected $211,417,000 as a result of the national campaign on thrift day.

GRAIN MARKET

Announcement was made yesterday afternoon that shipments of grain to all terminals in the U. S. will be under control of the Railway Administration and the Food Boards combined, and that no shipments would be allowed without permits. The object is to prevent accumulation of grain at the storage terminals to the point of congestion and consequent use of cars for storage that could be used for other traffic. Already grain is pouring in at the terminals at a rate which threatens speedy congestion. Corn markets weakened by the proposed embargo, but oats stiffened under the strong cash demand. The strength of the feed market is again evidenced in a further advance in hay prices, which are advanced $2 to $3 per ton.

Woodstock Girl Took Own Life

Florence Edwards Was Disappointed in Love and Drank Paris Green to End It All.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 17. — The mysterious poisoning of the late Florence Edwards has been cleared up, and was not a case of murder, as was widely thought at first, but a case of self-destruction, and the poison taken not arsenic, but Paris green. The motive was that of blighted hopes of a happily-married future with the man of her choice. For years the dead girl had kept company with a young man, and had made countless preparations for her marriage, and, apparently, on learning that the affections of her lover, in whom her whole life centred, were waning, she put an end to her existence.

"If I can't have you I cannot live," is a remark which the dead girl is alleged to have made to her lover shortly before she destroyed her life. A few days before the awful deed she remarked, in the presence of her sister and mother, in a heartrending manner, "I guess he thinks more of the other girl than of me," as she tore up a note she had just received breaking off an engagement for the evening in question. It was an engagement which it appears she learned to look forward to, as it was customary for the young man in question to spend that evening in her company from week to week.

Inspector's Work Praised.

Detective Miller is deserving of much praise for his work on the case, as he was severely handicapped from the start in every way. In addition to having against him the length of time which had elapsed, he also had to overcome public opinion, which all tended emphatically to the view that there was foul play.

Glass Furnished Clue.

The clue which helped largely to solve the mystery was a tumbler with a greenish mixture in it which Mrs. Clarence Armstrong of London, sister of the dead girl, found in the spare bedroom, a room which the dead girl used to a certain extent. Mrs. Armstrong at the time withheld her finding as she did not desire to acquaint the mother with her suspicions that Florence had taken her own life. The fact that this glass was in the bedroom and not molested, shows, the authorities consider, that the poison was self-administered. If anyone had attempted foul play with Paris green it would have been noticeable, and it further seems unlikely that one person could force another to swallow a glass of poison.

Result of Analysis.

The instructions which J. Joslyn Rogers, Provincial Analyst, had received with the stomach of the dead girl were to look for traces of arsenic poisoning, of which cause the jury had decided the girl came to her death. This was done, but there were apparently doubts in the mind of Inspector Miller that death was due to white arsenic poisoning, as the doctors had stated, and this probably caused a further examination. This revealed conclusively that the poison in the stomach was Paris green. As different methods have to be utilized to find traces of different poisons, such as arsenic or copper, it is readily apparent, when it is known that the analyst only looked for arsenic at first, as asked to, why the correct cause was not immediately ascertained.

Furnishings For Her Home.

An indication which points very strongly to the blighted hopes of the dead girl was her reported offer to sell a large quantity of silverware, which she had purchased from time to time, to a married sister, who lives in the country, for $45. A fine supply of silverware, of every discription, had been gathered together by the dead girl in anticipation of her marriage. But it was not only silverware that she purchased for her wedding. She had a piano, bedroom suite, linens, bed clothes, and in brief had spent hundreds of dollars toward the furnishing of the home which she had looked forward to for years, and which will never be.

Where Turgenjev Worked.

The estate of Ivan Turgeniev which is reported to have been sacked by Russian peasants, lies in the low, marshy country of the government state of Toula. Some of the writer's early work was produced there, though toward the end of his life Turgeniev spent the greater part of his time in Baden-Baden or Paris and scarcely visited Russia. The influence of his home, with its beautiful, prosperous estates and hard-driven peasantry, was never quite forgotten by him, and toward the muzhiks especially — the parents, probably, of those who have just wrecked his property — he had always an active sympathy. The neighboring capital town of Toula, set in the midst of agricultural lands, was given a gun factory by the Czar Boris Godunov, and still devotes itself to the making of army rifles.—Manchester Guardian.

Refused to Commit Himself.

"You admit that two and two make four?"

"That's all right for you and me," replied Mr. Cumrox. "But there's no telling what can happen to those or any other figures when an expert manipulator of statistics takes hold of them."

Mountain Railroads.

So extensive are precautions taken by railroads that link Argentina and Chile by climbing the Andes, which have the steepest grades in the world, that not a fatal accident has happened since they were opened in 1910.

Ousted by Dynamite.

Game Warden Devine recently visited Toohey's Lake in Griffith Township, Ont., and dynamited a beaver dam by request of the Mayor of Renfrew, the original engineers having threatened destruction of the public road.

Behind In Meat Schedule.

Because of the shortage of shipping Great Britain has already fallen behind 25,000 tons in her schedule of meat shipments guaranteed to France, compared to the total of 70,000 tons shortage in the schedule for 1917.

The Bible of Amiens

THE Amiens cathedral, which Ruskin called the "Bible of Amiens," is not only the glory of Amiens itself, but one of the chief glories of France and of the world. Not alone because of its historic value, and the nobility of its architecture, but because, as Ruskin used to point out to visitors, it tells the whole story of the Bible, from the birth of Adam to the death of Christ. The Amiens cathedral is one of the most interesting to students of art and architecture in the whole world.

Amiens before the war was noted chiefly for its manufactures and its cathedral. "The tide of life," said a writer a few years ago, "sweeps too strongly through here to allow one to do more than gasp at the immensity of this church." Amiens was a great manufacturing town, weaving cotton velvets for Spain, spinning woolen yarns, making satin for ladies' shoes, and was the cradle of the cotton manufacturing industry in France. The milling industry can well be sacrificed, by comparison with the cathedral, which could not be replaced. "Every part of it," said Arthur Symons, in his "Studies in Seven Arts," "has the finish of a miniature, and there is something actually dainty in this vast church, in which a singular precision in its proportions never becomes a mechanical regularity, is never cold, but retains always the heat of that first 'excitement' out of which it was first created." The allusion of Symons is to Pater's declaration that "the pointed style at Amiens is full of excitement." Critics react variously to the influence of its great, white-lighted interior. One finds an "immense cheerfulness" in the daylight church, itself so warm with light, the white stone as if just a little browned by the sun. Another says that, notwithstanding its majestic interior, the cathedral does not fascinate, is not so satisfying as the great churches of Rouen, "because there is too much light."

But the marvel of the cathedral is the detail with which the Bible stories have been worked out. Symons compares the facade to a "great frontispiece of images of a printed book. . . . an immense stone page, as if engraved on the sky. Within, too, are the curious painted stone carvings on the walls of the choir. Done in the 15th century, the scenes from the life and death of John the Baptist are among the most interesting. Of these Symons said:

"There is always an elaborate background of turreted castles, with people looking out of windows, people sitting at table, the cloth falling in stiff folds, the loaf of bread, the plates on the table. The last three divisions represent the dance of the daughter of Herodias, with fine invention. In the first Salome has just ended her dance; Herod and Herodias sit at the table behind her, and she stands, fingering a long curl, smiling and as yet unconscious, indifferent, cruel through indifference; and she catches sight of a man bringing a dish to the table; he has something on the platter, and she says, "Give me presently the head of John the Baptist on a platter." In the second division you see John beheaded. Salome stands by, quietly waiting; but already consciousness of what she has done begins to come into her face. In the third, Herod and Herodias sit at table, with the head before them on a platter. . . . in the foreground Salome faints, falling aside as if overpowered with some physical terror, and you would scarcely recognized her changed face.

The sculptor has rendered the legend as a piece of actual drama in which the psychology is no less impressive than the mechanical perfection of his art.

The expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden, the twelve apostles, the wise and foolish virgins, Jonah stepping comfortably out of the whale's widely opened mouth and planting his foot firmly on its back in the midst of the sea, the man sitting under his vine and fig tree—quaint legend and symbol without end are seen in the cathedral of Amiens.

Symons said strikingly that the perfectly sure and successful art with which Bible scenes are depicted in the quatrefoils which constitute a minor part of its ornamentation is a form of art which survives only in children's toys, which are addressed to similar spectators, and have the same quaint faithfulness to a child's sense of reality." And there is this impressive symbolism as the observer saw it in 1910, before the war cloud lowered, which may have an especial significance in the light of more recent events.

In the grotesques, which writhe over the entire front, I find the easy, successful, because simple and truthful achievement of what the Germans have tried and failed to do with their grotesque art. Each is conceived as the tortured evil, chafing against the virture which he is condemned to support, and each monster in pain has his natural, unexaggerated movement, the movement to get away, to lift up the weight above him. They are the flesh and the devil, kept under by the saints, but none the less with their place and form in the world, of which this church is the epitome.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion

SOMETHING ABOUT DREAMS.

Psychology Offers Simple Explanation of the Ancient Puzzle.

Psychology offers a simple explanation of the ancient puzzle of dreams. To the philosophers of old, dreams were a head-breaking source of bewilderment and furnished the never-failing taunt of the sceptic: How can you tell whether you are dreaming or awake? While this worthy question may still be asked with perverse logic, science advances a highly plausible theory of dreams.

Every activity, every experience is registered in the brain as a memory, of unconscious memories are stowed conscious experiences as conscious memories, unconscious experiences as unconscious memories. And the conscious memories which disappear, things forgotten, are still retained as unconscious memories. If we think of the great number of things that we experience unconsciously—for instance, how many people we see and do not remember the next moment—and the still greater number that we remember for a while and then forget, it will be seen what great quantities are stowed in the dim depths of our minds. Some of them it is difficult to recall, but more cannot consciously be recalled at all.

When the activities which engross our conscious life are stilled in sleep, memories from the unconscious appear, just as the stars shine out when the sun's obscuring brightness is gone, and things forgotten beyond recall, and things which we experienced and never consciously knew about, together, perhaps, with conscious memories, appear in chaotic order, the logical restraint of waking hours removed.

You read a book and forget every word of it. Years later a scene from the same book will come into your mind as a dream; you will not recognize it and will marvel where it came from. Or you will see a person casually on the street and be perfectly unconscious of it. But every experience is registered in the mind somewhere, and some day you may see that same person in a dream. Perhaps some of the great store of impressions hid away in your unconscious mind will come to the surface in a dream in such a way that you will feel that there is something mysterious about it.

An old lady once told the writer of a dream she had, citing it as a complete justification of her belief in spirits. While on a shopping tour she mislaid a valuable umbrella, and for the life of her could not remember what she had done with it. It worried her considerably, and that night she had a dream in which she saw herself go into a restaurant, hang up the umbrella, and after eating her lunch go away, forgetting it.

She went to the restaurant and found she had left her umbrella there as she dreamed. She insisted upon the fact that she hadn't the slightest recollection of leaving the umbrella at the restaurant, and that something from the supernatural world had come to her in her dream and reminded her, and cited the incident as proof positive of the truth of spiritualism, when, in fact, far from being mysterious, it was a classical example of the natural theory of dreams. She had, indeed, no conscious memory of leaving the umbrella, but every action, every experience is registered in the mind, and this particular unconscious memory appeared in her sleep.

Obliteration of the vivid impressions of normal life can also be induced by hypnotism and by deliberate abstraction of the mind. People have various degrees of ability to banish impressions from their minds; with some it is a peculiar gift. The mind, in a condition somewhat similar to sleep, offers a field for the appearance of unconscious memories, and many seemingly mysterious phenomena akin to dreams may be had. Looking intently at some object is an excellent aid to abstraction, and a crystal is as good as anything else. This is the secret of the crystal gazer, who, gazing into a crystal, goes into a state of mental abstraction in which unconscious memories appear. The gazer, when not a charlatan complete, is quite convinced that while in this condition he or she knows things which he or she is unconscious of during ordinary times, and he or she is quite correct. The explanation is simply unconscious memories coming to the surface.

The Peril of "Germanized" Merchandising

"GERMANIZED" methods of merchandising—like "Germanized" methods of warfare—are governed by neither principle nor ethics in seeking their objective.

It would be indeed a sorry day were such methods to obtain permanent root in Canada—where for years the building up of giant industries has been upon the foundation stone of Integrity.

Yet the evil has insidiously crept in—and unless checked, may grow. At this very moment, goods patterned after reputable articles, known throughout Canada, are being produced by cheap labor, of inferior materials—and are being offered as "the same" or "just as good", to the public, who may unwittingly buy the imitation for the genuine article.

This is very noticeable in connection with goods of an Electrical description, which are trading entirely on the prestige of goods manufactured by reputable Canadian firms.

Electrical devices mean, nowadays, so much in the safety, economy, convenience, and increased usefulness of electricity itself, and so many of them are bought for permanent use, that special care should be given to their selection, as actual danger lurks in the use of articles which are below the standard required by electrical authorities, both as regards material and workmanship.

For the safety of Canada's homes, and for the encouragement of Canadian industries, deceptions should be discountenanced. The public is really all-powerful, and in this matter can help very materially by insisting upon Electrical Devices known and approved by electrical authorities, and by refusing to accept substitutes or imitations.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

On Time!

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

The first time Richard Dallas visited Meadowbrook he carried away with him a lesson in promptitude that gave him much mental after-food, and the memory of a fair, winsome face that he never forgot. Dallas represented a large law firm, negotiating for a factory site, and in John Wade, the owner of Meadowbrook, he found an anxious client.

"You see, I have only my daughter," the old man told Dallas, "and the place is too large for us." They soon came to terms. Dallas arranged to bring a contract and an initial payment to bind the bargain at eight o'clock the next morning. It was nine when he awoke and hurried on his clothes and did not even stop for breakfast.

"I owe your father a thousand apologies," he told Ethel Wade, when she came to the door.

"Papa is very strict regarding business rules," she said to the visitor. "Punctuality has been the guiding principle in his life, and he waited till the clock had struck eight, and then drove over to Lockport. He will not be home until three o'clock."

Dallas felt embarrassed. He had counted on getting back to the city by noon, and at that end his delay might cause notice.

"You must sit down in the shade of the porch until I get you a cupful of coffee," she insisted, and ten minutes later reappeared with a tray holding coffee that Dallas denominated as nectar, some preserved peaches with cream and home-made rolls, dispatched to the last crumb, a high compliment to the cookery of his fair young hostess.

Three pretty girls wearing cover-all aprons came shyly up the walk an hour later. Ethel introduced her friends, who it developed had come to help her pick strawberries for preserving.

"Perhaps I might put in the idle time I must pass at the hotel, helping you," suggested Dallas, and soon they were a jolly, happy quintette. Dallas smeared his fingers picking the berries, and was provided with an apron, like the others. There was a delicious lunch at noontime and the berries all picked by two o'clock, after the most delightful experience in the life of Richard Dallas.

At promptly three o'clock stern, precise old Mr. Wade appeared. He did not allude to the broken engagement, but he said as Dallas departed:

"One week from today, then, you will be here to close up the deal? We will make it at noon, Mr. Dallas."

"I won't be late, this time," pledged Dallas, and Ethel went down the road a bit with him to show him a short-cut pasture path to the town, and he departed cherishing the anticipation of their next meeting.

Upon the day appointed, on his way to Meadowbrook Mr. Dallas found himself blocked from covering the last miles of his journey. It had rained almost continuously for a week, a cloudburst had swept away a dam and the river was a raging torrent. Those south of the main junction were practically marooned so far as rail or road progress was concerned.

"You cannot make it till the water subsides," an "oldest inhabitant" told Dallas, but the latter was headstrong. He located an old yawl, weather-beaten, but sound, and recklessly trusted himself to the raging waters.

That was a thrilling hour for the determined adventurer. The oars were of little use save to keep the boat from whirling in swirls and eddies. Twice great floating mass of wreckage and debris were encountered and he was nearly upset in midstream.

"I shall make it," he soliloquized, with a glow of masterful triumph on his face, "and I shall be in time. And welcome, too," he added, for coming in sight of the Wade place, he was startled to discover it surrounded by water. Nearly all of the lower story was submerged. From an upper window a sheet, a signal of distress, was being waved. It required skill and strength to direct the yawl up to the side of the house.

"Catch the rope," ordered Dallas, as he reached the window and saw Mr. Wade, pale and perturbed, and Ethel anxious and trembling, beyond it. "On time, on this occasion!"

"Oh, hurry! hurry!" voiced Ethel, breathlessly. "Don't wait for anything, papa!" she pleaded.

The old man, bearing a satchel, containing what he could gather up of his more valuable belongings, was induced to get into the boat. Dallas climbed through the window to assist Ethel. Then, all safely aboard, they had not gone 20 yards when with a great sway, the structure they had left sank to one side, in ruins.

"Everything gone!" groaned Mr. Wade. "Of course you want your forfeit money back and the deal canceled."

"Oh, no," said Dallas, cheerily. "The contract holds. The house we should have torn down, anyway, and the flood can't sweep away the land, you know."

"Everything lost, papa, indeed, if Mr. Dallas had not arrived just in time!" murmured Ethel, with a grateful look at Dallas.

"You have taught me a forcible lesson in promptness," observed the latter.

"An excellent rule," commented Mr. Wade, and as its result he gained a son-in-law before the year was out.

Birth of the Elephant.

First use of the elephant as a symbol of the Republican party was in 1874, when Thomas Nast, the first of the celebrated political cartoonists of America, made the "ponderous pachyderm" the G. O. P. emblem. Nast was born in Bavaria September 27, 1940, and came to America at the age of six. In the early sixties he went to Italy and was with Garibaldi as an artist for British and American newspapers. As political cartoonist for a popular weekly, he achieved an international reputation, and his cartoons were said to have been largely responsible for the downfall of the Tweed ring in New York. In 1874 Nast drew a cartoon representing an elephant labeled "Republican Party," about to fall into a chasm. Nast also depicted the democratic party as a fox, but later the donkey was substituted by the cartoonist of opposite political faith, and this has been the democratic emblem ever since. Nast died in Ecuador in 1902.

New Telephone Device.

Of the many devices which have from time to time been introduced for improving the telephone or for permitting the user the free use of his hands, one of the latest, says the Scientific American, appears to be in every way ideal. It consists of a sound chamber over which can be placed the usual telephone receiver, and a bifurcated tube ending in ear pieces. So in use the telephone receiver is removed from the hook and placed on the sound chamber, while the ear pieces are placed in the ears; and the user, talking in the normal tone, can carry on a conversation with a party at the other end of the telephone line without holding the receiver or stand. Furthermore, by splitting the sound and distributing it to the two ears, all extraneous noises are shut out and the conversation becomes much clearer.

It is not the fine, but the coarse and ill spun that breaks.

Women In Parliament.

The decision reached by the law officers of England, Scotland and Ireland that women, although having the franchise are not entitled to become candidates for the British Parliament has been received with considerable interest in Ottawa. When the Women's Suffrage bill passed the Commons last session the status of women as candidates for Parliament was raised, but no ruling was given on the subject. The British decision will probably form a precedent and it is thought likely when the justice department is asked for a ruling it will decide against the right of women to sit in Parliament without a special act.

On the other hand in Western Canada the right of women to sit in the Provincial Legislatures has never been questioned. Alberta has two women members, one elected by the soldiers overseas. A woman also ran in Saskatchewan last election as a non-partisan candidate but was defeated. In a recent Vancouver bye-election, Mrs. Ralph Smith was elected to succeed her husband, the late Hon. Ralph Smith.

Economical Easterners.

The New Brunswick Telephone Co. has concluded that it pays too much for operators' time to permit subscribers being given the hour on request. If "Central" is asked for the time now she is instructed to explain that she regrets it, but the company regulations do not permit, etc. The explanation wastes double the time courteous compliance would.

Men or women who sacrifice themselves for others may have a fight for it, but they cannot be unhappy.

THINGS TO DO WITH BARLEY.

It Was Originally a Wild Grass of Western Asia.

Everybody knows old Ali Baba. Who would forget him?

But Cassim? Who remembers him? He was the chap who, having found his way into the robbers' cave, forgot the magic words, "Open Sesame!" that would have caused the door of rock to open and let him out.

Sesame is an oil seed used in the Orient for food. Failing to think of it, the unfortunate Cassim said "Open, Barley!" It didn't work; and the robbers, finding him in the cave killed him.

Like the luckless Cassim, we ourselves have within recent years forgotten a useful food. But it is barley that we have forgotten.

At all events, we have forgotten that barley is good foodstuff for folks. We have been accustomed to using it for cattle feed and for beer making—ignoring the fact that it is an excellent material for bread.

Wheat—the queen of all the cereals — has spoiled us for other grains. But it is time that we sat up and thought a bit. We are obliged to economize in the use of wheat. Why not, so long as the war lasts go back to barley?

There is, of course, rye. But recently the food administration has cut rye flour off the list as a substitute for wheat flour. It can be shipped abroad as a substitute for the maintenance of our armies and our Allies.

From this time on rye flour is in the same category as wheat flour. We must do without it as far as possible.

But we have got to eat. What then? Well, barley is the stuff. Buy it. Learn to use it. Make it serve in place of wheat or rye.

Is barley flour palatable and nutritious? Indeed, yes. The food administration says that it is an excellent substitute for wheat flour. Delicious breads and cakes can be made by using it in place of all or part of the wheat flour in accepted recipes.

That it is a wholesome grain may be inferred from the fact that it has long been used in the feeding of infants.

Not so many years ago barley flour was used more extensively than wheat flour for breadmaking in European countries. Says the food administration: "Let us revive the art of barley cookery and, by so doing, 'stretch' our supply of wheat flour so that it may go farther to meet the needs of our Allies. We can easily do this and at the same time serve our families with excellent bread, muffins, biscuit and pastry."

Barley was originally a wild grass of western Asia. It is believed to be the most ancient cultivated vegetable food of mankind. Three varieties of the grain have been found in the prehistoric lake dwellings of Switzerland, dating back to the Stone Age.

The Only Time.

"You say your wife never stopped talking once while she was at the seaside for two weeks?"

"Well, yes; she did stop talking once."

"When was that?"

"When she fell into the water and got a mouthful."

Sustaining the Interest.

"What is your opinion of woman suffrage?"

"It is a good thing," replied Mr. Meekton. Only I'm afraid it's going to be harder to keep Henrietta interested in the ballot, now that she has it, than it was when she was simply arguing about it."

WHY RUN-DOWN PALE EXHAUSTED WOMEN SHOULD TAKE IRON

"There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked, steady nerved women without iron. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks—their charm and attractiveness depart. I always insist that my patients take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—(not metallic iron which often corrodes the stomach and does more harm than good). Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard women in two weeks' time in many cases. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results."—Ferdinand King, M.D., well known New York Physician and medical author. Ancient Soap Making.

A soap boiler's shop was among the things discovered in the excavation at Pompeii several years ago. The city was buried beneath volcanic ashes A. D. 79. It is said that the soap found in the shop had not lost all efficacy, although it had lain under the ashes more than eighteen hundred years. Soap making was quite a business in a number of the Italian cities at the time that Pompeii was destroyed. Pliny the elder speaks of soap, and says that because its price was so high many substitutes were used, among them a kind of glutinous earth and fine sand mixed in the juice of certain plants that made lather. History tells us that the Gauls made soap two thousand years ago by combining beech tree ashes and goat's fat.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

Important Order-In-Council Affecting Returned Men.

By the order-in-council making reservations of Dominion lands for returned soldiers under the soldier settlement act it is provided that all vacant and available Dominion lands within approximately fifteen miles on either side of railways in the districts where there are sufficient available lands to warrant reservation shall be reserved for the purpose of the soldier settlement act. A line is drawn along the township lines approximately fifteen miles from the railway on each side, making a belt of thirty miles in width within which all remaining vacant lands are held for returned soldiers.

The reservation is effective against all applications for entries on Dominion lands, except returned soldiers who have their ordinary homestead right and except as to existing rights prior to the reservation. A returned soldier who has not exhausted his homestead right may make ordinary homestead entry in the reserved areas as if the reservation had not been made. Soldier entries under the soldier settlement act will be allowed as soon as the regulations under that act have been completed and passed by council.

All entries throughout the Western provinces which in the past few months have been cancelled or abandoned as homesteads or cancelled grazing leases or lands coming out of reserve, except where rights had been previously acquired, have been reserved for selection by the Soldier Settlement Board, and this process will be continued.

It is further provided that along any of the railway lines throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the railway belt of British Columbia, where lands are held under entry and the duties are not being subject to cancellation proceedings for the benefit of the soldier settlement act.

Any returned soldier who produces a letter from the Soldier Settlement Board certifying to his right under the act to entry is given the privilege of applying for the cancellation of any existing entry in default, with a view, if cancelled, to re-entry by himself under soldier entry.

Any returned soldier having his right under the Soldier Settlement Act will have the privilege of applying for a quarter section of any vacant and available Dominion lands, whether it be in a reserved area or not.

Butch In Church.

It was one big surprise for everyone in the machine gun company when the chaplain at last got Butch into the church for Sunday services. Butch is rated as pretty hard hombre—honest, efficient, and faithful as they make them, but not very careful about his language and more than willing to scrap most anyone any time. The chaplain got him one day as Butch was splicing some harness for one of the mules. His line was about like this: "Now, Butch, I'm going to ask you to come to church Sunday morning. I know you don't want to, but I want you to come as a favor to me. If you were out selling lightning rods you'd at least expect a farmer to let you put one on his house for a trial, if it wasn't going to cost him anything. Now, we've been good friends ever since I came to the regiment, haven't we?" Butch admitted they had been.

"Good," he said. "Now, I'm dealing in an article which I claim will cure a lot of troubles. I'm only asking you to try one sample—just one."

Well, Butch was in church Sunday. The chaplain had been called away just before services, and a visiting chaplain occupied the pulpit. The rest of the fellows, seeing Butch up in front, were glad to have him with them.

The visiting chaplain looked out over the congregation of freshly-shaved, khaki-clad gunners for some one to lead in prayer.

Somehow his eyes fastened on red-haired Butch sitting only a few feet away.

The little congregation of soldiers grew tense as they waited for the chaplain to speak. You could just feel he was going to call on Butch.

He did.

"Will this young man kindly lead us in prayer?" he asked.

Butch got up. Every eye was on him. Everyone wondered how he'd make out, being called on like that the first time he had been to church in years.

But Butch was equal to the emergency.

"Let us have five minutes of silent meditation," said Butch.

SPLENDID SCORE OF FRENCH ACE

Lieut. Rene Fonck Is Gaining Great Fame.

HAS DOWNED SIXTY PLANES

His Record Performance Has Been a Remarkable Fight, In Which He Attacked Four Germans and Only Allowed One of the Number to Escape.

LIEUT. RENE FONCK, the famous French aviator, shot down three German airplanes on Aug. 14. He accounted for all three of them in the record-breaking time of twenty seconds.

Fonck went out escorted by two patrolling machines. After cruising for ten minutes he spied four enemy two-seater battleplanes flying in Indian file with only a few hundred yards between each. The French flier fell upon the first enemy machine with his machine gun. It fell in flames in ten seconds. Later he got his sights on the second machine, with the same result. The third dodged sideways before Fonck could take aim and escaped, and by a swift turn of the rudder he dashed at the fourth airplane and sent it down to join the first two.

If the third machine had been flying a little farther from the second, which would have given him time to train his gun on it, Fonck asserts he would have accounted for it too.

Lieut. Fonck, recognized as the greatest French air fighter since Capt. Guynemer, is credited with bringing down sixty enemy airplanes. Of these he downed six in one day in the course of two patrols. He has brought down fifty since January 1st.

A little over a year ago Lieut. Fonck entered the aerial service as pilot of an airplane regulating artillery fire. After about twenty days of this service, during which he had attempted to interfere with his work, he was put into a squadron of pursuit machines. Eight days later he was officially cited as an ace, having destroyed his fifth airplane. A remarkably cool and daring fighter, Fonck is only twenty-three years old.

Must Part With Clothes.

"The voluntary" surrender of worn clothing for the benefit of war workers in Germany is turning out a complete failure.

The brief initial rush which was motived by expectations of obtaining exemption from the threatened forcible emptying of wardrobes, soon died down. Berlin, which was expected to yield forty thousand suits has not supplied half that number and the same tale comes from all other centres.

The period for bringing in the clothing had to be extended everywhere and bonuses given as at Schoensberg, where every old suit reaped a reward of a jar of real honey or a packet of pudding powder.

Essen is the first town where steps have already been taken for an official inspection of private wardrobes but others will inevitably follow. In the meantime there are many indignant letters in the newspapers from citizens who patriotically denied themselves articles of clothing and which they are now told are not good enough for munition workers. Complaint is made that the latter earn much more money and live in better style than the disappointed benefactors.

Napoleon's Great-grandson.

A great-grandson of Napoleon was killed recently in action not far from Rheims, where he was at the head of a machine-gun section.

His name was Daniel Napoleon Mesnard, and he was the son of a lady whose maiden name was Leon, and who was a daughter of Count Leon, a natural son of the Emperor.

The dead soldier bore himself bravely in defence of Rheims, and was mentioned in despatches.

Soldiers of the Soil.

Nearly twelve thousand Soldiers of the Soil boys are hard at work on the farms, helping in the campaign for greater war-time production, in addition to those who arrange for their own employment independent of the Soldiers of the Soil organization. The Soldiers of the Soil are divided as folows:

Saskatchewan	1,405
Manitoba	1,006

A Japanese Store.

The most interesting room in Mitsukosni is the refreshment room at lunch time. Then, if you sit at a table in the corner, you will see a most diverting moving picture. Here comes a group of young clerks in foreign clothes, swinging canes, of which they are pleasantly conscious. Then the New Woman—recognized, not by her dress or demeanor, but by the arrangement of her hair. In a land where intricate and elaborate hair dressing is the rule, she is conspicuous, for her hair is simply parted in the middle, or on the side and drawn into a coil at the nape of her neck. Next comes a family group—the old mother in the lead, her hair short like a boy's, then the demure daughter-in-law. Clinging to her hand but walking with philosophic decorum is the pride of the family—the eldest son, and at a respectful distance from the family shuffles the servant, the inevitable baby on her back.

At the next table a couple of geishes in bright kimonos eat tiny foreign sandwiches poised on toothpicks. In other days you could recognize the geisha by the way she wore the collar of her kimono. Instead of close to her neck, the back projected out like a calla lily, and her pure white neck rose from it like the stamen, but now this fashion has been adopted also by ladies of quality. At their table are several students in the University military uniform, but there is no obvious flirtation; the girls are gentle, apparently shy; their allurement is subtle.

Between the tables glide the waitresses in white aprons. They treat each patron with a smiling courtesy which is not graded according to the expected largess of the customer, for Mitsukoshi permits no tipping.—Edith Wilde, in World's Outlook.

Germans Serenaded the Russians.

At the beginning of the war, Germany, by breaking treaty agreements, stationed two warships in the Dardanelles. She claimed that these ships had been sold to Turkey. An incident, which Ambassador Morgenthau tells of, shows how thin this pretence was:

"The German officers and crews greatly enjoyed this farcial pretence that the Goeben and Breslau were Turkish ships. One day the Goeben sailed up the Bosphorus, halted in front of the Russian Embassy and dropped anchor. Then the officers and men lined the deck in full view of the enemy ambassador. All solemnly removed their Turkish fezzes and put on German caps. The band played "Deutchland Ueber Alles," the "Watch on the Rhine" and other German songs, the German sailors singing loudly to the accompaniment. When they had spent an hour or two serenading the Russian Ambassador, the officers and crews removed their caps and again put on their Turkish fezzes. The Goeben then picked up her anchor and started south to her station, leaving in the ears of the Russian diplomat the gradually dying strains of German war songs as the cruiser disappeared down stream."

An Old Street Rhyme.

Some 16 years ago the vanished doodlesac minstrel of the Strand figured in verses, which were a street hawker's workhouse lament:

The Strand is little changed, Mary,
Being muggy now as then.
The hansoms rattle in my ear,
Its busmen swear again;
But wot es got the flower-girls?
An' where—oh, bitter loss—
Is the man that sold toy bagpipes
Outside of Charing Cross?

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1918

PREPARING FOR SPRING

Purpose of the Present Allied Drive on the Macdonia Front.

A TIMID MONARCHY

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The French, Serbian and Greek operations along the Balkan front give promise of a major offensive being conducted against Bulgaria next spring in strategic conformity with the operations which America and the Allies will then start against Germany in the west.

The present movement itself in Macedonia can scarcely have been planned for any length of time into the winter season, which soon begins in the Balkans. It would be hazarding if not impossible, to prolong an offensive during the severe snows of mountainous south-eastern Europe. A Balkan offensive has always been associated with the spring. The purpose of the present drive is doubtless to secure possession of local portions of vantage from which a spring advance can successfully be undertaken. This, of course, implies the issuance of notice to the Bulgarians that they will be attacked next spring. There is good strategy in serving the notice. Germany is desperately trying to persuade Bulgaria to send troops to the west front to help Von Hindenburg defend German territory.

Would Weaken Positions.

The public have been reluctant to agree, but there have lately been some signs of wavering at Sofia. Now, however, it would be positively dangerous for the Bulgarian government to send any large number of troops to the west front. If this were done, Bulgaria's own defensive positions would become weakened to an extent that would give high encouragement to the Allies to strike for Sofia. Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, is a timid monarch who is out exclusively for spoils. The changing conditions in the war situation was already reported to have sent him to health resorts where broken down nerves are treated. The Bulgarian retreat along the Macedonian front is certain to make Ferdinand still more timorous and to cause him to think of the safety of his own throne before considering the plight of the Hohenzollerns. This means the Kaiser will be unable to rely on Bulgarian military support when the Americans start for the Rhine.

Hydro-Electric Commission Have Staff at Minden

Possibilities of This District Being Gone Into—Probability of Electric Railway Being Built.

Mr. Huston, statistician of the Hydro-Electric, and staff, arrived at Minden yesterday, where they will be stationed for several days getting information relative to the amount of business that could be obtained in that section in order to warrant the building of the proposed short line, surveyed by the commission last summer from Kinmount Junction to Minden, 9 miles, and on to Mountain Lake, 4 miles, and as Minden is not only the county seat, but being practically in the centre of the district, all mail routes lead to it.

A great volume of business done by hauling with teams, especially in winter, of lumber, pulpwood, tanbark, etc., would be greatly increased, as the electric road would enable many of the farmers and settlers to dispose of great quantities of stuff that at present is actually going to waste for a better means of transportation.

Ranching is being carried on to a large extent, would also be greatly helped by a more direct and easier route to market for the shippers.

Minden district is very optimistic that the road will be built, as those interested in its advancement feel that the commission will see its great possibilities.

STEEL BEAMS BEING ERECTED TO-DAY

Royal Theatre Balcony is Carried by Two Steel Beams Weighing Twelve Tons.

A staff of men from McGregor & McIntyre's Steel Foundry, Toronto, arrived in town this morning to erect the steel beams which are being used in accordance with the plans for the new Royal Theatre, so that there will be no pillars required to hold up the balcony, leaving a clear view all over the house.

The two steel beams weighed 24,000 lbs., or twelve tons; the largest and heavest that Archie Barbeau in his thirty years' cartage experience has been called upon to handle.

British Forces Advanced Northwest of St. Quentin and Captured Holnon

Germans Launched an Attack Under Heavy Artillery Protection—Fighting on the Macedonis Front.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 18.—(Official.)—British forces attacked this morning northwest of St. Quentin, according to an official report from Field Marshal Haig, received at the War Office this forenoon. The village of Holnon, three miles northwest of St. Quentin, has been captured by the British, the Field Marshal reported.

A German attack last evening at Moeuvres under heavy artillery protection, resulted in the British being pushed back to the western outskirts of the village.

The statement reads:

As a result of our operations yesterday on the southern portion of the battle front, we gained possession of Holnon Village, with several prisoners. This morning our troops attacked northwest of St. Quentin. Yesterday evening the enemy attacked at Moeuvres, under cover of heavy artillery barrage and pressed our troops back to the western outskirts of the village. By successful local operations carried out during the night we advanced our line slightly immediately south of the La Bassee canal.

THE MACEDONIAN FRONT.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Allied forces on the Macedonia front have penetrated to a depth of nearly four and a half miles on a front of fifteen and one half miles, and have captured 4,000 prisoners, according to an official statement issued tonight by the War Office. The Serbian forces are vieing with the French in courage and spirit.

Means Used to Betray Russia

In this issue appears the second instalment of the series of communications between the German Imperial Government and the Bolsheviki Government, which give conclusive evidence of the means used to betray Russia even before the actual declaration of war. The documents also reveal the German conspiracy that was directed at the United States and Canada calling for explosions, strikes, delays and embroilments and recommending the employment of anarchists and escaped criminals for that purpose.

RAILROADERS NOT EXEMPT

NO BLANKET CLASS

Special to The Examiner.

Washington, Sept. 18. — Railroad employees, like all other workers, must prove their services essential to avoid the draft.

Provost Marshal General Crowder has ruled that there can be no blanket class exemption of any kind.

Director General McAdoo, who sought such blanket exemption today, directed regional chiefs to ask deferred classification for every necessary employee.

EIGHT CARS OF GRAIN DERAILED NEAR BIRDSALL

Eight cars of grain were derailed early this morning on the G.T.R. one mile west of Birdsall station. At the station there was no definite information of the cause of the mishap. The morning train from Belleville was held up, but the passengers were transferred; and the train from Peterborough went as far as the wreck, transferred its passengers and returned. The G.T.R. are extremely busy hauling grain to the eastern ports. This morning's freight was engaged in this work. The cars were piled on either side of the track, and one statement indicated that some of them spilled over into the field nearby.

MEDICINE FOR LLOYD GEORGE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 18.—General Pershing, replying to Premier Lloyd George's letter congratulating him on the St. Mihiel victory, said the American army would endeavour to continue supplying the Premier with "occasional doses of the same medicine."

Lloyd George, who dictated the message to Pershing while ill in bed, said the American success was better than any other medicines he had taken.

Premier Lloyd George is convalescing, it was officially announced today.

THE POWER OF THE DOLLAR

Never were extravagance and useless buying regarded as so serious an evil as to-day. A greater evil still is the spending of one's money on silly pleasures. Canadians carry too serious a determination to ride through to Victory and to vindicate the stalwartness and endurance of the men at the front to tolerate any such laxity in their expenditures.

Our people generally are sizing up the power of the dollar as never before, and are investing their surpluses against a possible landslide after the war. This is real patriotism. It is carrying common-sense into national business. It is proving that the strength of a nation lies in her saving citizens.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

Men, did your mirror tell you this morning that you needed a new tie to brighten up your dress? In this world small things count, and it is the same with your dress—it is surprising the effect that a new tie will have. This morning I received 25 dozen ties and amongst them are some of the most beautiful cravats you will find anywhere. I invite you to "come to me" for your new ties.

WHY GERMANY SQUEALS—The nearer the war gets to Germany the more the Germans squeal. Over here we have not heard much of the work that British aviators have been doing in Germany, but here is a map issued by the British Government showing the places which were raided in one month this summer. In all 96 raids were made on places in Germany in the month and 81 tons of bombs were dropped. The map shows the places raided and the number of raids on each place.

QUIETNESS PREVAILS ALONG THE CANADIAN BATTLEFRONT

Both Sides Are Watchful—Enemy Aviators Use Parachutes—Night Bombing a Feature

GAS ATTACKS

With the Canadian Forces in France, Sept. 17. — (Via London, by J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent.) — Quietness prevails along the Canadian front, though only comparative quietness. There is that in the British ranks today which will admit of no return to the old days of settled trench warfare. Both sides are watchful. Raiding continued along the Canal du Nord, our bag yesterday morning being an officer. There is much shelling. The enemy pays special attention to gas which he pours over in quantities suggestive of a purpose which does not materialize. Sniping with big guns has become a feature of the present conditions. Night bombing is developing with the moon, but capable handling of searchlights on the Canadian front is defeating the enemy intention.

Raiders are Blocked.

Last night was an example of the efficiency of this method of blocking raiders; everyone of them was turned back, most of them being caught in rays and held until they scurried to safety. One was brought down in flames, the crew of the bomber taking to parachutes and landing within our lines. Again to-day an enemy machine crashed but its crew saved their lives by parachutes.

This idea, which is only under development, will alter the sky fighting materially and one may feel assured the allies will not lag if it is worth adopting.

Gas bombing is also being indulged in by the enemy. To-day a brigade which distinguished itself by the capture of Lequesnel in the Amiens fighting, received its medals from the hands of the corps commander.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

As the Allied offensive in Macedonia continues to develop, the impression is growing that an operation of major proportions may have been begun there. The front where the fighting is going on is almost shut off from the world, and except for official reports there are few details known, as to progress of the Entente forces. It appears, however, that the attack which was launched on Sunday, is still going on and is gaining important ground just to the east of Monastir. Sofia admits that the Allies have been successful at some points, and says that Bulgarian troops have been withdrawn to positions further north. This may be taken as a confirmation of the reports from Allied sources telling of the success of the drive over the high ridges which the Teutonic powers have held for the past eighteen months or more. Latest reports from the Macedonia front would seem to indicate that the rather restricted front over which the French assault was launched, is now being lengthened, especially to the east.

British Also Drop Many Tons of Bombs in Yesterday's Fighting—16 Machines Missing.

GREAT ACTIVITY IN THE AIR

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Sixty-six German airplanes were accounted for by the British along their lines yesterday. Seven of the hostile machines were destroyed in one engagement by a British squadron.

Describing the operations in the battle zone, an official statement tonight says:

"There was great aerial activity all along the British front on September 16, and our machines were busily engaged in every department of their work. Photographic reconnaissances both of forward and distant areas were carried out with great opposition ness, in spite of strong opposition, and the number of aerial photographs taken exceeds any recorded total for one day.

"Observation of our artillery fire was successfully performed both by airplanes and balloons. Much damage was reported in hostile battery positions, and many fires and explosions were caused "Nearly 24 tons of bombs were dropped by day, and 15 tons on the following night, on airdromes used by the enemy's night-flying airplanes and on railheads and dumps.

"The fighting was intense all along the front throughout the day combats taking place a considerable distance east of the lines. Forty-five hostile machines were brought down by our airmen. Of these, seven were brought down in one fight by [illegible] squadrons. Twenty other German machines were driven down out of control. In addition, one hostile airplane was shot down by our anti-aircraft guns. One hostile balloons was destroyed.

"Sixteen of our machines are missing."

STALLS HAVE BEEN REMOVED

DOMINION CAFE HAS COMPLIED WITH REGULATIONS

The Dominion Cafe has complied with the city by-law in taking out the stalls which were outlawed by the city some time ago.

One man entered the restaurant, looked around and came out again and asked a passerby where the restaurant had moved to .

Peterboro is the only city in Ontario which bans the eating stall. Hamilton says there shall be no curtains on the stalls but that is the nearest approach to it. The other restaurants in the city still have the stalls but without the curtains.

SWORN TO AND GUARANTEED

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDENSDAY, SEPT. 18TH, 1918.

THE BOLSHEVIKI GUILTY.

Any doubts as to the fact that the Bolsheviki Government in Russia have been from the start controlled and paid by Germany, have been dissipated by the publication by the United States Government of confidential documents. The story that is told by these communications is clean-cut and convincing. As long ago as November, 1917, when Russia was still supposed to be an ally of the powers at war with Germany, the Bolsheviki were really aiding the Kaiser. One of the documents is an order from the German general staff demanding that Lenine and Trotsky, the Bolsheviki leaders, should supply Germany with information regarding the supplies sent to Russia by America, Great Britain and France. Plots to launch a Bolsheviki peace and Socialist propaganda against the Allied countries under the direction of the German secret service, are also revealed by these documents.

SAVING GASOLINE.

The Peterborough woman who was heard to say the other day that she did not mind doing without her motor car on Sundays because she was planning to take long trips on Saturday instead, has entirely missed the point at issue, in regard to the Fuel Controller's request. The intention is not to do away with motoring on Sunday, but rather to conserve gasoline. If extra trips are taken during the week to make up for the fact that the car is not to be used on Sunday, all the benefit of refraining from motoring on the Sabbath will be lost.

Gasoline must be saved—not only on Sunday—but throughout the week. The motorists who aimlessly wander up and down George street each evening for two or three hours are wasting gasoline that is needed for the tanks which are saving the lives of thousands of our soldiers overseas, for the ambulances that bring our wounded to a place of safety, and for the lorries that keep our men supplied with food. The spirit of the request to conserve gasoline as well as the letter should be observed by everyone who have the interest of the Allies at heart.

The first motorless Sunday was not observed in Peterborough as faithfully as it should have been. Although many citizens left their cars in the garage over the week-end there were too many others who disregarded the Fuel Controller's request and motored as usual. Some of these car owners may have done so in ignorance of the request that unnecessary pleasure driving should be eliminated, but it is to be feared, judging from the fact that they kept away from the main thoroughfares that there were some motorists who deliberately ignored the request.

It is to be hoped that there will be an improvement shown on the coming Sunday. Motorists who persist in disregarding the gasoline conservation campaign are liable to find themselves deservedly unpopular.

ALL CANADIANS.

In a timely article the Toronto Star pleads for the elimination of the hyphen in Canada. There can be little fault found with the arguments of our contemporary on this point, and the advice is necessary, for even at this late stage in the war, it is not unusual to hear arguments as to what percentage of the Canadian army overseas were born in Canada, how many French-Canadians are serving, and other matters of the same kind. The men who are wearing the Maple Leaf in France are Canadians—history will always refer to them as such, and any arguments as to the origin of the men comprising the army of the Dominion do no good anyway.

Says the Star:

The Canadian army has made a great reputation in the war, and the British-born who are in that army and the thousands of them who have fallen in its ranks share in the fame of it, and they, and their children after them, make the history of Canada their own. Those of them who fight through the war and survive it will have helped make a history for Canada, in which, with good reason, they will take pride for the balance of their days and their descendants after them.

What we need in this country, as much as in the United States, is to be done with the hyphen. The hyphen plays the mischief with any country. We cannot amount to much if every body is either a French-Canadian or a German-Canadian, or a Scotch-Canadian, or an English-Canadian, or an Irish-Canadian, thinking more of his hyphen than of the inheritance which his citizenship here offers him. Canada needs from every man and woman just as whole-hearted a devotion as any other country gets from its people or as any other part of the British Empire gets from its inhabitants. And just as the men in the Canadian corps at the front are proud of the Canadian name no matter where they were born or came from, and have helped make the name one to be proud of, so the people here at home should unite to make the country one to be proud of and one worthy of the heroisms and sacrifices of the men of the army.

To make this country what it ought to be as a great English commonwealth in the new world is the job we have on our hands, and we ought to go to it in our day and generation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Joy riding on week days as well as on Sundays, should be cut to the limit.

The Navy League Fund is still open. Peterboro has only reached the half-way mark. Remember by giving.

The Veterans' complaint at the appointment of an officer who has seen no overseas service, to command the infantry in the Siberian expeditionary force, seems to be well founded.

Many children will be glad to learn that the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are planning a Christmas treat. The event last year was a red-letter one for the children.

There was not much "watchful waiting" about the manner in which the United States answered the Austrian peace proposals.

A WRONG IDEA.

In discussing the recent street riots in Toronto, in which Greek and Italian restaurants were wrecked, the Veteran discusses the matter from the standpoint of the returned man. While it acknowledges that some misguided soldiers were bent on causing trouble, it points out that the police were either too incompetent or too powerless to prevent the disturbances. The rioters were joined by large forces of rowdy civilians, and what began as ordinary reprisals brought on by anger ended in a wholesale looting worthy of the Kaiser's hosts. The Veteran adds:

"Without attempting to justify the conduct of the rioters, we would draw the attention of the Canadian people to the fact that many returned men do sincerely feel that the government and people of Canada have failed to implement the gracious promises of special treatment and consideration made to them ere they sailed overseas. Neglect to control profiteering, to work out a sane land settlement and labour policy, and to regulate the alien problem, have all combined as irritants upon men whose nerves have not been improved by their trials in the trenches. But it is essentially a Prussian doctrine that brute violence can achieve reforms."

The people of Canada are anxious to see that the returned soldier gets his just dues, and the Veteran does right in warning that reforms cannot be obtained by riots or the application of brute force. Such a course serves only to defeat the end in view. A great work is being done already in the way of fitting the returned men to re-enter civilian life. The problem is a new and difficult one, and patience must be exercised while methods are being tried out and plans perfected.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Let's Be Fair:

Kincardine Review: The Allies are making great advances on the western front, but the Germans are going just as fast, if not faster.

Reasonable Objection.

Detroit News: It is true that fewer knitters are seen on the street cars. The cars are so crowded that perforated strap-hangers raised an objection.

When Thieves Fall Out.

Montreal Gazette: When thieves fall out honest men come into their own. It is understood that there is a division among the unworthies in this city. So much the better. The authorities should take advantage of the split and put the lid down tight on the rival factions. Let the promoters of vice understand that they are to be kept in a state of disfavour.

So Likely to be Welcome.

Argonaut: We have long suspected that the Germans have no sense of humour, and now we know it. The ships of their new merchant marine are receiving such names as Hindenburg, Ludendorff, and Tirpitz. Imagine the thrill of delight with which we shall learn from our shipping bulletins after the war that the Hindenburg is expected to dock at Hoboken with the afternoon tide. Consider the welcome that will be extended to the Tirpitz as she passes up the Thames to Gravesend.

On Dining Cars.

Hamilton Spectator: Confining food on dining cars across the border to lunches limited to a dollar, or $1.25 at most, should prove a welcome edict to the travelling public. At present prices for a full meal are prohibitive for a large number.

The K. C. Huts.

Regina Post: It should be understood by all the people that there is no competition in any sense between the Red Triangle and the "K. C. Huts." Both are engaged in the same work, the supplying of recreation and comforts for the soldiers overseas. They go at it in the same way and get equally great results, though up to the present time the Red Triangle work has been carried on on a larger scale. The motto of the Knights of Columbus huts and the motto of the Red Triangle is, in effect, the same "Everybody welcome." The Knights of Columbus form a strictly Roman Catholic organization, but Roman Catholic secretaries and workers are assisting in the work of the Red Triangle, and non-Catholic soldiers take advantage of the Knights of Columbus huts as freely as the soldiers who are Knights themselves.

All work of this kind is valuable to the soldiers, and to the nation for whom the soldiers are fighting.

The Value of Platinum

NEW chapters in the romance of platinum, once thrown away as waste but now the most sought-after metal in the world, have been written since the war began, says the Associated Press. Nations are fighting for it. Adventurers are risking their lives to obtain it. Women spies and diplomatic agents are playing the game of international intrigue to control even an ounce of the "noble metal," as it is known to geologists, so valuable has it become and so necessary to the prosecution of the world war.

The United States Government recently took a hand in the game by commandeering all unworked platinum in the neighboring republic, setting therefor a price of $105 an ounce, as compared with $22.85 ten years ago. Even this action, however, has not obtained sufficient of the metal for war purposes. Officials who failed to heed the warnings of the war are wondering how they can retrieve their error in not vigorously meeting the national necessity by using every legitimate means to obtain platinum. For the total amount of known platinum throughout the world is only 4,000,000 ounces. Much of that is virtually irreclaimable through use in dental work and personal jewelry, and the output, since the Russian debacle, has fallen to a fraction of what it was in times of peace.

It is the last reason which is giving officials so much concern. Russia has been the source of most of the world's platinum and, in 1913, was credited with a production of 250,000 troy ounces. Colombia with 15,000, New South Wales and Tasmania 1,275, United States (California and Oregon being almost the only producing states), only 483, Borneo and Sumatra 200 and Canada 50.

The German invasion of Russia gave the enemy the opportunity of replenishing his stock of platinum, to the detriment of the Allies. Mining in Russia virtually has ceased now, even if the metal could be shipped out of the country, and the world looks to Colombia for platinum. Suggestions for a Government monopoly have been advanced in the Colombian Congress. Whatever action is taken, the fortunes of war will mean wealth for the southern republic.

One of the most spectacular feats of the war was the concentration of 20,000 ounces of platinum in Russia by a young American mining engineer, attached to the embassy there, who recognized the importance of obtaining the metal. Each precious brick, wrapped in a leather cover, was brought halfway across the world to the loyal Allied countries and turned over to the governments for use in the manufacture of contact points in electrical apparatus and other uses necessary to war. An interesting history of platinum is given by the Latin-American bureau of commerce.

Platinum was discovered in what is now Colombia in 1735, by a Spaniard named Don Antonio de Ulloa, who accompanied a French scientific expedition, and his account of it was the first information regarding the metal to be brought to the attention of Europeans. Its resistability to acids and the difficulty of working it were remarked upon, but it was not considered to be nearly as precious as gold, and was used at times by counterfeiters as a basis for coins. It was not until the middle of the 19th century that the demand for platinum for use in chemical laboratories and for electrical uses brought its value up to the point where it ranked as one of the most precious metals.

In the placer mining of gold in Colombia it was formerly thrown away as waste, and when the rise in price made it more valuable than gold the ground on which the waste had been thrown became in its turn a field for mining operations, and even the streets of the principal centre of gold refining in Colombia, Quibdo, were torn up and the soil washed for particles of the new treasure. One man tore down his store in order to get at the ground beneath and found so much platinum that he was enabled to rebuild and make an extra $4,000 for his trouble.

Platinum is recovered principally from the beds of streams, the particles having been deposited there through erosion of large rocks, classified geologically as "tertiary conglomerates." The platinum grains are found with gold, the proportion varying from 5 to 10 per cent. of platinum. The two metals are recovered by washing the sand and gravel of streams.

The marked rise in the price of platinum in the last two or three years has considerably stimulated mining activities in Colombia, especially on the part of the native miners. In fact, platinum represents the total visible exports of that little country.

The "Penguins" and "Wrens."

While one of Lord Pearhyn's many sisters has been appointed commandant of the "Penguins," as the Women's Royal Air Force are to be known in the women's branches of the three services, remarks the London Daily Graphic. The "Wrens," otherwise the Women's Royal Naval Service, can, however, claim a peer's laughter among the principals, the Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Maud Northcote. She is the elder of the two daughters of Lord Waleran, better known as Sir William Walroud, a Unionist chancellor of the duchy and chief whip, and lost her only brother, one of the M. P.'s on the Parliamentary roll of honor, nearly three years ago. Her younger sister is the wife of Viscount Southwell.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Hillcrest To Play Riversides on Saturday

The crack Hillcrest team of Toronto, amateur champions of the Queen City, will be here on Saturday afternoon to meet Manager Solomon's Riversides in the third round of the Ontario Baseball Association series for the Toronto News Trophy. As was expected, the O.A.B.A., upon receiving the official reports of Saturday's game in Oshawa, threw the Oshawa team out of the running and awarded the series to Peterborough.

The game on Saturday should be the feature of the season. The Hillcrest team, with "Cannon Ball" Scott pitching and Babe Dye and other well known ball stars in line, will be about the hardest proposition the Riversides have been up against this season, but Manager Solomon's outfit will endeavour to carry the battle to the visitors all the way. The game is called for 2.45 o'clock, with Taylor, the well-known Toronto umpire, officiating at the plate, and Alex. Kay on the bases. In the return game at Broadview Field, Toronto, on the following Saturday, Kay will work at the plate, while Taylor will give the base line decisions.

The Riversides will practise to-morrow night at Riverside Park. A full turn out of players is expected.

Collegiate Had 36 Players at First Rugby Practice

The first rugby practice by the Collegiate boys was held last night when thirty-six turned out. They were divided into two groups Herk Young being elected captain of the one, and Charles Armstrong of the other. There is a lot of promising material at the Collegiate, and it is hoped that a fast team will be developed.

From other sections of the city there are reports of increasing interest in teams now organizing. The C. G. E. is expected to produce at least one and Jack Dainnard and Bill Meagher are interesting a bunch of the south end youngsters with every likelihood of entering the proposed city league. Dr. Wood has not forgotten his rugby days, and is taking a prominent part in keeping the game alive in the absence of so many of the older boys who are overseas. It is expected that a local O. R. F. U. group will be formed in Peterboro, and the boys are assured of enough games to satisfy their autumn taste for rugby.

FIVE PIN LEAGUE AT WATER STREET ALLEY

The formation of a five-pin bowling league is now the issue at the Water street alleys, and it is expected will be in progress next week. Eight teams are expected to enter and this league ought to be an interesting one both for players and spectators. There will be a meeting of all bowling enthusiasts at the alleys at 8.30 Friday evening at which the schedule will be drawn up and other matters concerning the league discussed.

World's Series of 1912 Were the Best Attended on Record

The last victory in a world's series by a National League team was the record performance of the Boston players in 1914, when the Braves swept the Philadelphia Athletics before them in four straight games, which caused the eventual disruption of the famous Shibe Park baseball machine. Previous to that time the record for the shortest series was held by the Chicago Nationals of 1907. In that year the team, led by Frank Chance, defeated the Detroit Americans, four games to none, but the series required five contests, as the opening game resulted in a 3 to 3 tie.

But one other series developed in a tie game. This occurred in the meeting of the New York Nationals and the Boston Americans in the memorable conflict of 1912. This series, which still holds the record for the number of games, attendance and gate receipts, went full eight contests before the Boston Red Sox emerged victors.

More than a quarter of a million of fans attended the games and the gate receipts were a trifle more than $400,000. Each player on the winning team received $4,024, while the losing Giants found balm for their defeat in the fact that their end amounted to $2,566 per man.

Although the American League teams hold a safe margin in series won, the total in games and runs is far closer. Of the 78 games played in the 14 series to date the junior league teams have won 41 and the National League clubs 45, while two ended in ties. The lead in runs is almost as narrow, for the American League teams have amassed a total of 253 in the 72 games to the Nationals' 249.

THE BABY HID WHISKEY BOTTLE

Woman Got Away With Pint of Contraband Liquor.

BRIDGENORTH, Ont., Sept. 18.—Mrs. Mary Adamchuk, who, on three different occasions, has been in trouble with the customs authorities here on charges of attempting to smuggle liquor into dry Ontario, has a new one.

On Friday she was stopped by two Crowland policemen while alighting from Michigan Central train No. 41 and was searched. She carried her baby in her arms and protested vigorously against the suspicion. Under the sleeping babe the officers found a quart bottle of whiskey, while in the sleeve of her dress, under the child's head, was a pint bottle.

She was taken to court, but while her husband was paying her fine of $200, she stepped up to the desk, picked up the pint bottle and drained it.

Hastings Soldiers in the Casualty Lists.

HASTINGS, Sept. 18.—A great number of our citizens and those of the surrounding country, attended the Peterborough Exhibition during the week and report a very large crowd and a good exhibition.

Rally Day will be observed in the different Sunday schools on Sunday, Sept. 29th, when the Rally Day programme will be used generally.

A gloom was cast over the entire village on Thursday morning when the sad news was circulated that Lieut. Reg. Plant had made the supreme sacrifice and had given his life for king and country. A memeorial service will be held on Sunday evening next in the town hall. Much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved family.

Financial Meeting.

The financial meeting of the Campbellford district convened for business in the Methodist church here on Thursday last, beginning at 9 o'clock a.m.

Many important business problems were discussed and plans formulated for better work.

Mr. Green, of Peterborough, was heard in an exceptionally well prepared paper which was much enjoyed.

At 12 o'clock the delegation was treated to a sumptuous repast, prepared by the ladies of the congregation and served in the basement of the church. Needless to say this part of the programme was much enjoyed, after which order was called by the chairman, who announced that Rev. Mr. Cragg, of Japan, would give an address. Mr. Cragg is a very fluent speaker and was listened to with rapt attention, while he interestingly told of his work in that far off land and showed that white much had been done, much still remained to be done.

Mr. Cragg left on the 2.30 train, and the meeting repaired to the body of the church for further deliberations. Altogether the session was most interesting and helpful.

Casualty List.

Last week's casualty list contained the names of two Hastings boys, Pte. Cecil Gould and Pte. Herman McMillen. Their many friends are hoping that nothing serious may be the result and that they may soon be restored to their former health.

Mrs. Stewart and daughter Florence have moved their household effects into the house recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Martin.

Mrs. Bound of Myersburg, spent Thursday in town.

A serious accident happened last week when Mrs. Holland, by some means, fell and sustained a severe fracture of the hip. Medical assistance was immediately summoned and the patient was removed to the hospital, where she is being cared for.

Miss Pue of Belleville, was the Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Fife.

A memorial service was held on Sunday afternoon at Bethany in memory of the late Pte. Yule, who died in active service at the front.

Mrs. Alfred Wood, of Vancouver, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. D. Fife.

Mrs. W. Waye, Mrs. Wilcot Waye and children are removing to Toronto to spend the winter months.

Miss Flossie Carter has been visiting in Peterborough.

Miss Maggie Wilson, of Percy, spent Thursday in town.

Mrs. G. Buchanan is visiting friends in Peterborough.

ARE PREPARING TO WITHDRAW

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Germany gives some indication of preparing for a future withdrawal from the Baltic provinces. State Department advices to-day relate that the Teutons had begun the removal of all useful material from the provinces, chiefly Esthonia and Livonia, with the apparent intention of getting out later.

SIX DAYS IN OPEN BOAT.

Crew of Portuguese Steamer, Torpedoed, Reach Port.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 17.—The first officer and thirteen men of the crew of the Portuguese steamer Leixoes, which was torpedoed on Thursday, Sept. 12, about 200 miles off the coast, arrived here this morning after a trying six days' journey in an open boat. One boat with the captain and fourteen men landed at this port yesterday, as previously reported. A third boat, with 22 men, the remainder of the crew, is still missing.

SERIOUS SHORTAGE IN OIL RESOURCES.

Unmined Supply of Petroleum in the States only Seventy Barrels per Person.

Washington, Sept. 17. — The unmined supply of petroleum now available in the United States is only about 70 barrels for each person, a bulletin issued to-day by the Smithsonian Institute points out, in urging the necessity of conservation in the use of oil and gasoline. The bulletin, which is based on an exhaustive survey of the oil resources of the nation, says that under present conditions of mining a notorious high percentage of waste is involved, amounting according to conservative estimates to nearly ninety per cent. of the total resource value.

The presence in this country of extensive deposits of oil shale, it is said, removes the danger of early physical exhaustion in respect to oil, but does not necessarily ensure a deferment of the period of economic exhaustion, which is being rushed prematurely into the present by the current wasteful use of the limited petroleum resources.

Lenine, Trotsky and Company

Or the Betrayal of Russia.

Series of Communications Between Bolsheviki and German Government Reveal the Relationship Between the Two Parties.

What their "mutual activities" were to be is sufficiently indicated by Document No. 7, which is a photograph of a letter signed in cipher by this Major Luberts and his adjutant Lieutenant Hartwig. They notify the Bolsheviki leaders on January 12, 1918, that "By order of the German general staff" the German intelligence section" has informed us of the names and the characteristics of the main candidates for re-election" to the Russian Bolsheviki "Central Executive Committee" and "The general staff orders us to insist on the election of the following people." They add a list of Russian leaders satisfactory to the German general staff. The list is headed by Trotsky and Lenine. They were elected and the rest of the present Bolsheviki executive committee were chosen from the same German list.

Document No. 28 gives evidence of the quid pro quo. It is a photograph of a letter from the president of the German Imperial bank to the Bolshevik commissar of foreign affairs. It is marked "very secret, and" dated January 8, 1918. It says "Information has today been received by me from Stockholm that 50,000,000 roubles of gold have been transferred to be put at the disposal of People's Commissars" which is the title of the Bolshevik leaders. "This credit" the letter continues, "has been supplied to the Russian government in order to cover the cost of the keep of the Red Guards (the Bolshevik revoluntionary troops) and agitators in the country. The Imperial government considers it appropriate to remind the Soviet of the People's Commissars of the necessity of increasing propaganda in the country as the antagonistic attitude of the south of Russia and Siberia to the existing (Russian) government is troubling the German government.

Four days later the same president of the German Imperial bank sent another 5,000,000 roubles to the same address to provide for the sending of a Russian revolutionary leader to Vladivostok to get possession of the "Japanese and American materials." At that port, and if necessary to destroy them. A photograph of this letter is given as document No. 9.

There were earlier payments, but probably none later than these. None was necessary. By this time the loot of an empire lay open to the Bolsheviki and Germans.

Most significant of all are two photographs of further communications from the German Imperial bank, given as documents Nos. 10 and 11. One is a letter addressed to the chairman of the council of People's Commissars and the other is the "resolution of conference representatives of the German commercial banks "received by the chairman of the Bolsheviki central executive committee and indorsed by him in pen and ink. Together they give a complete synopsis of the terms on which Germany intends to have control of all Russian industries.

For five years from the signing of peace, English, French and American capital and Russia are to be "Banished" and "not to be allowed in the following industries: coal, metallurgical, machine building, oil chemical and pharnaceutical." These industries are to be developed under the control of a "supreme advisory organ consisting of 10 Russian specialists, 10 from German industrial organizations and the German and Austrian banks". Germany and Austria are to "enjoy the unlimited privilege of sending mechanics and qualified workmen into Russia."

"All other foreign mecnanics and workmen are not to be allowed to enter at all" for five years after the conclusion of peace between Russia and Germany. "Private banks in Russia arise only with the consent" of the union of German and Austrian banks and so forth.

And this conspiracy between German imperial capitalism and the pretended Russian Reds is indorsed by a Bolsheviki leaders, with the recommedation that it should be "taken under advisement" and "the ground prepared in the Soviet of the Workmen's and Soldier's deputies in case the council of the People's Commissar's will not accede to these requests.

Various details of the conspiracy between the Bolsheviki leaders and the German General Staff are exposed in documents 16 to 29. These are photographs of letter which passed between the Bolsheviki leaders and the German general staff ,or the German officers in Russia. Document No. 21 shows that on November 1, 1917, when Russia was still regarded as an ally of Great Britain France and America, the German general staff was having" the honor to request" the Bolsheviki leaders to inform it "at the earliest possible moment" concerning "the quantity and storage place of the supplies that have been received from America, England and France and also the units which are keeping guard over the stores."

Document No. 18 shows the German general staff requiring the Bolsheviki leaders to send "agitators to the camps of the Russian prisoners of war in Germany" in order that they might procure spies to work among the English and French troops and to further "peace propaganda," and this is proposed by the German general staff as being "according to negotiations between the Russian and German peace delegations at Brest-Litovsk."

In document No. 22 the Bolsheviki leaders and the Germans are arranging to send "agents in agitators and agent destructors" out of Vladivostok to "ports of the United States, Japan and British colonies in Eastern Asia."

In document No. 16 Trotsky is providing fraudulent passports for German officers who are going to England, France and America as spies and enemy agents and document 17 shows Trotsky indorsing a similiar proposal "to be urgently executed L. T."

Three German submarines are to be sent to the Pacific on the trans-Siberian railway by orders of the German high command. In document No. 23 lists of German and Russian spies watching the British, French and American ambassies in Petrograd are given in document No. 25 and finally in document No. 15 the Bolsheviki leaders are warned that information concerning "the connection of the German government with the Bolsheviki workers" has leaked out and that Russian troops are hearing of it.

Letters are given to show how the Bolsheviki leaders and the German officers arranged for the Russian National leaders, (Documents 35, 39, and 32), for the destruction of the Polish legendaries in the Russian army (Documents 40 to 42), for the disorganization of the Roumanian army and deposing of the Roumanian King (Document No. 37), for the substitution of officers satisfactory to Germany in command of Russian troops instead of patriotic Russian generals (Documents 31 and 32), for the suppression of patriotic agitation among the Russian soldiers (Documents 13 and 14), for an attack on the Italian Ambassador in Petrograd and the theft of his papers (Documents 26 and 27), and for the employment of German soldiers in Russian uniforms against the Russian national armies in the south (Document 35.)

Several of the letters are endorsed by Trotsky. Even standing alone they are complete proof that the Bolsheviki leaders were ruling as German agents in Russia and obeying orders to act against all Germany's enemies, even against Russia itself.

Moreover, these Bolsheviki leaders acted as German agents by suppressing their own Socialist revolution in the Russian provinces where their doctrines interferred with German plans of anexation. Document 46 is the original letter from the Petrograd department of the German General Staff, addressed to the Bolsheviki commissar of foreign affairs. It reads: "According to the instructions of the representative of our general staff, I have the honour once more to insist that you recall from Estland, Litva, and Courland, all agitators of the central executive committee of the societ of workmen and soldiers' deputies," and in Document 47 the general staff orders the Bolsheviki to cease the agitation on Estland, which had "finally led to the German landlords being declared outlaws" and to "take immediate steps for the restoring of the rights of the above-mentioned German landlords."

Fills Stomach With New Energy

Weak, Worn Out, Gassy, Sour Stomach Revived and Made to Enjoy Food With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Most of us eat three times a day and often forget that each meal should be disposed of in the stomach to make room for the next. The failure of the stomach to do this is called indigestion or dyspepsia, with its sour risings, gas, rumblings, pain, depression and the feeling of stuffiness when breathing is difficult.

The most effective remedy and the most reliable one, because you can get it at any drug store in the United States or Canada, is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, at 50 cents a box. Instead of depriving yourself of food or going on a starvation diet simply keep on as you have and let these tablets straighten out your stomach, digest the food and keep you in the fight.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Now, that the harvesting of the back lots in the city has progressed to a considerable extent, if reports of what has been accomplished were published, where some have not attained the success possible, the way to better success for next year might be indicated and thereby encourage some who have not succeeded in the past.

Our back lot is 50 by 85 feet, with a 4 foot roadway in the middle running lengthways. The stones were so plentiful on the first ploughing only about one-half of the ground was turned over. Since that time we have removed 32 large waggon loads and now have two more ready—all stones of a size to interfere with cultivation are removed to the depth of a spading.

Now, in our crop for this year rhubarb came into use on the 27th of April, and until well on in August it has been in use almost daily, two and three times a day for a family of four people, with a quantity to spare for others. We have had leaves measuring 32 inches across and stalks (I will not say how big for it might be considered a good sized fish story.)

Next date is the 12th of July, with ripe tomatoes and potatoes fit for use. We have sufficient for our use of onions, carrots, beets, salsify, spinach, cauliflowers, cabbage, tomatoes, a-plenty, beans, corn, lettuce, peppers and artichoke stalks seven feet high, between six and seven bags of potatoes, pie pumpkins, cucumbers, and turnips; with a variegated and liberal supply of flowers.

As some indication of our success: In the Farm and Dairy Competition (open to Ontario and Quebec) we were awarded a second prize for potatoes, and in the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition—

Second prize for potatoes.
Second prize for pie pumpkin.
Second prize for pink tomatoes.

On our lawn in the front is a walnut planted some ten years ago, which at one foot above the ground is 25 inches in circumference, with a liberal top, and bearing walnuts for some years; also an oak tree two feet above the ground which measured on Good Friday last was 9 feet 3 inches in circumference. This was planted before we located at 550 Homewood avenue, Peterboro.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—With reference to the meeting to be held in the Public Library on Friday evening next with the object of forming a Local Association of the Boy Scouts Association, with your kind permission I should like to use this medium to extend a cordial invitation to the same, to those clergy Sunday School and Public School teachers and others (both ladies and gentlemen) whom I have not had the pleasure of seeing and inviting personally. Those whom I have seen are without exception heartily in accord with the movement and prospects are decidedly bright for a successful launching of a Local Association. I sincerely hope that every church and Sunday School in the city will be represented at the meeting. Thanking you for the space in your paper so kindly supplied gratis for the Boy Scouts Association propaganda. I am,

Yours very truly,

Home Complexion Peeler Works Wonders

To keep the face, neck, arms and hands truly beautiful and youthful in appearance, the treatment which seems most sensible is one which will actually remove the skin itself immediately it begins to age, fade, coarsen or discolour. The only known treatment which will do this, aside from a painful, expensive surgical operation, is the application of ordinary mercolized wax, which is as harmless as it is effective.

The wax is put on at night, just as you apply cold cream, and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead and half dead surface skin in almost invisible flaky particles, a little each day, no discomfort being experienced. With the disappearance of the old cuticle, the newer, healthier skin underneath gradually appears, richly beautiful with the flush of youth. This mercolized wax, which you can get at any drug store in original package, is indeed a veritable wonder-worker.

Rasberries can be canned without cooking.

A Scene in the fascinating comedy "DADDY LONG LEGS" the seat sale for which opens to-morrow morning.

"Judy" the little heroine of "Daddy Long Legs" which will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, Sept. 21st, believed in fairies, because, for years she had told wonderful tales of them to the smaller children in the orphanage and she had faith that they would rescue her from the drudgery of the asylum. When this takes place, at the instance of a somewhat cynical bachelor, who stipulates that she shall not be told the name of her benefactor, Judy discovers that she still lacked that which she wanted most; someone to love and someone to be loved by. The working out of this idea provides the romance. If there remains a bit of your youthful ideals and fancies and understanding of the "once-upon-a-time" sort of thing, which made your childhood the glory-time of your life you will not wish to miss the opportunity of seeing "Daddy Long Legs". A matinee will be given at popular prices.

NEVER FELLS NEED OF MEDICINE NOW

Tanlac Completely Restored Health Several Months Ago.

"Positively, if Tanlac had been made especially for my case it couldn't have relieved me more quickly and completely than it has," said Mrs. Agnes Kerr, who lives at 680 Ossington Avenue, Toronto, the other day.

"For several months," she continued, "I was in such a weak and run-down condition from stomach trouble and nervousness that my whole system was affected. My food did not agree with me, and after eating anything I had an uncomfortable feeling of tightness in my stomach and would be distressed for hours from the gas that formed from my undigested food. I felt fidgity and nervous all day and many a night I was so restless that I could hardly sleep at all, then I would get up in the morning all worn out and with no life about me, and I was so weak and listless that I could hardly do a thing. I fell off in weight and kept going down and feeling so awful that I saw I would have a breakdown if I didn't get hold of something to stop it.

"I took three bottles of Tanlac, and it certainly put me right back on my feet again. That nervousness left me and I haven't been troubled with gas or indigestion now for several months. My food agrees with me perfectly and gives me proper nourishment, and I am stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time. After Tanlac built me up so wonderfully last spring I stopped taking it and I haven't felt the need of a dose of medicine since."

Tanlac is for sale in Peterborough at the W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; Havelock, A. C. Denike; Lakefield, Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; Fowler's Corners, W. A. Hunter; Gelert, A. G. Scott; Westwood, G. Pringle & Sons.

Losses in the Italian Army

Italy Will be Stronger Than Ever After the War.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Sept. 18.—The losses in the Italian army since Italy entered the war amount to 1,350,000 in killed and permanently disabled, according to a statement by Francesco Nitti, Minister of the Treasury here to-day, in an interview. However, he declared, "after the war Italy will be stronger than ever in men, due to the cessation of emigration. Our difficulty to-day is in the labour field, for no fewer than 5,000,000 men have been called to arms since the beginning of the war."

GETS EIGHTEEN MONTHS FOR FLOGGING HIS SON

CORNWALL, Sept. 18. — Police Magistrate Danis handed out a sentence of eighteen months in the Ontario Reformatory at hard labour to Louis McCormack. The accused was charged with unmercifully beating his fifteen-year-old son Ernest with a "cat of nine tails" on the night of September 1, because the boy had gone for a drive in company with a younger brother with their uncle's horse and buggy.

The boy's body was badly lacerated, the strap used being made of a heavy buggy tug cut into strips.

The evidence showed that the welts produced on the little fellow's body were worse than floggings sometimes given in jails, and the physician who examined the boy's body declared that what the father deserved was a dose of the medicine administered to the boy.

GERMAN AND AUSTRIAN SOLDIERS FIGHT

Austrians Are Being Used For Garrison Duty.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18. — Several "bloody collisions" have occurred in Belgium between Austrian and German soldiers, according to the Belgische Dagblad. The trouble arose from the fact that the Austrians are being used for garrison duty, while the Germans are being sent to the front. It is estimated that more than thirty thousand Austrian soldiers are on garrison duty in Belgium.

Food Board Flashes

The blacklist of transgressors of the food laws grows. All over the country now municipal and provincial authorities are on the quivive for any violations. In addition, the Food Board Inspectors are busily at work rounding up delinquents, with the result that every day dealers and public eating house proprietors are finding themselves liable to fines or with their sentences suspended. Prosecutions are numerous. Well over 100 licenses, including 20 confectioners and 30 public eating house proprietors, have recently had their licenses cancelled or suspended through the direct action of the Board. This is apart altogether from the general prosecutions.

Plot to Attack the Government

Portuguese Government Will Take Possession of Public Services.

Special to The Examiner:

MADRID, Sept. 18.—A plot to attack the Portuguese President and Government, said to have been concocted by a number of officers and non-commissioned officers, has been discovered, a semi-official despatch from Lisbon stated to-day. It is planned to isolate in Lisbon those who have been apprehended. The Portuguese government is taking possession of railways, telegraphs, telephones and waterways.

FARMER FINDS SILO USED AS "STILL" FOR BOOZE SUBSTITUTE.

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 18.—A unique method of providing the necessary "fire water" for the thirsty ones during the dry spell that has now existed for some time in Ontario comes from a farmer residing not far from the city. The authenticity of the story is vouched for by this man, who claims to have himself tested the manufactured "whiskey."

He states that some little time ago he noticed that a couple of hired men on his farm had been getting drunk quite frequently, and after several efforts to locate the source of their supply, he watched them closely for some weeks. He searched the entire premises, but could find no liquor anywhere until one day the two men went out after supper, as he thought, to go to town. He followed them and finally located them in the rear of the barn, sitting by the cement wall of a large silo. Attached to the wall extending a distance of about two feet was a small two-inch pipe, and from this he saw the two men take a couple of drinks, after which they reeled over in a rather intoxicated condition.

An investigation by the farmer revealed a bottle attached to the end of the pipe, into which a brown substance was dripping from the silo wall. The farmer, it is said, took this to the house, and after examining it, poured out a glass for himself. He says that about one small drink made him so drunk that he remembers nothing more.

The beverage he afterwards discovered is the juice from the ensilage stored in the silo, and it is far stronger than the best whiskey obtainable.

FASHION has concentrated most of her attention on the neck-line of the new blouses, cutting her favorites in round or straight Grecian effects and from more than a few of them entirely omitting collars of any kind. When collars do appear they are straightway relegated to the back, though some push themselves to the front and nearly to the waist with conspicuous success.

The Blouse Department abounds in models of this type, in dark tints for harmonizing with Autumn Suitings, and in the universally-wanted flesh and ivory white. The three described below are representative of the showing. Thus:

An interesting example of this round collarless neck—a flesh pink georgette blouse that buttons in the back. There is a band of Blue Devil blue georgette around neck and cuffs and a set-in yoke hemstitched in Blue Devil. Daintily pin-tucked, both front and back. The price is..... $10.00

Another pink georgette model shows the new cascade collar front with revers falling softly and daintily right down to the waist. The rest of the collar is convertible. Collar, front and cuffs are prettily trimmed with beautiful Venise lace. Priced modestly at..... $7.95

Fashion's most recent idea of the blouse practical is seen in this simple tucked model. It is made of splendid quality white crepe de chine. The front is given a panelled effect by two wide tucks at the side of a group of pin tucks. The collar is square at the back and narrow in front. Priced at..... $9.75

CHEESE BUYERS BOOSTED PRICE TO-DAY TO FILL URGENT ORDERS

Sacrificed Commissions to Get Part of the Factory Offerings—The Co-operation That Has Been Evident All Season Was Shot to Pieces This Morning.

22 1-2 CENTS TOP PRICES

Brisk bidding marked this morning's meeting of the cheese board. The price reached 22 1-2 cents after a merry scramble by the buyers, who seemed to have imperative orders to be filled. Mr. G. A. Gillespie opened at 22c, and Messrs. Kerr, Cook, Morton and Thompson boosted it to 22 7-16c, the last quotation being for the entire board. Mr. Gillespie secured first call by raising the price almost to the Commission's limit. By that time the buyers' commission had been thrown away, thus giving an idea of how eagerly they chased the price up through the fractions.

The factories boarded as follows:

Keene	80
Warminster	50
Shearer	100
Selwyn	95
Villiers	90
Warsaw	140
Westwood	150
Oakdale	70
Young's Point	105
Lang	95
N. Dummer	75
E. Emily	80
Stoney Lake	30
Norwood	150
Killarney	63
	1413

Mr. Gillespie secured Warminster, Selwyn, Warsaw and Young's Point.

Mr. Thompson took Keene, Shearer, Lang, East Emily and Stoney Lake, and Mr. Kerr bought Norwood, Killarney, Oakdale, Westwood and Villiers.

The Board then adjourned for two weeks.

Mr. Kerr urged the factories to enter their best cheese in the Winter Dairy Exhibition at Belleville, on January 9th and 10th, under the auspices of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association. There is a long list of fine prizes, including a lot of specials. The Association's prizes for cheese made betwen Sept. 15th and 30th are $100 each for white and colored, and the same money for the make from Oct. 15th to 31st. There are also attractive prizes for flat and Stilton cheese, for creamery and dairy butter. Mr. G. A. Gillespie has a number of the prize lists which should be in the hands of every maker in the district who proposes showing at this exhibition.

British Troops Moving Ahead Near St. Quentin

Enemy Ordered to Maintain Positions at All Costs.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Field Marshal Haig, two months from the day of the Allied offensive on the Marne, has begun a closer investment of St. Quentin. His troops are attacking north-west of the city with the evident intention of outflanking it on the north. New operations against this bastion of the Hindenburg line follow the British capture of Holnon Village, on high ground, three miles north-west of St. Quentin, Tuesday night. Holnon is on a hill, as is Maissemy, captured last Saturday. These hill positions dominate the terrain north of St. Quentin and the road connecting the city with Cambrai. From favourable "jumping off points" the British are moving in toward the city. Details of the operation are still lacking, but undoubtedly the British will meet with stiff opposition. The Germans here are on or near the Hindenburg positions. Documents show that the enemy troops have been ordered to maintain their positions.

Horse Had to be Destroyed

Was Severely Burned in Early Morning Fire on Aylmer Street.

From some unknown cause the stable of County Constable A. Moore, on the west side of Aylmer street, between King and Sherbrooke streets, caught fire and was burning fiercely, illuminating the whole street, when the fire brigade arrived at 4.25 this morning. Over 900 feet of hose was promptly laid and a heavy pressure applied to the frame structure. The fire started on the ground floor in the centre of the stable and spread along the floor and through the stalls to the loft. Mr. Moore's horse, which was in the stable, was so badly burned that it had to be shot. A great deal of roofing material was badly damaged, the top was burned on the buggy and about half a ton of hay was destroyed. The damage to the stable amounts to about $200. William Deymon, 284 Aylmer street, noticed the reflection of the fire in his bedroom window and immediately telephoned the fire hall, while his wife woke up Mr. Moore, the owner of the stable, at 260 Aylmer street. P. C. Young was the first man at the stable and tried to release the horse, but owing to the heat and smoke he was unable to enter the building.

The barn is insured in two local insurance agencies.

German Attack Was Repulsed

American Big Guns Threw a Terrific Fire Into Every Area.

(By the Associated Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Sept. 18.—German infantry attempted to attack the American lines west of the Moselle Tuesday evening, but the enemy troops were driven back by the fire of American artillery. When observers reported that a light line of German infantrymen was approaching, the American big guns threw a terrific barrage into that area. There were no further movements by the enemy. Observers reported this morning that there were no living Germans in the region where they were sighted last night. Quite a number of dead, however, were seen.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catharrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

AN IMPRESSIVE SPECTACLE

(By Captain Francis D. Grierson.)

The celebration of High Mass in a Cathedral is always an impressive spectacle, but rarely has there been a more solemn service than that conducted at Amiens on August 15th last. It marked an epoch in the history of that famous city, for it was the occasion of the resumption of services in the great Cathedral. The organ pealed out once more after nearly half a year of silence, a silence caused by the guns of a blasphemous and ruthless enemy.

Driving through the silent town in the sunshine of a summer morning, one's heart sickened at the desolation. Streets that had been thronged with busy crowds but a few months before now echoed only to the footsteps of a party of troops or an occasional civilian from the neighbourhood. Once thriving shops were closed, and on the wide boulevards military lorries and cars passed and repassed, directed and controlled by an armed traffic control staff. Here and there a pile of masonary was all that remained of a stately building—a victim to the German bombardment.

The great Cathedral had not sustained serious damage, though broken windows and some heaps of rubbish showed that it had not entirely escaped. Inside and out hundreds of sandbags had been built up to afford such protection as was possible.

The scene inside the building was the more striking from its very informality—apart, of course, from the ritual. The congregation was chiefly military, soldiers of all ranks and several nations: the blue of the French Poilu contrasting sharply with the khaki of his British neighbours. The costumes of French and English Red Cross nurses added a picturesque effect.

Although civilians had evacuated the town by desire of the military authorities, not a few of them returned to take part in this solemn thanksgiving for the Allied successes. Their air of quiet fortitude struck the observer forcibly; the German guns might destroy their houses but could not break their spirit.

The service was conducted by one who was, perhaps, more entitled to that honour than greater dignitaries of his church—a Vicaire who had remained in Amiens throughout the period of its ordeal. His firm, calm, face and quiet dignity of manner bespoke him a man of no mean order. In truth he had earned the right to look around him with pride as he took the richly upholstered Sedilia of the celebrant, placed for him near to, but below the high altar.

The choir, seated near the organ (but in the ordinary congregational seats), was composed of French soldiers. Two violin solos were given, the great organ providing a rich background of harmony against which the wailing of the strings stood out with great effect. The violinist, wearing the uniform of a private in the Red Cross service, was formerly at the Conservatoire in Paris.

The officiating priest was assisted by another Vicaire and two parish priests, and the acolyte (or Server) was a Poilu, whose blue uniform and heavy boots gave a curiously dramatic air to the little group before the altar. The scene illustrated that rapprochement between the military and the ecclesiastic, that union of religion and materialism which only the justice of the cause of the Allied nations could produce.

The service was a long one, and the congregation consisted of steadfast, grateful worshippers gathered to give thanks to the Almighty that He permitted them once more to assemble in one of the most beautiful of the shrines dedicated to His service. As they filed out into the sunlit square on every countenance could be read an exaltation and a determination to continue bravely and unflinchingly the great Crusade of the Allies until peace and justice for the world, sanity and the cleanliness of life, have been established so firmly as to defy the assaults of men whose only law is that of the stronger hand and whose professions of morality are an insult to their Creator.

FIVE CHILDREN HAD THROATS CUT

Horrible Murder in Moose Jaw—Father Gave Himself Up.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Sept. 18.—About 12.30 o'clock last night, Wm. Bromley, driver for the Dominion Express Company, walked into the Central Police Station and horrified the sergeant in charge by calmly stating that he had murdered his five children by cutting their throats and that they had better lock him up. Bromley was accompanied by his wife, who heard the terrible news for the first time when her husband, who had appeared perfectly sane to her, told the story to the police. Bromley was left at home with the children while his wife went to the picture show. She returned home some time about 11.30 o'clock, but Bromley refused to allow her into the house. She argued with him and he finally asked her to go to the police station with him and she would then learn the reason. The policemen who rushed to the house found the children on the bed, each with its throat cut so badly that the heads were practically severed from the body.

TEN MET DEATH IN FACTORY FIRE

NEARLY ALL THE VICTIMS OF NEWARK BLAZE WERE GIRLS

NEWARK, N.J., Sept. 17.—Trapped in a cloak-room on the top floor, eight girls, a boy and a man perished here to-day in a fire which destroyed the plant of the American Button Company. Another girl was killed when, seeking to escape from the flames, she leaped from a window Nine other girls were injured, several fatally.

At 2 o'clock the factory hummed with the industry of more than 300 young women engaged in making buttons for army and navy uniforms. At 3.30 the building was a flame-swept ruin, the top floor of which formed a tomb for workers who had been driven into the cloakroom by flames and smoke. At 4.30 the fire was virtually extinguished and the task of identifying victims began.

The girls on the lower floors made their escape, some by jumping and other by the fire escapes. It is believed that when the girls found escape by means of fire escapes and stairways cut off they fled in a panic to the cloakroom, where their bodies were later found huddled together. All were burned beyond recognition, and it was only through trinkets and bit of scorched attire that identification was at all possible.

Th ef tarseteri d fi

The fire started in cans of lacquer stored on the second floor, according to the factory superintendent, who said that an explosion resulted when a defectively insulated electric wire came in contact with one of the cans.

MRS. BOOTH'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—After an investigation that continued for the greater part of two days, a coroner's jury at Rosebank, yesterday, brought in a verdict of accidental death in connection with the drowning of Mrs. Arthur G. Booth, of 91 Hayden street, Toronto. Mrs. Booth lost her life on Saturday evening last, in the shallow water of the Rouge River, when a rowboat in which she and a companion, William McCutcheon, of Manning Avenue, were riding, was capsized.

Labor Congress Suggests Change in Pensions Scheme

Quebec, Sept. 17.—The introduction of further resolutions ocupied the attention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada during the early portion of this morning's session. The first presented urged that the nature of disability be made the sole basis for pensions in the Canadian Expeditionary forces without regard to rank. A similar resolution was voted down at the recent Dominion Convention of the Great War Veterans in Toronto.

Another resolution declared the present separation allowance paid by the government to be totally inadequate and urged that they be increased to one hundred dollars per month. Another anti-Coolie labor resolution was added to the several already introduced on that subject.

MACHINE POLITICS CHARGED

The charge that "machine politics is sticking out a foot at this convention," was made by Delegates Rees of Vancouver following the introduction of a resolution by Delegate T. A. Stevenson of Toronto, to fix Thursday morning for the election of officers.

"This is a fine school for a new delegate," he continued. "Everybody is job-hunting. Since I came to Quebec I have heard nothing but 'Who is going to England?' 'Who is going to the United States?' etc. I do not think that is the business of the convention."

The election of officers finally was set for Friday afternoon, on the suggestion of John W. Bruce, of Toronto.

POLICE DELEGATES CHEERED.

The presentation of a supplementary report on Credentials brought loud cheers at the reading of names of three delegates from the Federated Union of Police of Montreal, and two from the Fire Fighters' Union of the same city.

For Reconstruction.

Attacks on the aims of the officers of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and Labour leaders generally featured this morning's session of the thirty-fourth convention here.

These attacks followed the introduction of a resolution by John W. Bruce of Toronto, providing for a programme of reconstruction after the war. He suggested a committee of five to draw up a declaration of principle. Secretary-Treasurer Draper urged that the matter be left to the incoming executive.

Hand Picked Delegates.

"When the conference was held with the Government last January," he said, "the fifty delegates were hand picked by the executive, and the masses were not consulted. Furthermore, they allowed themselves to be influenced by elaborate entertainments paid for by the Government."

"The more I see of the officers," declared Delegate Osborne, of Winnipeg, "the more I believe there is incomparably more intelligence among the rank and file."

Delegate T. A. Stevenson, of Toronto, declared that when the majority of any convention elected officers it ill became any individuals to attack them.

"As far as I know," he said, "the officers all have come from the ranks."

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

By a vote of 256 to 45 the convention voted to leave the matter in the hands of the incoming executives. The defeat of an amendment to refer the executive's findings to the rank and file for revision was practically a vote of confidence in the officers. The vote was 245 to 78.

STRAWSTACK IGNITED, HEAVY LOSS ENSUES.

Paris, Ont., Sept. 17. — A disastrous fire occurred this afternoon on the farm of Mr. W. Tennant, 2nd concession of Brantford Township.

While thrashing was in operation a flash of fire came from the blower and ignited the straw stack, the flames of which quickly spread to the large bank barn in spite of the efforts of the men. In a short time the building was a burning mass, in which 600 bushels of grain, more than that quantity unthrashed in the mow, as also all the season's hay, a gasoline engine, and implements were destroyed. The structure was 100 x 36 feet, with stables beneath. A large drive shed and a smaller barn were also destroyed. The loss will be heavy. The farm was owned by Mr. Wm. Tennant of Paris, and leased by James O'Reilly & Son, who will also be heavy losers.

BURGLAR AND DOPE FIEND.

Allegation Against Young Man Arrested at Smith's Falls.

SMITH'S FALLS, Sept. 18.—A. E. Labarge, an alleged "dope" fiend, hestled snugly into an overcoat bearing the name of J. H. Perkins, Belleville, at the C.P.R. depot here on Saturday morning, when Chief of Police G. A. Phillips disturbed his dreams. The arrest is the sequel of a series of robberies at Belleville, Montreal and Smith's Falls. Early on Saturday Abbott's drug store was entered from the rear by the smashing of a pane of glass, through which the burglar crawled. The thief got away with a two-ounce bottle of morphine, two full bottles of codeine phosphate, thirteen bottles of strychnine sulphate, pills of various strengths, and some other goods, but overlooked the cocaine bottle and 1,000 morphia tablets. He also took a shaving brush and rifled the till of four cents, but overlooked $20.

Labarge claims Toledo as the place of his birth. For some time he claims to have served with the Home Guards, of London, Ont. He was gathered in on June 4th by the military police of Montreal. His discharge there gives the reason for his rejection for military service as morphinism.

Abbott's drug store has been robbed three times in 25 years, and on each occasion the burglars have been gathered in by the Smith's Falls police, and twice by Chief Phillips.

VANCOUVER SORTS AUSTRALIAN WHEAT

Marks New Step in Development as Grain Distributing Point.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 19.—Marking a new step in the development of the port of Vancouver as a wheat distributing point, Australian wheat is for the first time in history being bulked and cleaned at the Canadian Government grain elevators, preparatory to being shipped to the country. When one of the big locally-built steel freighters clears from this port she will have in her holds some 50,000 bushels of combined Australian and Canadian wheat for England.

Two big cargoes of wheat had been delivered at this port from Australia within the last few days. These were brought back by the locally-built auxiliary schooners Geraldine Wolvin and Jessie Norcross and have been deposited at the Government elevators. This is only the forerunner of many more cargoes, the auxiliary schooners Jean Stedman and Janet Carruthers also being en route to this port wheat laden. It is believed that a large percentage of the Australian wheat yield will in future be finding its way to this port as a distributing port.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are even just a little hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone losing hearing or who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

A Report on Farm Conditions For First Half of September

Threshing is General Throughout the Country—Reports Are Well Up or Above Earlier Expectations.

Threshing is as active as can be, and actual results as a rule continue to be well up to or above earlier expectations.

Owing to the frequent rains of the last two or three weeks some spring wheat and oats are still out in the stook in some of the more northern districts. One farmer in Norfolk, however, has already marketed 2,000 bushels of oats at 75 cents a bushel.

Essex reports that native varieties of corn have ripened nicely, and that a large proportion will be saved for seed, but while Delaware corn is ripe in some cases it is very uneven in growth. Southern corn is still growing, but fears are expressed that some of it may not mature. In several counties in Eastern Ontario some ensilage corn got touched by frost on the night of Tuesday, the 10th, and as a consequence had to be cut early.

Roots have been growing well again since the late summer rains came. Farmers around Fergus are reported to be shipping turnips.

Some fields of beans in Kent which were being cut had to be left out in the rain, which may mean considerable loss to the crop.

Clover Seed.

Farmers have been giving more attention this season to raising their own red clover seed, and in the majority of cases the result has been very satisfactory.

There is considerable enquiry for winter-keeping apples, which are scarce, but fall apples are not in much demand. In Norfolk, where a number of apple organizations exist, No. 1's are selling at from $4.00 to $5.50 a barrel, according to variety.

The recent rains have given a good start to the newly planted wheat, but have been delaying further seeding.

Cattle are doing nicely upon the greatly improved pastures. A number of farmers are buying stockers and feeders for the spring market at from 10 to 11 cents a lb. One man in Brant Co. has paid 12 cents a lb. for some which he will run over another year. Dairy cattle in Eastern Ontario are changing hands at from $100 to $140.

Hogs show a greater variation in price than for months, the range being from $18.25 to $19.50. Norfolk states that the supply of hogs is likely to keep up in the immediate future.

Lambs have been selling in Glengarry during the week at $15.00 each.

Requests for farm labour are now largely local or special. There has been considerable demand in Kent for men to harvest beans, corn and tobacco, and some hands from North Carolina are working in the tobacco fields at $35.00 a week and board, with travelling expenses both ways paid. Silo filling is also creating a call for help for the next few weeks.

THE BRITISH ARE STILL ADVANCING NEAR ST. QUENTIN

Over Six Thousand Prisoners Captured Yesterday—A Joint British and French Advance.

WAR BULLETINS

Thursday Morning Bulletin:

British Army in France, Sept. 19.—Field Marshal Haig's report last night says that the British penetrated the enemy defences north west of St. Quentin to a depth of three miles and captured more than six thousand prisoners. To the south of St. Quentin the French cooperated in what likely will prove an operation of vast importance with respect to the Hindenburg defensive positions.

DON HUNT JOINS STAR.

Resigns as Principal Private Secretary to Hon. N. W. Rowell—Comes to Toronto.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19. — Mr. Main Johnson, who since 1912 has been principal private secretary to the Hon. N. W. Rowell, has accepted an editorial post on The Toronto Star, with which he was associated before going with Mr. Rowell. He is, therefore, resigning from his present position. Mr. Johnson will go to Toronto and take up his new duties within a week or two.

Trouble For Hunland.

London Free Press:— The bombing season is rapidly approaching, when the long nights will cover the movements of flocks of bombing machines. The Allies have prepared a large programme in this direction, and the staying powers of the German people must withstand this further test or give way. And there will be some room for surprise if the ordeal is not more than the disciplined German mind can forbear.

GRAIN MARKET

The demand for cash oats is very strong, with receipts up to the present comparatively light. The tendency of the market is upward, but until the Western crop is on the move more freely, dealers are chary in giving quotations. The Board of Grain Supervisors yesterday fixed the price of Quebec wheat No. 2 at $2.26, in store, Montreal, effective from Sept. 16.

Food Board Flashes

Girls are wanted in the worst way for the canneries in the Niagara fruit district for the next two months. The season for tomatoes and plums is in full swing. The work is pleasant-indeed, most of the girls prefer it to outdoor work. If speedy workers, they can make $2.50 or $3 a day and they are always assured of a minimum of $1.50. Write to Miss Hazel L. Martin, Ontario Government Employment Bureau, 43 King Street West, Toronto, for further information. She is the connecting link between the canner and the girl who wants to do her bit in helping to take care of the 1918 harvest of fruit.

CARDINAL FARLEY DEAD.

Archbishop of New York Passed Away at Country Home.

MARMORNECK, N.Y., Sept. 19.—Cardinal John M. Farley, Archbishop of New York, died at his country home here on Tuesday night.

Lakefield Fair Enjoyed a Larger Attendance Than Any Previous Year

The Total Receipts Amounted to Nearly Four Hundred Dollars—New Faces on the Directorate—Good Showing of Cattle and Horses.

LIST OF PRIZEWINNERS

An increase in attendance of 250 over any previous industrial exhibition in the village, marked the Lakefield Fair held yesterday and on Tuesday, when 1250 persons passed through the gates. The receipts totalled $372.95 approximately.

THE OFFICERS.

New faces appeared amongst the 1918 officers. Mr. J. E. Galvin, as president, used every way and means to make the show the splendid success it was and took a great interest in having everything up to and ahead of the standard set in years past. Mr. T. Braden assumed his new position as secretary-treasurer, to succeed Mr. Wesley Sherin, who had become identified with the exhibition.

The officers all told were:
President—J. E. Galvin.
Vice-Presidents—R. H. Knox and G. A. Graham.
Secretary-Treasurer—T. Braden.
Hon. Directors—R. Garbutt, S. J. Wallace, F. J. Moore, and Reeves of Smith, Douro, Ennismore and Dummer.
Directors—G. E. Johnston, J. J. Bickell, Dr. D. Munro, B. Q. Dench, Bruce Garbutt, Albert Darling, H. C. Garbutt, Wilbert Rosborough, T. T. Milburn and Howard Beavis.
Directors of Ladies Work—Mrs. T. Braden, Mrs. R. Garbutt, Mrs. G. A. Graham and Mrs. J. E. Galvin.
Auditors — LaVerne Walton and Alex. Graham.

THE EXHIBITS.

Mr. Braden said that he had never seen a finer class of cattle and horses, all being far ahead of any previous year with the exception of the agricultural horses, which were decidedly down. The fruit was very good in quality, but few entries. This is accounted for by the fact that most of the late apples were winter killed. The embroidery and hand work was worthy of a city fair from the standpoint of range and number of pieces shown. The judges themselves admitted difficulty in distinguishing between the really beautiful handwork displayed.

THE RACES.

Unfortunately the heavy and incessant rain prevented the races from being enjoyed by the crowd but some good horsemanship was displayed with a committee of Dr. J. R. Fraser, Dr. D. Munroe, Dr. I. S. Gibson, Mr. D. H. Morrison and Mr. W. H. Casement in charge.

The winners in the events run were—

Free for All—
E. W. Jone's "Indian" 1 1 1

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday, 131 cars, with 1,816 cattle, 250 calves, 1,515 hogs, and 2,523 sheep and lambs.

A rather heavy run of cattle of very poor average quality, on top of quite a few loads of left-over stale cattle from Monday's market, produced an almost congested condition of the market for yesterday. The result was that in order to make something like a clean-up before the end of the week, substantial concessions in the prices of common butcher steers, heifers and cows were, perforce, made by the commission men and drovers. An average drop of from 50c. to 75c. on common stuff would mark this week's decline, common cows in some cases going off a dollar. For good to choice quality butcher cattle and heavy steers, the market continues to hold quite steady to firm, but there are very few of these available just at present.

Lambs were steady to firm at Tuesday's 25c. advance.

FIRE LOSS VERY GREAT

WASTAGE SAPS ECONOMIC VITALITY OF DOMINION.

Figures Compiled by Commission of Conservation Indicate That Canada's Annual Fire Waste Is Larger Than That of Any Other Civilized Country In the World—Has Become a Grave Problem.

CANADA'S annual fire waste is $2.73 for every man, woman and child, and is larger than that of any other civilized country in the world, according to a most exhaustive report by the Commission of Conservation just made public. This enormous waste, the commission asserts, is sapping the economic vitality of the country, and the immediate adoption of compulsory fire prevention measures is necessary.

The investigation also revealed the fact that the expense of conducting the business of fire insurance in Canada is unduly high, and that there are grave abuses inherent in the department agency system.

The report, which was compiled for the commission by J. G. Grove Smith, says that since Confederation, fire loss in Canada, excluding forest fires, has been $700,000,000. Of this sum $350,000,000 is made up of direct fire losses, $150,000,000 represents the cost of maintaining public and private fire protection service, whilst $197,000,000 is the amount of insurance premiums paid but not returned to policy-holders in compensation for losses. Nearly 200 people are burned to death and about 500 seriously injured by fire every year. In the four normal years, 1912-1915, Canada's annual per capita fire loss was $2.73, as compared with $2.26 in the United States, 64 cents in England, 74 cents in France, 28 cents in Germany and 13 cents in Switzerland. A disquieting feature is that the losses in this country are increasing with great rapidity.

The commission says that 70 per cent. of the fires in Canada are caused by carelessly faulty building construction, arson and lack of fire prevention laws, such laws as exist being but poorly enforced. The Canadian fire departments are described as the best in the world, but they are not preventing a steady growth of fire losses.

In dealing with the remedy for preventives the commission says that compulsory legislation, making individuals responsible for their own careless acts, is imperative. The public, it is asserted, must be aroused to their relative responsibility so that public opinion will urge and support the adoption of restrictive legislation. The Dominion Government not being given direct jurisdiction by the B.N.A. Act, it should, the commission thinks, conduct a campaign to educate the public to their responsibility. The purpose of this would be to assist provincial fire prevention efforts. The Dominion Government, it is said, should also maintain a testing laboratory to establish standards in building materials and devices.

The commission contends that the high cost of doing business implies extravagant administration on the part of the insurance companies, and says that from 1869 to 1916 the public has paid the insurance companies 65 cents for distributing every dollar of indemnity. This, it continues, gives food for thought when it is remembered that, under present Government management, the collection of customs and inland revenue cost less than five per cent. of the receipts. Since the establishment of Government insurance in New Zealand in 1905 the rates on mercantile risks have been reduced 10 per cent., and on dwellings 33 1-3 per cent. The report asserts that insurance agents in Canada are paid, on the average, a commission of slightly over 20 per cent., obviously a large expenditure on middlemen. It is also stated that the number of agents is excessive, a circumstance which makes necessary a higher commission than is economically necessary.

"The root evil of the insurance business and one of the greatest factors in the excessive fire waste in Canada is undoubtedly the method of compensating agents solely on a commission basis," the report declares. "The careless agent is paid equally well with the careful agent. This tends to over-insurance, carelessness in the use and care of property, and arson, all of which cause a heavier fire waste. The remedy for this, the commission says, is a profit-sharing commission for agents, whereby those who write good risks would be more highly remunerated than those who write bad ones.

The Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, it is pointed out, has attempted, but failed, to enforce a similar system of contingent commissions on account of the disadvantage under which it would place its members in competition with non-board companies. The Commission of Conservation, therefore, recommends that uniform legislation be drafted into the Dominion and Provincial Insurance Acts to establish the principle of profit-sharing commissions for all companies, leaving the companies and their agents to work out the details.

Telephoning From Trains.

The experimental stage has not yet passed, but tests would seem to establish the practicability of the invention.

SPA.

A Famous European Resort With a History.

The little hill town in the Liege district of Belgium which gave its name, Spa, to the typical pleasure resort boasting springs, is enjoying a very questionable notoriety. For some time it has been one of the headquarters of the German war lord. In a sense, of course, Spa has always been a royal town. It began its long and eventful career with royalty, and the queen of King Leopold and his daughters made its small palace a place for frequent "villegiature." Curiously enough, the first of the monarchs who gave it enduring fame was that Germanized Russian Emperor, Peter the Great. In 1717, he was at Spa, and in his memory the little Ponhon spring was inclosed and perpetuated for the benefit of posterity. Monarchs of his and other reigning European families followed. There was Gustavus III, of Sweden, the Emperor Joseph II., a former Prince Henry of Prussia, and the Emperor Paul, to mention some of them at random. Their presence in the town, the seasons which they spent there, and even the spots where they resided, were placed on faithful record. It is the peculiar characteristic of Spa that it has always cherished the memory of its distinguished visitors. The visit, say, of a Talleyrand, a Byron, or a Beaconsfield would be sure to be perpetuated by means of a dedicatory tablet on the walls of the house or hotel in which he dwelt. To-day the historical commemorative tablets are sprinkled over the dwellings within a stone's throw of the Place Royale. But this perpetuation is only ephemeral and makeshift when compared with the distinction and "immortality" conferred by Spa's famous "Golden Book." Locally this is known also as the Cascade monumentale, and comprises a fountain with symbolic genii, the "book" being formed by a huge scroll upon which the names of the distinguished visitors have been inscribed.

Consciously or unconsciously, the German has temporarily established Deutschtum not only where the much-hated English have established their villas, practiced their insular customs, and set their "perfidious" fashions, but where international society used to hold a kind of truce. Galignani, in the twenties of last century, put it thus: "Amidst the bloodiest wars this place has been respected, and the subjects of every belligerent state live here in perfect union." Long before the great gambler for world power arrived in Spa, the once "fatal attraction" of the gambling tables had vanished from this pretty place at the foot of the wooded hills. In its stead, the German will have found exasperating traces of an English "occupation" that are well-nigh ineradicable. All through the Eighteenth Century, when the Prince Bishops of Liege had a financial interest in the town, Spa was frequented by the English, who preferred it to Baden or Pyrmont. The English nobility were, perhaps, the most numerous of the "guests" of the town, and the popularity of the place among English people did not decline until after the French Revolution. For some years before the outbreak of the present war Spa revived in favor.

The life of Spa has doubtless considerably changed since the days when crowds of French, Belgians and English passed along its narrow main street en route to the Casino or the band-stand on the Place Royale, or sought the shade of the ancient elms of the charming little Parc de Sept Heures. In those days one made the promenade of the outlying springs in the woods, as "an understood thing," or climbed, of an afternoon, to the pavilion on the Montagnes Russes, or wandered up the beautiful Promenade des Francais to the outlooks high above the town.

The English Language.

In arguing that the English language is the most suitable for common world use, Prof. Raleigh, of Oxford, points out the same thing may be said in so many different ways, and he illustrates the point as follows:—

Thus you can Begin, or Commence, or Initiate an undertaking with Boldness, or Courage or Resolution. If you are a Workman or Laborer, or Operator, you can Ask or Request or Solicit your employer to Yield or Grant or Concede an increase in the Earnings, or Wages or Remuneration which fall to the lot of your Fellow or Companion or Associate. Your employer is perhaps Old or Veteran or Superannuated, which may Hinder, or Delay or Retard the success of your application. But if you Foretell, or Prophesy, or Predict that the war will have an End, or Close or Termination that shall not only be Speedy or Rapid or Accelerated, but also Great, or Grand or Magnificent, you may perhaps Stir or Move, or Actuate him to have Ruth or Pity, or Compassion on your Mate, or Colleague, or Collaborator.

Costly Gallantry.

In the course of a celebration at Fort William a young lady realistically "fainted" at Current Park and a chivalrous youth at once went to the rescue. Later he discovered he was short his stickpin, watch and wallet.

Hunnish Heartlessness.

An incident related in a letter received by Norman G. Heyd, of Toronto, from his brother, Major C. G. Heyd, in charge of an American Base Hospital, throws an interesting sidelight on the relations which exist between the officers of the German army and the men under their command.

A German private and a captain were brought into the hospital and placed in cots quite close together. In a short time it was seen that the private's wounds would prove fatal, and, as there was no one else in the ward who could speak German, a nurse approached the officer and asked if he would speak to the dying man, and take any message he might have for his friends.

"In our country officers do not speak to privates unless it is to give commands," was the heartless answer, and the private soon passed away.

German Study In Canada.

The senate of the University of Toronto has accepted the decision of the Provincial Government in declaring that German should not be demanded in any of the courses required for specialist certificates for the high schools and collegiate institutes, and changes have been made in the curriculum in accordance therewith. Students who are preparing for research in the sciences will be required to know enough German to be able to read articles on the subject in the German periodicals and works of reference.

Jitneys and Red Cross.

During the recent street car strike in British Columbia cities, the local transportation problem was happily solved by hundreds of private-owned automobiles being put in jitney service, their "fares" being given to the Red Cross.

Some Park.

Haileybury has secured fifty-seven acres of the lake front for park purposes and will instal golf links, a baseball diamond, bathing houses and a dance pavilion.

Chicks Travel by Post.

Hundreds of day-old chicks are now being shipped into Canada from Trenton Junction, N.J. The majority are Rhode Island Reds and stand the long trip by post quite chirpily.

Facing Vast Army.

Few Canadians are alive to the fact that we are menaced by an army greater than that which is menacing Europe at present, writes a Judge contributor. All over the country it is springing up, in the fields, in the cities, at the seashore. Its members require no training, they are perfect in their art from birth. They have no flag and no leader. They are encumbered with no baggage trains and have no lines of communication to keep open. Being ignorant of death, they do not fear it and the most frightful slaughter does not dismay them. With lightning rapidity, they move from place to place, so that they seem to be everywhere. There are no slackers in this army. Each member is firmly alive to the necessity of doing his bit. Like the leaves of the tree, of the stars of the milky way, they are innumerable. Swiftly, silently they have arrived at our very doors.

Sudden Thunder Works a Wonder.

A sharp peal of thunder during a severe electrical storm at Ormskirk is credited with restoring his sight to a blind soldier. The veteran, who had been sightless for a year as a result of shell-shock and gassing, was asleep at the time. The shock awakened him suddenly and he immediately fainted. When he recovered consciousness he discovered to his amazement and delight that his sight had been completely restored.

Cassandra Andrews had done everything she could think of. She had worn her most becoming blouses and her best stockings—she had spent hours doing her hair and brushing her eyebrows and polishing her nails, but a whole school year had almost disposed of itself and the young professor of English literature had never seemed to notice her at all. Before and after class he joked and jollied with other girls. The vivacious Roberta Stevens nearly always stopped at his desk for a moment of chatter—Bertha Marvin, the class beauty, the athletic Agnes Burns and a dozen others were on the friendliest terms with him, but Cassandra Andrews slipped demurely into her seat four mornings a week, apparently unnoticed.

"They're all crazy about him," she thought scornfully, as she watched the professor's reception before class one morning. "Every single one of them!"

After the professor had delivered his lecture that morning, there was a general discussion and he called on her for an opinion on a certain passage. She arose diffidently, offering her little statement of disagreement with the generally accepted theory. And right there is where the professor made his first mistake. He smiled a tolerant, skeptical sort of smile, the trend of which Cassandra Andrews caught immediately, and she leaned forward impetuously and flatly contradicted his comment. Then she followed up the contradiction with a tumble of words in support of her own opinion and sat speedily down again.

The professor was surprised. "Well," he said, crisply. "I'm glad that at least one student in the class thinks for herself. I was afraid you were all sheep."

On the instant the bell rang and the girls arose and passed out in chattering groups, congregating in the court outside with light-hearted banter.

"We're all sheep but you, Andy, dear," sang out Edna Phray, dancing up to Cassandra delightedly. "And you are a blessed lamb, but you'll grow. I never knew you had so much spunk. Where do you keep it?"

And the two of them strolled off together, arranging to play tennis in the late afternoon. Later that day the professor of English and his crony, the professor of economics, sought the courts for their regular afternoon's tennis bout. The English professor patted a ball aimlessly into the net while his contemporary changed his shoes.

"Guess I've got a touch of spring fever," he said, absently watching Edna and Cassandra tightening the net three courts over. And right there the professor of English made his second mistake. "I feel," he said, "almost frivolous enough to suggest mixed doubles. What do you say, Bill?"

And Bill, the economics expert, waved his racket, and called across to the girls: "Want to make it doubles?"

The girls drew together for an instant's consultation, and then assented, walking over to the court where the two men were.

"How'll ye pair off?" demanded Professor Bill.

"Well," said Edna Phray, practically, "I hate English and I love economics—and I'm very temperamental."

The professor of economics grinned as the two of them moved toward the other side of the net.

"But," continued Edna, significantly to the professor of English, "I'm a better tennis player than Cassandra Andrews, even if I am a sheep."

Whereat the professor of English shouted with laughter.

Cassandra glanced at her stalwart partner at those words and in her young heart there leaped a mighty flame, the golden points of which shone in her shining brown eyes. She forgot everything but the game. She darted about, diving across the court and smashing her return drives like a little fiend. Twice she collided with her partner and shot him a dazzling little glance as she flung her head back to shake the hair out of her eyes. Time after time the professor of English shouted at her, "Good girl!" after a particularly difficult shot, and her spirit soared on the wings of the wind with the professor's not far behind. She had forgotten that she had worn her best stockings, but they were so much in evidence that it was fortunate that she wore them, for the professor was getting more observant every moment of the afternoon.

At the beginning of the third set they were even, with a set apiece. Then the couple in economics settled down and won four straight games. They lost the next and then won again, so that the score was five to one against Cassandra and the professor of English.

"Easy money," jeered Professor Bill. "We need only one more game!"

"You can't do it," taunted the flaming Cassandra. "We must win!" she said eagerly to the professor of English. "We must—we must!"

"You'll kill yourself," he protested.

"What does it matter?" she said, crouching to receive Professor Bill's twisting service. "What does it matter—if one can die winning?" And she flung her tired body viciously into a smashing stroke and rushed to the net.

And so they fought on and on winning the next five games.

"One more!" she gasped breathlessly, and played on.

Five times that last and deciding game went to deuce, and then came the shot—the shot that stood between victory and possible defeat—and she made it. Leaping high in the air she smashed the ball in a gray streak down the alley, and the game was won!

"Game—set—and match! Whee!" shouted the professor of English. "Great work, Andy, old girl!" And he patted his drooping little partner on the shoulder.

The racket slipped from her exhausted grasp and she swayed weakly. "We won!" she murmured, and would have fallen if the professor hadn't put his arm about her and led her to a bench.

"Why, you blessed lamb, you, Andy Andrews," said Edna Phray, sitting beside her and shaking her by the shoulders, "I never knew you to play such tennis. The lamb has turned tiger-cat," she laughed up at the two men, who stood over them.

"Don't maul me, Eddie," protested Cassandra, feebly; "I'm all in," and then she smiled up at the professor, her professor. "But we won, didn't we?"

"You won," he said.

"I didn't, because you played some tennis yourself."

The next morning she slipped into her seat demurely as usual. As usual, too, there was a cluster of girls grouped about the professor's desk, chattering gaily. But then, what did she care? Hadn't he called her "Andy, old girl," only yesterday? And she smiled in prim superiority. And when the recitation was over he would have detained her a moment, but she ignored the intention with a fine indifference and passed out with the rest.

For a week she avoided him successfully, then late one afternoon he met her face to face on the campus.

"And what did I ever do to you?" he demanded when she would have spoken calmly and passed on.

"You called me 'Andy, old girl'," she said grimly, "and I've hated you ever since."

"You're not going to bite me, are you, Andy, old girl?" grinned the professor of English.

She could maintain her gravity no longer and little sparkles of gold flickered in her brown eyes. "I'll try not to," she murmured with a little laugh agilely dodging the eager sweep of his arm.

And then the professor threw his dignity out of the window and started in pursuit through the trees, catching her right where she'd planned he should, in a narrow and secluded path.

Then after he had kissed her, she reached up and clutched his head between her hands, shaking it fiercely. "And remember," she said between her clenched teeth, "I will not be called 'Andy, old girl.' I won't love you any more if you call me that. I hate it."

"All right, you darling Andy, old girl," chuckled the professor.

But when he kissed her again she only clung to him eagerly. Queer thing, a woman!

The Balkers.

"What do you think of these anti-loafing laws?"

"They're all right in principle," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "But they're goin' to be hard on us regular industrious people. There ain't any tougher or thankless job on earth than drivin' a balky mule."

TO PROTECT THE BIRDS

TREATY MADE BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

The People In the Dominion Were Anxious to Have the Law Established, But Technicalities Raised Under the American Constitution Caused Delays — Everything Has Now Been Satisfactorily Arranged.

THE executive branch of the United States Government is empowered to enter into treaties with foreign nations, but the judicial branch may, in certain cases, render such treaties invalid, while, if the agreements are not satisfactory to Congress, and involve any action by that body, the legislative branch may render them nugatory. Thus, to give real strength and movement to international conventions, the three branches of the Federal Government must be in accord. An interesting illustration is afforded by the Migratory Bird Treaty recently signed by President Wilson. The treaty was agreed to long ago, but questions arose as to the power of the Washington Government to dispose of a subject over which the states had, in the past, generally asserted and exercised jurisdiction. Canada being the first nation on the North American Continent to become involved in the present war, and realizing the vital necessity of protecting its crops, sought to enter into a treaty with the United States which would guarantee the protection of useful birds flying at intervals hither and thither between the two countries.

The Dominion Government found no difficulty in arousing interest in its purpose across the border, and it required no time for the proper authorities in these neighboring nations to agree upon the terms of a measure designed to protect birds now regarded by instructed agriculturists as of inestimable value in crop production. The treaty framed sought to shield from destruction, and perhaps from annihilation, various game birds, including water fowl, migratory insectivorous birds, including bobolinks, catbirds, chickadees, meadow larks, thrushes, wrens, and many others more or less familiar on the farms of the United States and Canada. Among the game birds, those specifically named were the auk, the grebe, the gull, the heron, the petrel, and the tern.

There already existed in the United States a migratory bird law, and several of the individual states had sought, through legislation, to safeguard certain of the feathered species. On the other hand, antipathy to certain birds, elsewhere believed to be useful, existed in some of the sovereign commonwealths. An Arkansas court, following agreement on the treaty, decided that bird control belonged to the state and not to the nation, and the point was taken to the United States Supreme Court. Interjected into the controversy also was the question whether the executive branch of the Government could make treaties of this kind without the concurrence of the Legislative branch. As an interesting example of the lengths of which contention over a matter of this kind may be carried, it is worth while to point out that there were some persons who insisted that if the executive branch could make and enforce a treaty of this character, overriding the authority of an individual state, it could also, for instance, impose a Japanese immigration treaty upon California.

It speaks eloquently for the neighborly feeling existing between the United States and Canada that the disposition on the southern side of the line, from the beginning, was to comply with the wishes of the Dominion, and to make this compliance effective, regardless of minor issues. In due course, Congress enacted laws essential to the enforcement in the United States of every provision in the convention, and the President's signature has now made the treaty wholly effective. Action might well have been more expeditious, but as a matter of fact, in the absence of a treaty, the provincial and Dominion authorities in Canada and the federal and state authorities in the United States have, especially during the last two years, been enforcing existing bird protection laws within their respective jurisdictions with intelligence and fidelity, and in the spirit behind the treaty. As a result, birds have multiplied in both countries, and, while it is not possible to give figures showing the gain, it is possible to point to harvest yields without precedent in both the Dominion and the republic.

Air Saves Dam Gates.

Extraordinary measures employed last winter at Keokuk Dam to prevent ice on the upstream side from damaging the spillway gates have been vindicated. Recurrence of damage wrought during previous winters was averted in the face of conditions as severe probably as any that may be experienced hereafter. An elaborate pneumatic system, designed to agitate the water before each of the 119 gates and prohibit the formation of ice during below zero weather, was installed. The arrangement consists in part of a supply main, 4,270 feet long, extending across the dam from the power house. It carries dried air under pressure to discharge pipes placed midway between the piers at points a foot in front of each gate and 10 feet below the surface. These tubes are held vertically and fitted with needle-point valves. Each is able to deliver two cubic feet of air into the water every minute, although this is more than is normally necessary. The result is the maintenance in front of each gate of a semi-circular open space.—Popular Mechanics.

A Slight Error.

Sergt. R. Douglas Pinkerton, author of "Ladies From Hell," war experiences of the famous London Scottish regiment so-called by the Germans, tells of a friend of his a lady, who was asked to go into a certain New York store to get a copy of the book. When she got to the store she found she had forgotten the title, and all she could remember was that it had "hell" and "ladies" in it. So she asked for "To Hell With the Ladies." And she got the right book!

PUZZLED BY QUEER NAMES

Writer Finds It Hard to Understand Why Parents "Impose Burden" on Their Children.

What extraordinary names some people are compelled to bear, or choose to assume! I hesitate to call them "Christian names," because they aren't Christian, very often. "Given names" is perhaps the better way of describing them. Perhaps you have heard of the Irishman assisting at a baptism, who, when he heard the godmother answer "Hazel" to the question as to the child's name, broke forth: "For the love of hiven! the whole calendar is full of the names of blessed female saints, and they do be callin' the baby after a nut!"

I thought of that when I looked through the catalogue of a girls' college the other day, and noted these labels: Goldo Mae, Eura, Arvilla, Kathryn, Elva, Melba, Izer, Neva, Ramona, Mabelle, Vidah, Esta, Millie, Mayme, Mable, Arthetta, Lilyan, Bulah, Arbita, Narmie, Ara, Jonnie, Roxa, Zurelle, Zullene, Vanja, Mote, Coreana. It was a comfort to get back to Bridget and Margaret! Names are not arbitrary combinations of vowels and consonants; they have, or should have, significance, a historic setting, a personal and family relationship, that dignifies them.

To invent fantastic labels for pet dogs may be allowed; but human beings ought not to be put on that level. So, misspellings of familiar names, Christian or family, seem either undignified or ignorant, now when fixed spellings have been accepted. Can some one explain Ga Nun and U'Rell, both of which variants fatigue me!—Living Church.

Buffalo as Beast of Burden.

The buffalo has always been rated as untamable and many scientists have regarded him as one of the most stupid beasts that ever existed. It has remained for Maj. Bob Yokum of Pierre, S. D., after five years of effort, to accomplish the wonderful feat of training a pair of buffaloes to trot to wagon, and also to do many other remarkable stunts. Major Yokum is a former United States marshal and is known in the old ranching and cowboy life of the American West, from Kansas to Oregon. One of the accomplishments of the Yokum team is to race against horses, and they distance their speedy competitors. They loathe the saddling process and when the rider mounts them will "buck" in a way to shame a veteran broncho.—St. Nicholas.

Canada's Ace.

One of the books receiving widespread notice at the moment is Major Bishop's work on his exploits as a famous flying man. Not that the young Canadian soldier, V.C., D.S.O., and M.C., refers to himself in such flattering terms. He merely tells with breezy enthusiasm and cheerfulness what his experiences have been, and incidentally one learns how he received them.

THE STORY OF TOWER FARM

To those who find in History any interest or charm,
There's something quite romantic in the tale of Tower Farm.

Away off in old England very many years ago,
A gentleman named B—s was overcome with woe.
He lost his wife, and saw his two fair daughters drowned,
And these heavy trials plunged him into a grief profound.
Old scenes became too painful — he longed afar to roam,
So he came across to Canada to seek for a new home.
With other friends he ventured, to this, our own fair land,
And bought a tract of country along the Rice Lake strand.
Where, amid strange new surroundings, he took up life once more,
And strove to "do his duty" as he had done before.

Not far from the lake he chose a very pretty site,
From which through the trees he could glimpse the water bright.
He found a rounded knoll on a gently sloping hill,
And there began to exercise his architectural skill.
The result of his troubles was a quite eccentric mind—
And a building such as he put up,
one now could hardly find.
It was several stories high and in form an octagon;
The wood work of red cedar — the walls of brick and stone.
Like a Chinese pagoda the Tower stood erect,
Though with its roofs and angles
not so ornately decked,
From the first—four rooms around a central square,
Each in lessening dimensions other floors arose in air.
From floor to floor one mounted by means of spiral stair.
A spinal column for the Tower — planned with the nicest care.
Till from observatory on its highest altitude
Could be seen a panorama of island, lake and wood.
Or on clear and starry nights the heavens might be scanned,
With reverent awe be studied these wonders of God's hand.

Among the many features which marked this building rare,
Was a subterranean passage leading outside to the air.

The Tower rooms were furnished with rare bric-a-brac and china,
Such silver and quaint furniture are not now found in Mina.*

On Sundays when he gathered the settlers round to meeting,
The host would lay his prayer-book down to give his comers greeting.
He fraternized with Indians, wore their blanket suit and belt,
With knife in lieu of tomahawk and moccasins of soft pelt.
But there was one thing in their dress at which he drew the line—
His own good British headgear, he would simply not resign.
He must have cut a figure—One could not fail to see
In this unusual garb sure proof of eccentricity.
And when in frosty weather he drove in to market town;
He wore his high silk topper with silk kerchief fastened down.

But some years of country living
thus near to Nature's heart,
Did not bring him satisfaction—he grew anxious to depart
To fresher fields and pastures new;
so his Tower-land and store
He sold to a young Scotchman, and was seen around it no more.

Old folks say that this new owner was a man of noble birth,
But he had a little weakness all too common on this earth—
He tarried long at wine, oft forgot his high estate,
In foolish drunken stupor. Once he nearly met his fate,
When the Tower with all its treasures was burned right to the ground,
And his life was barely saved. After some looking round,
He builded a more modern house on a somewhat level space,
He planted trees and made of it a very charming place.

He found a loving help-mate in his neighbour's governess;
And no doubt they had their days of joy and happiness.
For young faces grew around them to cheer them when in gloom
And the laughter of young voices echoed oft from room to room.

But into this fair Eden came the serpent. Drink, again—
And brought (as always) in its wake shame, suffering and pain.
His good wife cherished a fond hope that if a change he'd make
He might, mid new environment be able to forsake
His evil habit. So the dear old Tower Farm was sold,
And he went to California, which then lured men by its gold.

Since then the Farm has had its share of changes and reverse,
But now, long may it prosper under
Mr. and Mrs. Nurse.

—E. KEELE.

GETTING THEIR MAN.

Some Anecdotes of the Riders of the Plains.

In peace, as well as in war, the Mounted Police have served Canada well. They have given the Northern reaches of the Dominion world pre-eminence for efficient and thorough administration of law, protection of life and property, compelled respect for the machinery and the agents of British justice. They have convoyed and protected settlement—broken up smuggling and illicit whiskey running — established and maintained postal communications—safeguarded railroading and surveys—performed a thousand and one onerous yet humble services, and each of these efficiently and well. They have fought prairie fires for the settlers on the plains parched by the summer sun. They have, with equal readiness and with parallel courage, battled against blizzards and the winter perils of the desolate mountains, to preserve the lives of foolhardy and ever-venturesome argonauts following the lure of the Golden Rainbow to its foot in the Klondike snows.

It was Sergt. Fitzgerald who first visited Herschel Island and had the honor of establishing the detachment at that far distant point in the ice-bound Arctic, the most northerly station of the world, to which twice yearly the police dog-teams made their scheduled pilgrimages. It was Fitzgerald, too, who silently trailed Labele, the triple murderer of the Klondike, around the earth, and ultimately brought him back to the scene of his crimes, to pay the penalty and demonstrate again the force's working motto

"We always get our man."

Constable (later Corporal) Conradi it was who, while patrolling a fire-swept district, heard of a rancher, with ten children cut off by the wind-swept flame. They could not be reached or saved, opinions agreed. They must be, said Conradi. He fought his way through the fire—at times all but suffocated. His hair was burned on his head. His hair, moustache and eyebrows were singed. His clothing time and again was afire. But he won through and saved the settler and his family.

"We always get our man."

Sometimes the tale is tragic.

There is the story of that splendid hero of the force, who alone, sleepless and vigilant throughout twelve dreadful days and night brought into Fort Resolution a prospector whom loneliness had transformed into a dangerous madman—only himself to lose his mind a few weeks later, a consequence of the terrific mental and physical strain to which he had been subjected.

There is another story of a young constable, a man of good family and university education, who did his best—and failed.

Despatches had to be sent to a far distant post under weather conditions of extreme severity. The constable pocketed them and set out. Soon after, a stinging blizzard set in and his trail was obliterated, with all records of man and mission.

Days slid into weeks bringing no news of either.

The following spring a red-coated rider on out-line patrol duty, accidentally entering a secluded coulee, found shreds of a storm-worn uniform of the force, still clothing the bones of the lost courier. His last moments, as plainly shown by the circumstantial evidence, had been haunted rather by the dread that he should fail in his duty than by any concern for his personal safety. For in the sodden mass of his long-forgotten orders he had painfully scrawled his last message to his superior officer and the world:

"Lost—horse dead—am trying to push ahead—have done my best."

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Graft in Army.

Capt. Harold Este Thomas, Canadian Army Service Corps, was court-martialled in London on June 17. The charges alleged that he had while controlling a workshop at Shorncliffe, employed soldiers in repairing private motor cars and had supplied tires and other military material for the purpose. He was also accused of having built a motorcycle in the same way and of selling it afterward for $150. The cycle was said to have been built secretly and placed in a pit by day. There were also several charges of obtaining money improperly.

It was alleged that while he was acting for Gen. Odlum he bought a car for $625, but charged the general $750. In another case he was charged with selling a car for Major Ewing and returning the price as $375, instead of $500.

Lieut. A. B. Anderson, Army Service, pleaded guilty at the court-martial in London to applying 50 gallons of army petrol to his own use, and confessed that he sold the petrol because he was penniless owing to the expenses of his wife's illness.

Shot a Trespasser.

When Pte. Esther M. Ellis, of the 41st U.S.I., went on sentry go at Sault Ste. Marie locks his orders were to shoot any trespasser. He obeyed orders, and the result is a dead black bear, weighing 175 pounds, which failed to advance and give the password.

MAROONED ON ISLAND.

Terrible Experiences of Two Settlers In Northern Ontario.

Marooned on an islet in Lake Rimy, without food, without the means of catching a fish, or shooting a passing bird, even without matches, Joe Pelletier and George Imbau suffered the agony of slow starvation for thirteen days. When rescued by a search party they were in a state of collapse and unable at first to tell their story, but the state of the shrubbery on the island was an eloquent testimony to their sufferings. The leaves were plucked off, the twigs broken, even the grass on the shallow soil had been torn up for food. A few days' care partially restored the men, and Pelletier is now on the way to complete recovery. Imbau, unfortunately, ate a big meal of moose meat before he was able to endure such heavy diet, and died from the effects.

Lake Rimy is situated about three miles from Moonbeam, a station on the National Transcontinental Railway, some 50 miles west of Cochrane. The lake is about 15 miles long and seven or eight miles wide. It teems with fish, and plenty of big game is found along its shores. About a mile from the shore is an unnamed islet scarcely larger than the backyard of a city home. A great rock rises in the middle of it, and there is a growth of small shrubs, but no trees upon it. This was the scene of an adventure, which, for unmixed horror, could scarcely be surpassed, and experience endured within four miles of a railway station.

Pelletier and Imbau, who were bachelors living near Moonbeam, French settlers from the Lake St. John country, determined to celebrate Dominion Day by a three days' hunting and fishing trip. They made no secret of their intentions and the inhabitants of the village knew that they intended to cross the lake and go up one of the streams entering it.

They loaded fishing tackle, guns, ammunition, three days' food, and ordinary hunting supplies in a canoe and set out in reasonably good weather. Little was thought about the fact that they did not return within the time they had set. But when four, five, and, at last, six days had passed the men's friends grew anxious and organized a search party. The whole district was combed, without result. The island was passed on the way out, but no one dreamed of landing on it. On the thirteenth day the dejected and returning party called at the island, more by impulse than design, and the lost men were found.

When Pelletier recovered he said that he and his partner, while passing the island, resolved to go ashore for no particular reason. One of them got out of the canoe without trouble, but the other, in stepping upon the rock, slipped. The canoe was kicked away and before it could be secured was caught by the wind and blown out of reach. Little is said by Pelletier of his experiences. They were not such as could be easily described, but the imagination is staggered by contemplation of them. The weather for the most part was bad. There the men were—helpless, raging, despairing, without shelter and without food, for thirteen weary days. It is a miracle that they survived the experience. Men less inured to the wilderness and to its hardships would have succumbed long before the search party arrived.

The Back Aches

Possibly you do not realize that this indicates derangement of the kidneys. Neglect usually means the development of Bright's disease. You know how dreadfully painful and fatal that is.

There is quick relief for the kidneys in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This medicine is known in the great majority of homes as the greatest of regulators.

GOOD MANNERS.

Little Acts That Speak Aloud About a Person's Breeding.

It is always the merest trifles rather than the big things of life which indicate the manners and tastes of the average person, says a writer in the London Chronicle. A glaring social error, a particularly rude action or tactless speech are not made with too great frequency, but other less obtrusive faults are often committed—sometimes solely through ignorance or want of thought.

It is just as grave a mistake to be too polite as to be abominably rude. The painstakingly polite person is very trying to encounter, for extremes often meet, and he generally succeeds in being actually ill bred. For instance, there is always the man who, in the mistaken idea that a woman should always precede him, allows her to fight her way into a crowded train, descend unaided and walk before him into a restaurant that is rather full.

Removing his right glove before shaking hands with a woman; raising his hat when he offers a damsel his seat in a car; carefully piloting his fair companion across a crowded street; walking on the outside of the pavement and refraining from sitting when talking to a woman who happens to be standing, are all instances of those little things which mark the good breeding and thoughtfulness of a man. Unfortunately in some cases these things do not come by instinct, but rather through the hard school of experience.

On the other hand, a woman requires to be just as careful of her manners. It is very exciting no doubt to talk loudly and initiate casual hearers into the mysteries of an intimate conversation with another woman. Unfortunately the listeners are only contemptuously impressed with the fact that the speaker is incapable of controlling her own voice.

It is usually either nervousness or thoughtlessness that prompts a woman to display her worst side to the world. She will take a seat that is offered to her in a crowded car without a word of thanks or else will make the chivalrous person feel still more embarrassed by a quick and emphatic refusal to profit by his generosity, or perhaps she will rush through swing doors without bothering to notice if any one is likely to be caught in the rebound, elbow people who are in her way, walk on the wrong side of the street or fail to remember that she must always bow first to her men acquaintances before they raise their hats.

Ives and a Billiard Ball.

The late Frank C. Ives, the great billiardist, was very proud of the peculiar strength of his right arm. Striking the ball with one quick, sharp blow of his cue, the ivory would strike eleven cushions while flying around the table. He beat "Wizard" Schaefer and Eugene Carter by three feet and nine inches.

Bob Fitzsimmons, who was credited with striking a blow that was compared to the kick of a mule, could barely touch nine cushions, while Jim Corbett made about eight, yet Ives weighed only about 145 pounds at the time.—New York Journal.

Liked the Quarters.

A passenger in a Pullman car was inclined to be rather friendly with the porter, but had not as yet given him any tip.

"Do you enjoy your position?" the man asked as the porter was brushing his coat.

"Yes, sah," replied the colored fellow. "I likes de quarters heah very much—when I gits 'em."—Harper's Magazine.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I feel well and strong again."

Thought She Would Lose Her Little Girl With Diarrhoea

Thousands of infants die annually who could be saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

There can be no doubt about it.

During the seventy-two years that this wonderful remedy has been on the market, it has been proved conclusively that it is the best for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera infantum, and all looseness of the bowels, especially when the children are teething.

Many of the imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" being offered to the public to-day are positively dangerous, as they often check the diarrhoea too suddenly, cause inflammation and leave the bowels in a constipated condition. "Dr. Fowler's" will not do this, but will impart a healthy tone to the mucous surface, and stop the diarrhoea in an easy and natural way.

Mrs. M. Tyler, Orland, Ont., writes: "I have used your wonderful medicine for nine years with great satisfaction. My little girl was only five months old, and she was so sick with diarrhoea I thought she would die. I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it gave her quick relief. I have used it ever since for the whole of my family, six in all, and can praise it more than anything I ever used."

Wheat In Canada.

There were 20,500,000 bushels of wheat in Canada on May 31 last, a census made by the Board of Grain Supervisors has shown. There were, moreover, products equivalent to an additional 14,150,000 bushels of wheat. There were in the farmers' hands in the West 5,000,000 bushels; in Western elevators and flour mills, about 6,750,000 bushels; in Eastern elevators, 6,635,885 bushels, and in transit about 2,000,000 bushels. It is estimated that there are around 6,750,000 bushels in Eastern Canada, and 7,400,000 in Western. Adding these products to the actual wheat in store, there were the equivalent of 34,650,000 bushels in the country on May 31. In the month of April the British Wheat Export Co. exported 11,000,000 bushels.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1918

British and French Troops Have Smashed Through Several Sections of Hindenburg Line

Present Attack Threatens to Smother the Whole Hindenburg Line —Strong Enemy Counter Attacks Repulsed.

GUNS CAPTURED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 19.— The Franco-British attack between Gouzeaucourt and Essigny-Le-Grand threatens to smother the whole Hindenburg line from the region of Cambrai to a point south of St. Quentin. The German defensive system is already in Allied hands from the vicinity of Lens to the north of Havrincourt, while yesterday's attack pierced it at Villeret and near Gouzeaucourt. The British and French are now within less than two miles of the Hindenburg line on the whole front from where the Canal Du Nord crosses it north of Havrincourt to La Fere, except on a small sector west of Marcing and another west of Moy, where two sharp salients increase the distance to about three miles.

COUNTER ATTACKS.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The British advance between Cambrai and St. Quentin yesterday afternoon and evening was halted only long enough to smash a series of heavy German counter attacks. They swept forward again on a wide front, capturing about eleven miles of the outposts of the Hindenburg line. The German counter attacks began about five p. m. on an eight mile front, between Gouzeaucourt and Lrescault, following a terrific bombardment. They were smothered by the British fire, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. A few elements entered the British trenches, but were annihilated by counter attacks.

The British drive was resumed shortly before midnight. Australian troops dashed forward and occupied virtually the whole of the outposts of the Hindenburg line from Pontrast northward to Gouzeaucourt.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The British last night made further progress in their drive into the Hindenburg line in the St. Quentin region, which is aimed at the encirclement of that town. In the continued advance north of Pontruet they reached outpost positions of the Hindenburg line. The Australians renewed their attacks and carried the Hindenburg outposts. Many prisoners and a number of machine guns were taken by them. The town of Lempire was captured as well as Gauche Wood. Lempire is four miles directly west of Le Catelet.

The Germans late yesterday started a heavy bombardment on the northern part of the battle front, south-west of Cambrai, between Geaucourt and the Arras-Cambrai road. The fire was of extreme intensity. The enemy followed the bombardment by a strong infantry attack on a wide front northward from the vicinity of Trescault. He was completely repulsed at all points with great loss. He was likewise driven off with heavy casualties shortly afterwards when he launched a strong attack north of Moeuvre. Some German parties that succeeded at points in entering the British trenches, were entirely disposed of by counter attacks.

Forty guns were captured by the British yesterday. Twenty-three German regiments in eleven divisions were represented.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

Canadian Press:

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 19.—The French have advanced close to Dallon, less than two miles from the western outskirts of St. Quentin. Here they are fighting the Germans on the Hindenburg line, and every inch of ground is being disputed stoutly by the enemy. Apparently the Germans are determined to hold the plateau which lies just west of St. Quentin, south of Francilly, east of Savy and north of Dallon. Gen. Dabenay's men have been obliged to attack piecemeal and to advance by little bounds, slipping between machine gun emplacements here and there and sometimes making frontal attacks. Everywhere the French have been obliged to fight their way around or through concrete stables that before this year would have been regarded as impregnable. German infantry here is supported by artillery, which puts down heavy barrages in front of and among the waves and machine guns in the rear and flanks. Progress under these conditions necessarily is slow, but the Allied lines are surely advancing toward the outskirts of St. Quentin from south and west as well as the north.

ONE OF FOCH'S BLOWS.—The capture of Vailly, on the Aisne, brings the French again in reach of the Chemin Des Dames (the Ladies' Walk.) A little more will bring them to the heights of the Aisne and they will secure ground from which Laon can be successfully attacked and captured. The broken line shows the advance since Sunday.

A Confession of Weakness

Italian Press Says There is No Need for Secret Conferences.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME—Sept. 19.—In a long article which is taken as reflecting to views of the Vatican officials if not of the pope himself, the "Corriere Ditalia" the semi official organ of the Vatican declares that Austria should be more explicit in her declarations. The old subterfuges that the note undoubtedly carries, show a desperate need of peace. The article says "there is no need for secret conferences when President Wilson and others already have set forth Allied conditions. There is no doubt that the note was inspired by Berlin. With the cannon of Hindenburg unsuccessful, we will now see return to the subtleties of diplomacy. The note is equivalent to a confession of military weakness. It is a sign that the fatal hour has begun for them when they must submit to the Allies peace. If in year of 1916 they offered peace, now they ask it, the article continues, but in what spirit do they ask peace

WILL NOT ANSWER

(Special to the Examiner.)

ROME, Sept. 19.—The "Corriere Dela Socolo" declares it learns from a reliable source that the Vatican will not answer Austria's note to the pope, asking his moral support of its peace proposal.

Austria has attempted to disturb Catholic conscience by invoking the Pope's intervention the Socolo says, but the great majority of Catholics favor a peace according to Justice.

Canadian Press:

Calves in demand at $17 to $18 for choice; export cattle $14 to $14.75; export bulls $9.50 to $10.25; butchers' cattle $10.25 to $11.25; butchers' cows $9.25 to $10.50; butchers' bulls $7.75 to $8.50; feeding steers $8.50 to $9; sheep, ewes $14.25 to $15.50; lambs $17.25 to $17.75; hogs, fed and watered, $19.50; calves $17 to $17.50.

Orders Issued by Hun General Staff

"You are ordered to mobilize immediately all destruction agents and observers in commercial and military ports in Canada and America where munitions are being loaded on ships going to Russia, France and England." Thus reads the opening paragraph of an order issued by the German General Staff in 1914 to enemy agents. Several other equally important documents are revealed in the same series of communications. Read in this issue for yourself the amazing system of intrigue that was built up and maintained by the German Government.

Bulgarians Still Retiring

A Large Quantity of Supplies Captured by the Allies.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 19. —The Bulgarians, completely beaten in the new Franco-Serbian offensive, are being pursued day and night, by Allied troops, the Serbian War Office declared in a statement received here today. Seven additional towns have been captured, and the Allied advance has now reached a total depth of twelve and a half miles. Bulgarian reinforcements brought up from neighbouring sectors to stem the Franco-Serbian advance, have also been beaten and are retiring. The enemy are burning material and supplies, but the Allies' advance is so rapid that uncountable quantities of material have been captured.

ASSISTANCE FOR THE CHILDREN OF FRANCE

Founder of Society Is In the City For a Few Days.

Mlle. Guerin, founder of the Franco-Canadian Orphanage Society, is in the city in the interests of the French children who have been made orphans by the war, especially those regions that were devastated by the first advance of the Hun hordes. In the small city of Galt each public school will pay for the support of one of the homeless waifs, and many other towns and cities in Ontario are doing equally as great a work.

From the beginning of the war, France has been giving her sons for the cause of humanity. For three years thousands of her sons have fallen on the battlefields of Europe, and still she remains proud, and says to those who remain: "Go, it is for humanity! Go, young men under twenty years, and men of matured age, fight to the end, defend the cause of civilization, save the world from barbarism."

And the voices of the children have come to us! Hear their cries and pleadings! Thousands are turned toward us, asking for help and protection. Help France now in her need. Some day the French people will tell you that you have saved her sons, and have allowed them to remain French.

The Franco-Canadian Orphanage agrees to send the succoured children to school until they reach the age of 13 years, and after that a technical education is given by the Orphan Society for two years.

The small amount of $110 each year will permit the child of a soldier to start life with an ordinary good education, a useful trade and a little money.

The Secours National will receive all donations for the Franco-Canadian Orphanage.

PARENTS CIRCLE OF QUEEN MARY PUBLIC SCHOOL.

The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School will not hold their regular monthly meeting until the first Monday in October.

A large attendance is requested as a particularly good programme has been arranged for, and also discussion of ways and means of continuing the sewing classes for girls of the school, which had to be closed last winter owing to the fuel shortage.

An increased membership is earnestly desired this term to enable the Circle to accomplish the good work started last winter.

FEWER RAIDS ON LONDON

Metropolis Has Been Raided Only Once Since the Beginning of May.

REASONS ADVANCED

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 19.—With the announcement here to-day that the Hon. Hugh Trenchard, formerly one of the air corps' chiefs, had been commanding the independent air forces, the Daily Express pointed out that this is the real reason why London has been free from air raids for some time.

"Since the beginning of May," the newspaper said, "London has been raided only once. The inference to be drawn from this statement is that Germany is concentrating her air forces for the sole purpose of combatting the independent air force, which does not allow the Germans to take the initiative."

ANSWER IS A CATASTROPHE

Gloomy View Expressed by the German Press Regarding the Austrian Peace Move.

"A LOT TO LEARN"

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 19. — The German press is bitter in regard to the Entente replies to Austria's efforts towards peace. "Balfour settles the Entente's positions regarding Austria's proposal," declared the "Zeilkszeitung. "He talks as if the British troops were before Berlin. Our troops will teach him that he has a lot to learn."

The Rheinische Westphalische Zeitung, the official organ of Krupps, says: "The Entente's answer is a catastrophe. Wherever we turn we find the same reply, 'Fight to the last. No peace before Germany is beaten.' The Austrian offer killed all other differences between our enemies and moulded them again into one solid block."

World Happenings

Special to The Examiner:

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 19.—Evidently preparing the public for another retreat, German writers in the Tagleblatt emphasize the difficulty caused by the fact that the German west front forms a "corner" which can be attacked from the west and south. He adds: "Foch undoubtedly will use the advantage which the general situation offers him."

LABOUR CONFERENCE.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The War Aims conference to-day made a report reconefrence to-day made a report recommending that the conference subscribe to fourteen points formulated by President Wilson, thus adopting the policy of clearness and moderation as opposed to the policy dictated exclusively by changes on war map.

PRAISE THE WORK OF K. OF C. ARMY HUTS

Bishop Fallon Urges Support Campaign—Helped King at Ball Game

HAMILTON, Sept. 18.—Over four hundred attended the luncheon of the Canadian Club in the Royal Connaught Hotel this evening, when Bishop Fallon of London gave an eloquent account of his recent trip overseas. Many ladies listened from the balcony to the address. He paid a tribute to the work that the Knights of Columbus were doing with the Army Huts, and asked support for the campaign for funds being conducted here. While overseas he met the King, and, in fact, officiated with his Majesty at a ball game between teams picked from the United States Army and the Navy.

The war, he said, was for justice and right, and this was no time to talk of peace. A peace now would leave enough power in German hands to cause a war later on. The man who talked peace now was an enemy to the common cause. This was the time for everyone to grit his teeth and say "On and on" until the German power was so low in the dust that it could never raise its murderous head again.

He had never known what it was to suffer from real fear until the boat on which he was travelling was torpedoed. In a moment their ship was surrounded by the ships of the convoy, and it was not long before another German submarine had been sent to the bottom. It was not until this experience with the British navy that he understood how the United States was enabled to send 1,500,000 men to France in a short time. His Lordship had another narrow escape when he was in a hospital which was bombed by German air raiders, when a number of nurses were killed.

BULGARIA SENDS OOT CALL FOR AID

Germany Promises to Send Some Turks to Macedonia.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 19.—Bulgaria asked Germany and Austria to send reinforcements into Macedonia to aid in repulsing the present Allied offensive, a despatch from Cologne stated to-day. The Central Powers replied they would consider the request, but feared they would be unable to comply at present. They informed Bulgaria, however, that negotiations are going on for the despatch of several Turkish army corps into Macedonia.

Americans Are Steadily Pushing Ahead in Front of the Hindenburg Lin

Patrol Encounters Are Frequ and Bombardment of Fron Lines and Rear Areas is Very Heavy—Germans Are Evacuating Rhine Towns.

HUN PROPAGANDA

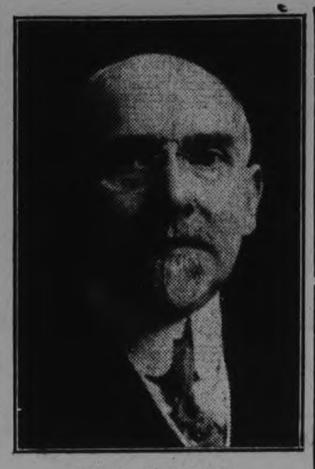
(United Press.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON T METZ FRONT, Sept. 19.—The Am cans are steadily pushing their l forward, following up the patrols their advanced positions are now rectly in front of the new Hindenb line, which Germany established this region last February. Patrols h reconnoitred this section of the H denburg line several times and retu ed with reports concerning its con tion. The American main line runs through Ronvaux, Manheul Pintheville, St. Silaire, Doncou Woel, Saumont, between Jaulny Rembrecourt, north of Vandieres south of Cnapey to the old line.

Patrol encounters are frequent the bombardment of the front li and rear areas is heavy. The ene is reported to be mining Haumo apparently preparing to evacuate that vicinity in a great retrogr movement to Mars-La-Tour Chambley. American artillery b up a great ammunition dump beh the German lines and made a di hit on a big gun at La Chaussee (miles north of Haumont) and inflic other damage.

The advance of the American is resulting in straightening out crooks which were found in the three days. Villages, woods, quar and dugouts which were passed by the patrols are being mopped up the slower moving main body.



MR. E. R. WOOD.

Announcement was made to-day that Mr. E. R. Wood, of Toronto, has been appointed a director of the C. N. R., under the new Government ownership regime. Mr. Wood was born and educated in Peterborough. He was one of the Ontario directors of the last Canadian Victory Loan. His mother still resides in the city on Belmont Avenue.

Main Positions.

The enemy has now taken up main positions along the line on whole front between the Meuse Moselle.

One American patrol was repor to-day to have penetrated three h dred yards beyond Pagny-Sur-Mose two miles north of Vandiero and river from the German frontier. A c tain American division has now est lished a record of capturing nin guns and additional prisoners are c stantly being brought in. The G mans in this region apparently w well fed. Quantities of candy, che and other delicacies have been fo in enemy dugouts. The Germans now dropping propaganda over American lines from toy balloons pealing to soldiers of German an try to join them and asserting t will find greater liberty and opport ties in the Fatherland. One propa da sheet asserts that President Wil is more English than American pictures Germany defending her against the whole world. The effec laughable as the German Americ are the most bitter toward the ch of any men in the United States.

Evacuating City.

Special to The Examiner:

BASLE, Sept. 19.—The wealthy habitants of Mulhausen, are evac ing the city, the "Nachrichten" s The rest of the people are prepar to comply with the military order leave. A similar exodus from ot Rhine towns is reported to be un way through fear of a Franco-Am can push in Alsace.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Associated Press summary says to-day: An important feature of the advance is that the British have not merely passed their old line of March 21, but have attained their greatest success near Bellecourt, where the St. Quentin Canal, which is practically an integral part of the Hindenburg line, runs three or four miles underground. This tunnel begins near Bellecourt, and ends near the village of Catelet. Lempire Heights, commanding the tunnel, is now largely in British hands, and the Germans at this point cannot hope to oppose the advance of the tanks by flooding the country.

FIGHTING LINE EXTENDED.

British troops in desperate fighting, are plunging further into the Hindenburg line north of St. Quetnin, while west of Cambrai they have withstood vicious German counter attacks. The enemy is making every effort to retain his positions on a thirty mile front and to check the new Allied move, which threatens both St. Quentin and Cambrai. In Macedonia the Bulgarians are in flight northward before the Serbians and French. Hurled from important heights the enemy now has been forced back twelve miles and the pursuit continues. How serious was the menace to the security of the Hindenburg line by the British thrust north of St. Quentin is shown by the strong counter attacks the Germans have thrown against the British lines from Gouzeaucourt to the Arras-Cambrai road, thus extending the battle line nearly twelve miles to the northward.

ALLIES WILL MAKE JOINT STATEMENT

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Sept. 19. — The Allies probably will let President Wilson's reply to Austria stand as theirs, but will make a joint, up-to-date statement of common war aims, it was learned from a reliable source this afternoon.

LEARNING TO DO WITHOUT

Everyone must do something to save for Canada's war needs. For some the cut will be on one thing, for some on another. For you it may be gasoline. Surely there is not a patriotic Canadian motorist but will respond to the appeal of the Fuel Controller to stop unnecessary and unreasonable driving. Suppose it were stopped on one day a week only, say Sunday, the saving would mean $100,000 on gasoline alone, or perhaps $150,000, including wear and tear. Even these are modest estimates.

This sum, added to the savings of the people concerned, means something worth while in the preparation for the rainy day that may come all too soon. It is not too much to ask the well-to-do with motor cars to join the ranks of the poorer folk who long ago had to learn to do without.

Some women's idea of being strenuous is to belong to seventeen different societies for the suppression of things.

According to hrodter of the Verein Deut- Eisenhuttenleute and other rf iron masters, it provides an armaments with 80 per their steel. Without the Basin Germany could not conduct for another three months. By ty of Frankfort, in 1871, Ger- many ran the frontier line so as to divide the iron area into two parts. Up to the time when Germany occupied it all it gave her annually was 21,000,000 tons out of her total production of 28,000,000. It gave France 15,000,000 tons out of a total production of 22,000,000. Since the autumn of 1914 Germany has been adding this 15,000,000 tons of ore to her 28,000,000, and thus obtains 43,000,000 tons, to which are added also 6,000,000 tons extracted from the Luxemburg mines, making an annual total of 49,000,000 tons, of which all but 7,000,000 come from the Basin o Briey.

General Malleterre of the French army, who fought in the Woevre region in 1914 as Commander of the troops that unsuccessfully tried to keep the Germans out of Briey, says of the American advance: "It is with profound joy that we French, who have always had eyes turned toward the sacred frontier roads to the Rhine, at last see the great attack so long desired, and so necessary, set out toward essential objectives."

In authorizing the advance of the Americans and the wiping out of the St. Mihiel salient, Marshal Foch took a momentous decision. It must have involved the removal from Picardy and the Oise-Aisne front of vast masses of French reserves, and their concentration behind the lines in the Argonne and Verdun sectors, whence will shortly be launched attacks intended to support the Americans in their drive. Nor could the frontier in French Lorraine south of Pont-a-Mousson be neglected in the preparations for what General Malleterre regards as "a great attack" upon the Basin of Briey. The right flank of Pershing's thrusting force must be protected by the assemblage of masses of American and French troops all along the front in southern Lorraine and Alsace as far as the Swiss border. We know that over a million Americans stand in the lines or in reserve here, but there has been nothing yet to indicate the strength of the French armies associated with them in the Verdun sector, but which have not yet been set in motion.

While the endeavour to wrest the Laon Plateau from the enemy seems for the moment to be the chief concern of the leader of the Allied armies, it need not occasion surprise if the great stroke of the autumn offensive should be delivered on the banks of the Moselle. Keep an eye on Briey.—Toronto Globe.

NO PEACE NOW.

Canadians are applauding the abrupt manner in which the United States answered the Austrian peace conference proposal. The people of the Dominion are a unit in the determination that there must be no pseudo peace, that the war must go on until the enemy is well beaten. This unshakeable conviction was only to be expected, but Canadians must show that they are sincere in their determination by making every sacrifice possible. They must help to finance the war. The Dominion's share in the struggle is becoming heavier day by day. The money that is necessary for carrying on the conflict must come from the Canadian people. Therefore it will be necessary for Canadians everywhere to eliminate all unnecessary expenditures, to abandon the superfluous, and to save every cent possible in order that the financial reserve necessary shall be available when called upon.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

German soldiers are being fed on weeds. There are many bad ones in the army.

Hunting the Hun is still the chief pastime on the Hindenburg line. The British bagged six thousand prisoners there yesterday.

Motorists have had plenty of warning about the motorless Sundays. The people who go joy-riding next Sunday run the risk of being called pro-Germans.

Canada's war expenditure is growing. Every dollar saved by the Canadian people makes the task of financing the war easier.

The fact that a number of aerial photographs taken by the British flyers on Monday exceeded any recorded total for any one day is an indication that the enemy may look for another smashing blow. Aerial activity generally means a new attack.

THE ONE ORPHAN.

Only one county in Ontario, that of Peterborough, has not adopted a county road system under the Provincial Act. The 36 organized counties have assumed control of 9,200 miles, and 2,325 miles have been substantially improved. The owning of 23,000 motor cars by the farmers is having its influence on road improvement.—Mail and Empire.

Stout Men's Suits

Genuine Semi-ready in English Worsteds

Plain greys for Men who prefer them

Stout men need not confine themselves to plain greys—for we have fancy weaves in Worsteds and Tweeds in sizes and types for the men who like more life in the fabric than these neat greys.

Type E.

Suits marked Type E are for short stout men—they fit perfectly, with coats of right length for men of short stature.

Thus: Size 40 is for a man of 5 feet 4 inches.

Size 44 is for a man of 5 feet 7 inches.

Size 46 is for a man of 5 feet 7 inches.

Type F.

Our Suits marked Type F are for stout men of the average height, with coats cut exactly their right length, and with due allowance for embonpoint. Thus:

Size 40 is for a man of 5 feet 7 inches.

Size 42 is for a man of 5 feet 8 inches.

Size 44 is for a man of 5 feet 9 inches.

All sizes for short stout men, for average stout men and for tall stout men in the Semi-ready designs.

Naturally a coat made for a man of Type F would look ridiculous on a man of Type E. The Type F coat would be over an inch too long—the waist line would be in the wrong place.

Special Orders If we have not your size in the pattern of cloth you like best, we'll make it to your exact measure in four days—to Special Order—by the Semi-ready tailors.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

RECORD CROWD WILL SEE THE HILLCRESTS AND RIVERSIDES PLAY

Local baseball fans are all excited over the announcement that the Hillcrests of Toronto will clash at Riverside Park on Saturday with the Riversides. The Toronto outfit have cleaned up thir own league in Toronto and captured the city championship and the Daily Star Cup, thus qualifying for the third round of the O.A.B.A. series. Riversides are champions of the Eastern section of the province. Not since Canadian League days has there been so much interest shown in Peterborough over a ball game, and with any kind of recent weather, there will be a record breaking crowd at Riverside Park.

"Cannon Ball" Scott, the Walter Johnson of Toronto amateur ball, will do the twirling for the Hillcrests. His baffling speed has been responsible for many of Hillcrests victories. Kirn will be in the box for the Riversides, and the big local twirler is at the top of his form right now. In the past two games he has not given a base on balls and he has had lots of stuff on the ball at that.

The visitors' infield is said to be fast and snappy, but they should not have anything on the four who form the inner guard for Manager Solomon's outfit.

The Peterborough fans should turn out and give the Riversides a bumper crowd. Manager Solomon deserves all kinds of credit for putting baseball on its feet in Peterborough. He has provided the fans with entertainment all summer and now has succeeded in piloting his team into the third round of the Ontario championship. This will be the last game of the season here, for the winner of the series will have to play a sudden death game with the western winners probably in Toronto.

The game will start at 2.45 o'clock sharp, with Taylor of Toronto, and Kay of Peterborough, looking after the umpiring.

THIS YEAR'S STRAW HAT WILL DO FOR NEXT YEAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Men's straw hats are the subject of the War Industries Board's latest conservation order. Manufacturers were ordered to introduce no new styles next season, to turn out no more than enough to meet the estimated demand and to restrict the height of crown, weight of brim, and trimmings.

The evening will conclude with a social hour. A season full of promise and opportunity opens up before the Association at this time, and it is confidently expected that the members will show their enthusiasm and support by rallying together for a good time next Tuesday evening.

K. C. CAMPAIGN FOR ARMY HUT FUND TO BEGIN ON SEPT. 30

The Knights of Columbus of the city have decided on Monday, Sept. 30th as the opening date in their Army Hut Fund canvass in the city only and plans are now being perfected to that end. The committee in charge are sparing no pains to make their campaign a successful one, teams have been chosen, the city is being laid out in sections and a thorough canvass of both firms and individuals will be made. This campaign has certainly gone over the top splendidly in many places already, a shining instance of this being the city of Halifax where in spite of the terrible calamity that visited that city only eight months ago, over $60,000 was subscribed there. Peterboro citizens have been known for their generosity in all campaigns of a like nature in the past and the Knights of Columbus feel they will not disappoint them in this just and worthy object. As has been said before the funds of this campaign will go to furnish huts of recreation and amusement to all Canadian soldiers regardless of race, color or creed and the motto hanging over the door will be "Everything free and everybody welcome."

To-day in Toronto a deputation from the State Council of the Knights of Columbus are waiting on Premier Hearst and the Provincial Cabinet to ask for a government grant and there is no doubt but what their request will be granted. It is most likely the campaign here will be opened by a mass meeting in the Opera House at which eloquent speakers will place the matter, the aims and objects of the campaign, fairly before the public and due notice of this meeting will be given. There will be a meeting of the executive committee in charge of this campaign in the club rooms, Simcoe street, Friday evening at eight o'clock.

A SPECIAL ORCHESTRA

Carried With "Have a Heart," Booked for The Grand.

There is a pleasant anticipation in the announcement that "Have a Heart," a delightful musical offering by Henry W. Savage, whose successful productions number half a hundred, will be seen at The Grand next Wednesday, Sept. 25.

"Have a Heart" was one of the tuneful hits of last season when it was pronounced "a three-hour string of laughter and melody." Book and lyrics are by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, the widely read magazine provider of humorous fiction. The music is by Jerome Kern, whose tingling fox-trots, one-steps, and ballads of sentiment are so universally popular. The scenes are laid in the lingerie section of a big department store, alive with fascinating shop girls and fashion hunters, and at an ocean view summer hotel at Blueport, R.I. There is a very sane, sensible story of infinite humour, with flashes of dainty sentiment, that concerns a young couple eloping for a second honeymoon, upon the eve of a divorce inspired by a fascinating sales-girl, who graduates into fame as a seductive queen of the movies. Among the musical numbers, already hummed and danced to from coast to coast, are: "You Said Something," "I'm So Busy," "Look In His Eyes," "Napoleon," "Honeymoon Inn," "Can the Cabaret," "Daisy," "Samarkland," "My Wife—My Man," "I'm Here Little Girls, I'm Here," and "The Road That Lies Before." The cast is one of quality with a chorus that is distinctive, for Mr. Savage insists that his singers must really be able to sing. An enjoyable feature of the musical programme will be found in the special orchestra carried by the company. The organization to be seen here is the only one playing "Have a Heart," and is under the personal direction of Henry W. Savage.

Among the worst foes of the memory are too much food, too much physical exercise, and, strangely enough, too much education.

Lenine, Trotsky and Company

Or the Betrayal of Russia.

Series of Communications Between Bolsheviki and German Government Reveal the Relationship Between the Two Parties.

Another group of letters (Numbers 33 to 36) shows how the Germans cheated the Bolsheviko leaders in their dealings with the Ukraine and made a separate German peace with the anti-Bolsheviki leaders in that Russian province. And another group shows the Germans assisting both sides of the civil war in Finland (Documents 38, 43, 53).

The documents, as they follow, are given in the report form in which they were transmitted by Mr. Sisson to Mr. Creel, chairman of the committee, with some later data added and carefully indicated. For instance, Mr. Sisson did not learn until several weeks after he had left Russia that the German order (which he possessed) naming the Russian who was to "defend" Petrograd had been obeyed.

REPORT BL EDGAR SISSON.

Instalment 1.

Introduction and Documents 1 to 7.

Three groups of documents are subjected to internal analysis in the material that follows. One group consists of originals, one group consists of photographs of documents believed still to be in the file rooms of the Russian Bolsheviki, and the third (the appendix to the first instalment) of typewritten circulars that have not been traced to their originals except in the case of two of the number. The chief importance of the third group is that its appearance inspired the efforts that led to the uncovering of the other groups. And they fit into the fabric of the whole.

The first set of these appendix circulars came into my hands on Feb. 2, in Petrograd. An additional set, appeared the following day at an office where I frequently called. A third appeared in another quarter a day afterwards. One set was in Russian and two in English. On February 5 I had all three sets. A possible explanation of their appearance at this time, and their interest is given in the appendix.

By themselves they were plausible but not substantiated. Having first performed the serious duty of analyzing them for surface values and transmitting them, and the analysis to Washington, I turned, therefore, to the task of further investigation.

It is not yet possible to name those who helped me in two weeks' time the judgment of fact is my own apparent.

The material is presented in its report form, with the addition of some later data. For instance, I was not able to learn until several weeks after I left Russia that the German order (which I possessed), the Russian who was to "defend" Petrograd, had been obeyed.

The text of the documents disclose both the methods and the effects of the German conspiracy, not alone against Russia, but the world. With each document is the indication of whether it is original or photograph. With each document is an interpretative note.

DOCUMENT NO. 1.

Very secret.

People's Commissary for Foreign Affairs.

Petrograd, November 16, 1917.

To the Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars:

In accordance with the resolution passed by the conference of People's Commissars, Comrades Lenine, Trotsky, Poviosky, Dybenko and Volodarski, the following has been executed by us:

1—In the archives of the ministry of justice from the dossier re "Treason" of Comrades Lenine, Zinovieff, Kodlovsky, Koliontai and others, has been removed the order of the German Imperial bank, No. 7433 of the second of March, 1917, for allowing money to Comrades Lenine, Zinovitff, Kameneff, Trotsky, Sumenson, Koslovsky and others, for the propaganda of peace in Russia.

2—There have been audited all the books of the Nia bank at Stockholm containing the acounts of Comrades Lenine, Trotsky, Zinovieff, and others, which were opened by the order of the German Imperial bank No. 2754. These books have been delivered to Comrade Muller, who was sent from Berlin.

Authorized by the Commissar for foreign affairs.

F. Zalkind, E. Polivanoff.

Note—The Russian council of people's commissars was dominated by the President, Vladmir Ulianox (Leline); the then foreign minster, Leon Trotsky, now war minister; and the Ambassador to Germany, A. Joffe. The marginal endorsement in writing is "to the secret department, B.L." This is the fashion in which Lenine is accustomed to initial himself. The English equivalent would be V.U. for Vladmir Ulianov. So, even if there existed no further record of German Imperial bank order No. 7333, here would be the proof of its contents, and here is the link connecting Lenine directly with his action and his guilt. The content matter of the circular exists, however, and herewith follows:

Order of the 2nd of March, 1917, of the Imperial bank for the representatives of all German banks in Sweden:

Notice is hereby given that requisition for money for the purpose of peace propaganda in Russia will be received through Finland. These requisitions will emanate from the following. Lenine, Zinovieff, Kameneff, Trotsky, Sumenson, Kozlovsky, Kollontai, Sivers and Merkalin, accounts for whom have been opened in accordance with our order No. 2754 in the agencies of private German businesses in Sweden, Norway and Switzerland. All these requests should bear one of the two following signatures, Dishau or Milkenberg. With either of these signatures the requests of the above mentioned persons should be complied with without delay.

7433, Imperial bank.

I have not a copy of this circular, not a photograph of it, but Document No. 2, next in order, proves its authenticity at once curiously and absolutely. Particular interest attaches to this circular because of Bolsheviki public denial of its existence. It was one of several German circulars published in Paris in the Petit Parisienne last winter. The Petrograd Bolsheviki papers proclaimed it a falsehood. Zalkind, whose signature appears not only here but on the protocol, was an assistant foreign minister. He was sent in February on a mission outside of Russia. He was in Christiania in April when I was there. Have photograph of the letter.

DOCUMENT NO. 2.

No. 6451. Secret.

(G.G.S., Nachrinchten Bureau. Section R.)

February 12

The secret service department has the honour to inform you that there were found on the arrested Captain Konshin two German documents with notations and stamps of the Petersburg secret police (Khrana), which show themselves to be the original orders of the Imperial bank No. 7433, March 2, 1917, concerning the opening of accounts for Messrs. Lenine, Sumenson, Koslovsky, Trotsky and other active workers on the peace propaganda, by order No. 2754, of the Imperial bank.

These discoveries show that at the proper time steps were not taken to destroy the above mentioned documents.

For the Head of the Department:

R. Bauer, Adjutant, Bukholm.

Note—Observe the thoughtfulness with which Bauer, a careful man, set down exactly what was in the document, thereby permitting the contents to rise again from the ashes to which perhaps he committed the damaging paper. He admits that the documents were found truthful originals. The world will thank him and Germany will not.

I have the original letter. It bears original endorsements "Referred to the commission for fighting counter revolution." Demanded documents. M. Skripnik, and unintelligible comment by N. Gorbunov, Lenine's other government secretary. The letter is directed to Lenine. Did Skripnik get the document? I do not know.

The letter is exceptionable otherwise. The arrested Capt. Konshin mentioned is a German officer Lieutenant Otto, who appears elsewhere as an agent in the German double-crossing intrigue in the Ukraine. What was behind the mystery of his arrest? What was his fate?

DOCUMENT NO. 3.

(V.K.D. No. 323-2 inclosures.)

Protocol.

This protocol, written by us on the 2nd of November, 1917, in duplicate, with the consent of the council of people's commissars, is taken from the department of secret service of the Petrograd district and the former department of police (Okrana), on instructions of the representatives of the German General Staff in Petrograd:

1—Circular of the German General Staff No. 421, dated June 9, 1914, concerning the immediate mobilization of all industrial enterprises in Germany, and—

2—Circular No. 93, dated November 28, 1914, of the general staff of the high sea fleet, concerning the sending into enemy countries of special agents for the destruction of war supplies and materials. The above noted circulars were given over under signed receipt into the secret service department of the German staff in Petersburg.

Authorized by the council of people's commissars.

F. Zalkind, E. Policanoff.

(Illegible but may be Mekhanoshin)

A. Ioffe.

The circulars No. 421 and No. 93, mentioned in this protocol and also one copy of this protocol were received on the third of November, 1917. By the secret service department of the German General Staff in Petrograd, Henrich, Adjutant.

Note—The circulars inclosed are in German and are as follows:

1 GR General Staff, Central Abtheilung, Section M., No. (Blank) Blank.)

Circular of June 9, 1914.

To Bezirkscommendanten: Within 24 hours of the receipt of this circular you are to inform all industrial concerns by wire that the documents with industrial mobilization plans and with registration forms be opened, such as are referred to in the circular of the commission of Count von Waldersee and Caprivi of June 27, 1887.

No. 421, Mobilization Section.

(2 General Staff of the High Sea Fleet No. 93.)

Circular of November 28, 1914.

To Marinsagenturen and Flottenvereinen:

You are ordered to mobilize immediately all destruction agents and observers in those commercial and military ports in Canada and America where munitions are being loaded on ships going to Russia, France and England. Where there are storehouses of such munitions and where fighting units are stationed, it is necessary to hire through third parties who stand in no relation to the official representatives of Germany, agents for arranging explosions on ships bound for enemy countries, and for arranging delays, embroilments and difficulties during the loading, dispatching and unloading of ships. For this purpose we are especially recommending to your attention loaders' gangs, among whom there are many anarchists and escaped criminals and that you get in touch with German and neutral shipping offices as a means of observing agents of enemy countries who are receiving and shipping the munitions. Money required for the hiring and bribing of persons necessary for the designated purpose will be placed at your disposal at your request.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Pte. Harold White Finds a Refuge in a French Chateau

Windows Are All Out, But Outside of that Everything is Jake—It is a Change From Sleeping in Caves and Dugouts.

Mr. E. H. White, Charlotte street, has received the following letter from his son, Harold, who has been in France over three years. He states that Father Cote will soon be home on leave. His battalion has recently been reviewed by Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, General Sir Henry Rawlinson and the French Premier Clemenceau.

The letter follows:

August 31, 1918.

Dear Father,—Well how is everyone at home these days. I am fine and I hope all of you are also.

I was down by a Y. M. C. A. canteen the other day and I met Frank Carter but he is not like he used to be. His looks are changed quite a bit and he is much taller. He didn't recognize me at first. I was also speaking to Father Cote, he is going on leave pretty soon and will be seeing Father Kelly and will remember me to him and to Bishop O'Brien.

GOOD BILLET

We have a pretty billet at present compared to what we have had for quite a while. We are in a fine house and its O. K. There is nothing damaged in it but the windows and they are all broken by the concussion of the shells. It's a home alright. Why, we have even iron beds with white sheets to sleep on and also there are fine big mirrors to shave and clean up at and we even have a piano and lots of water to do our washing. It's a change to what we have had after being in tunnels, caves, on the fields, dug-outs and many other different shelters. You have to hand it to the French for nerve. There are places here that have been under shell fire for the last four years and they have never left home. I saw one queer incident when I passed through a village which had been recaptured from the Boches. The villagers started to stream back into the village twenty-four hours after it was captured. Old Fritzie is pretty sore at us Canadians. He comes over every night on a bombing raid.

GRAND INSPECTION

We had a grand inspection here by Sir Douglas Haig and Sir Henry Rawlinson and the French Premier or the old "Tiger" as they call him. He is a very old chap, about 90 years old, but he is still around and tickled to death over the Canadians.

With love to all,

HAROLD.

This German Met Them Like a Real Bartender

Had Beer and Cheese Intended for Germans, But He Served the Victorious Americans.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 19.—The Germans apparently never expected to be ousted from the St. Mihiel salient. They had done much work in building shelters and beer gardens and about the Soulevel farm the country had been made to look like a prosperous German neighbourhood, with resorts where townspeople might spend their holidays.

Little club houses were built and equipped not wholly in keeping with front line operations. The dugouts and shelters of the officers were fitted almost luxuriously, some of the larger ones being fitted with bath tubs and running water and lighted by electricity. Outside of many of them were little summer houses where the occupants were accustomed to sit and drink beer.

When the Americans advanced they captured a German mess sergeant who had been instructed to pack up and leave, but who had under-estimated the speed of the Allied progress. He was carrying a quantity of beer and cheese and when he saw the Americans approaching, he did not run, but busied himself like a bartender and received them standing behind a table on which the beer and cheese were ready for consumption.

The City Has Expended Over $120 Inspecting Wood Lots

Fire, Water and Light Committee Met Last Night to Discuss the Wood Situation.

So many wood propositions have been received by the Fire, Water and Light committee, that many have had to be rejected. Most of the wood is standing, and at the speed with which the committee operates, could not be used as fuel until the winter of 1919-20. The committee find the fuel question so perplexing that it is very difficult to come to a definite conclusion.

One proposition was received at a meeting last evening asking $1.50 a cord for wood. Adding the cost of cutting, drawing, loading, freight and delivering, the bill would amount to $9.05.

The committee have written the Grand Trunk Railway regarding some coal dust which has been dumped by the coal yard. It was rejected by a local coal company, but the cost of duty and customs are excessive. The coal dust question was dropped.

The Fuel committee was authorized to arrange with the owner of some wood lots in the north for their purchase. Already over $120 has been spent in inspecting these lots, and the committee thought that no time should be lost in getting the wood. The wood will not be available until next winter, however.

Two Platoon System.

A petition was received from the members of the Fire Brigade asking that the two platoon system be adopted at once. The many benefits of the system were enumerated and the committee were respectfully asked to discuss the matter.

"At the Dominion Fire Chief's convention, they recommended that this system be enforced in 1919," said the Mayor.

Ald. Bobbin has written other Ontario cities asking their opinion of the platoon system.

"It means $4,000 or $5,000 more a year," mused the Mayor.

"We should discuss the matter and get down to business," was Ald. Jones' comment on the subject.

It was finally left to the committee of the whole to deal with. At the very earliest it is not likely any decision will be reached before another month.

Hydrant Removed.

The Peterborough Utilities Commission wrote that they had removed the hydrant at the corner of Mill and Murray streets (on the Quaker Oats property) and suggested placing it at the Central school on Murray street. The committee agreed to this.

The following Fire Department figures were examined:

Fire Department appropriation — $25,000.

Amount used to Aug. 31—$17,867.

Amount left for next 4 months — $7,133.

The account of Mr. Giles Stone of $60.50 for inspecting wood lots was ordered to be paid.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE LAKEFIELD FAIR

Interesting Displays—Motor Cars, Trucks and Tractors Shown—Sewing Machines, Etc.

A rather larger number than usual of special mercantile exhibits were sent to the Exhibition at Lakefield this year but they came chiefly from the city. One or two merchants had some spaces allotted to them, but there did not appear to be any of the local exhibitors present to demonstrate them.

AN OUTSTANDING DISPLAY BY THE DUFFUS GARAGE

To the progressive proprietor of the Duffus Garage, Simcoe street, Peterborough, belongs the credit of putting up by far the largest exhibit on the grounds, consisting of automobiles, motor trucks, and tractors. In fact, it was stated on good authority, that it was the largest and most comprehensive display of its kind ever shown in Canada by one dealer. It was the spacious display that had been prepared for exhibition at the Peterborough Industrial last week but which was withdrawn through some unfortunate circumstances, and it fell to Lakefield visitors to have the privilege of seeing first amplified. The display embraced:—

One Ford Sedan
Two Ford Couplets.
One Ford Touring Car.
One Ford Roadster.
One Ford Light Delivery Truck.
One Ford One-Ton Truck with stake body and pneumatic tires.
One Smith Form-A-Truck attached to a Ford Power plant.
One Gray Dort, five passenger car.
One Gray Dort "Special" five passenger car.
One Powerful International Tractor with ton plough attached.
One Ford Tractor with Oliver plough attached.

So great was the interest taken in this display by visitors that Mr. Duffus and his representatives were kept busy demonstrating the features of the different machines.

The Ford automobiles shown were the accepted standards, possessing those attractive features which have compelled so wide a sale in Canada and the United States.

The Gray Dort car which has been selected by Mr. Duffus as the running mate for the Ford, is sure to be a good car, or it would not have been picked for the Duffus Garage. It is essentially a practical automobile and more and more are the Canadian motorists coming to the Gray Dort. Of the beauty of the Gray Dort there can be no question and for a low-priced car it has established an enviable sales-record. The Gray Dort "Special" is an achievement of interest to every motorist and prospective motorist. It is an exclusive model.

The Commercial Trucks shown furnished ample evidence of the wisdom of studying these speedy and convenient machines. Farmers using trucks save a lot of haulage cost. They find that by owning the powerful trucks a load can be hauled as easily on one truck as formerly was handled by three two horse waggons. The motor truck promises to revolutionize the haul for the man who raises crops. With the construction of hard-surfaced roads, the farmer with the motor truck is able to do his hauling for distances of 100 miles or even longer he chooses, taking his products direct to the mill. The Ford models of these truck shave been developed to the highest standards.

The Smith Form-A-Truck is an accessory that turns any used Ford car into a money-earning motor truck by efficiency.

A most interesting display was made of the "Power Maker" or in other words, the power attachment which can be placed on the rear of a Ford car for cutting wood, chopping feed, running a fanning mill, pumping water, driving cream separator or churn and various other uses. A cord of hardwood can be cut in two lengths in 38 minutes.

The powerful International Tractor shown was another of the big live features of interest to farmers in the Duffus display.

Its capacity is 3,000 pounds. It was driven over the ground and its powerful engine demonstrated to hundreds of onlookers. This Tractor was ploughing on Robert Knox's farm on Thursday and on the farm of Mr. Bailey in Emily next week.

SEWING MACHINE DISPLAY BY J. W. STUART.

This exhibit was a centre of attraction in the Main Building for a large audience of ladies. Mr. Stuart, the exhibitor, sent this display from his place of business, at 372 Water street, Peterborough. He was familiar to many of the visitors at Lakefield Fair, having been a well known resident of the village for some years and had formed a large connection with the rural homes of the section tributary to Lakefield. He represents the Willis Piano Co., and the Standard Sit-Straight and New Williams Sewing Machines, which have had a splendid sale throughout his territory. The sewing machines were much admired and some good prospects secured.

MAXWELL MOTOR CAR EXHIBIT.

The Gillespie Garage, of Aylmer street, Peterborough, was represented by an excellent exhibit of two five passenger Maxwell Touring Cars. The Maxwell's telling slogans are:

"Most Miles per Gallon."
"Most Miles on Tires."

And the Maxwell people distinctly state that they never claim anything they cannot prove. For example:—The famous 22,000 mile Non-Stop run was made with the Maxwell every minute under observation of the A.A.A. officials. That particular test proved about all that anyone could ask or desire of a motor car. Among other things it still stands the world's long distance speed record. Just consider — 44 days and nights without a stop, at an average speed of 25 miles per hour! And that, not by a $3,000 car, but by a stock model Maxwell.

Doesn't this prove that you don't need to pay more to obtain all the qualities you can desire in a motor car—if you select a Maxwell? Hill-climbing?—the Maxwell holds practically every record worth mentioning. Economy and speed are among other of the Maxwell's achievements.

Mr. T. E. Turner, the salesman for the Gillespie Garage, was in attendance and answered all questions.

THE "NEW SERIES" CHEVROLET

A "Baby Grand" Model and a "Four Ninety" Chevrolet Touring Car was shown by the Manning Garage, of Water street, Peterborough.

Mr. Bert Manning, well known in Lakefield district, and his assistant, were present, and described the "New Series" to all enquirers. The specifications of the Chevrolet "Baby Grand" Touring Car shows a four cylinder valve-in-head motor; an Auto-Lite generator; starting motor and lighting system; new improved Rimy system of ignition; tilted windshield, etc.

It used to be the fashion to put high power in a motor car by means of a big, heavy, complicated engine. The next step necessary was to build the whole car heavier to accommodate this extra power and weight. Weight was added to carry weight. It brought excessive expense. The Chevrolet Company, instead of adding more power to move the car, has cut down weight, and made it easy for the power to make itself felt. Lightness of moving parts made of steel, has led to increased engine efficiency and to economy of fuel. This scientific light-weight construction is the reason why the Chevrolet does so much for so little. The cylinder heads are detachable. The motor can be easily opened for inspection at any time. The removable cylinder head is adjusted in a few minutes.

In the selection of the material the greatest care is taken. The crankshaft, camshaft, and connecting rod are drop-forged Vanadium steel. The pistons are of aluminum composition.

It will be seen by this that the automobile engine builder appreciates his responsibility and understands what is expected of him as his share toward building the dependable, trustworthy Chevrolet.

FLYING FROM FRANCE TO ENGLAND

(By Pilot).

Recently a large British aeroplane brought nine passengers across the Channel.

At the appointed time the passengers were there, with a considerable amount of material, which was quickly stowed away into the capacious interior of the machine. One by one the voyagers climbed aboard by means of a ladder, and made themselves comfortable.

The engines were started and the machine left the ground, climbed upwards in a few great circles, and struck north-west towards the gleaming channel.

The passengers were enjoying their experience, and talked together about the various land-marks below. First came an old French town with massive radial fortifications of moat and rampart, which made it look like a great starfish from above. Behind, like steel bars, lay the shining canals linking up the scattered towns and villages; and far away on the horizon was the low veil of smoke which marked the position of the turbulent front lines. Ahead of them lay the glittering waters of the Channel, and the beloved white cliffs and green fields of England.

The engines thundered on, and the machine forged steadily ahead with a very happy ship's company on board. It was rather a windy day, and below them the travellers could see the surface of the water dotted with white caps, which made them realize the advantage of travelling through the smooth levels of the sky.

It seemed they had no sooner left the coast line than the English cliffs lay below them. Very soon, they were able to recognize familiar towns and harbours. Beneath them, a leave boat seemed to be stationary, so rapidly was it overhauled and left astern; though, in fact, it was tearing through the water, as its bow waves and wake showed.

Over the tail of the big aeroplane the French coast was disappearing fast into the haze, and soon the travellers had passed over the beaches of England and were flying over the green hills and village spires of their own England. Twenty-five minutes earlier, they had been looking down upon the fields of the Pas de Calais.

Soon the noise of the engine away, and the machine began to glide downward in great circles to its destination. Fields and farms and woods and villages rushed up to meet the travellers. In a few minutes the nine had climbed out one by one to the ground; and the big machine was being cleared of its material cargo.

"It will be the only kind of Channel crossing for a good many, after the war," said one passenger.

"Even when the train goes straight through from Charing Cross, by the Channel Tunnel," said the pilot. "Well, perhaps so. It's a good way."

A Great Speaker.

After "Billy" Sunday, it is said that Dr. Honeywell is possibly the greatest evangelist in the field. For four years he was Mr. Sunday's assistant, but for the past ten years he has been conducting campaigns with his own party. For years he has been growing in popularity, effectiveness and usefulness, until to-day in many districts he is almost as well known as Mr. Sunday. Recently he has been conducting a very successful series of meetings in Chicago.

Dr. Honeywell believes that no campaign can be truly successful, no matter how thoroughly organized, unless all connected with it are fully surrendered to the Holy Spirit, so that the work of the campaign may be in the hands of God rather than in the hands of man. It is at his suggestion that the cottage prayer meetings are now being held two nights a week throughout the city in order that the Christian people of the city may through prayer pave the way for the success it is believed that the campaign will prove.

BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS HAVE SMASHED

verge of the formidable trench system. The outposts of the Hindenburg line have been occupied on a wide front between Cambrai and the St. Quentin regions, while in some places the main defenses of the system itself have been conquered. Hinging its movement on the French forces at Savy Wood, west of St. Quentin, the British line swung forward irresistibly, keeping a pace set by the Australians in the middle. When I left Australian headquarters, their riflemen and bombers already were pouring into the Germans' famous trench system, and 2,746 of the defenders were in prison cages or marching toward the cages. The prisoners included 114 officers, among them being a regimental commander and staff, and two battalion commanders and their staffs. Twenty-seven guns were captured together with their crews and horses. This may be regarded as exceptional as most of the guns are behind the main defenses. The British advance varied in depth from 2½ to 4 miles. Nowhere did it fail to clean up the Hindenburg outpost line.

A Fierce Attack.

At some points the Germans fought fiercely, such as at Le Verguier, Templeux and south of Fresnay Le Petit, where many prisoners were taken. Tanks played a prominent part in the fighting. Long trained English and Australian troops mostly overcame the wire entanglements and machine guns in their own individual manner. They carried the Germans off their feet by the very dash of their attack. Identified prisoners represent at least twenty-two battalions. Those seen in the cages are mud-covered and weary, but cheerful. All are husky and well fed.

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 19.—A very serious accident occurred at Neville's Corners, near Aylmer, yesterday morning, when an automobile owned and driven by W. Hilliker, of Aylmer, overturned while travelling at a fast rate, pinning John Carter of Aylmer, one of the occupants, underneath, and seriously injuring him, and inflicting bad cuts and bruises on James Chatterton of Mount Salem, another passenger, and Mr. Hilliker the driver. Mr. Carter, who lives at the home of Frank Leeson, a farmer, near the accident, is said to be very badly hurt, a pipe which he was smoking having been jammed down his throat and terrible gashes inflicted in his forehead and cheeks. His back is also reported to be injured. The three men are masons, and were returning to Aylmer from a job on which they were working.

LATE CLOSING OF STORES CALLS FORTH STRONG PROTEST FROM TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL

Demand is Made That Merchants Consider the Interests of Their Clerks—Mr. Walter Stocker Has Doubly Offended the Council and Objection Was Raised to His Appointment to Fuel Commission.

SOME OTHER SUBJECTS

The Trades and Labour Council's desire to facilitate the establishment of a Fuel Commission has been somewhat strained by the proposed inclusion of Mr. Walter Stocker. Objection to Mr. Stocker's appointment was voiced last night on the ground that he had expressed a disparaging opinion of the Labour Council to its secretary, Mr. W. Stevens, who had forwarded to him the resolution passed at the last meeting, disapproving of his action in delivering certain letters during the postmen's strike. Mr. Stevens repeated the conversation in which he said the flouting statement had been made.

"I considered that the Trades and Labour Council has been grossly insulted," the Secretary said, and added that it was meant for the Council as a whole, and was not a personal reflection.

There was some discussion as to whether a resolution should be sent to the City Council protesting against the appointment of Mr. Stocker, but in the end it was unanimously agreed that nothing should be done that might defeat any movement to secure a Fuel Commission for the citizens. Hence the Labour men swallowed their resentment in the hope that they might be able to assist in the effective exercise of the fuel regulations. For the present their chief concern is in obtaining an equitable distribution of coal before the winter sets in, and they are satisfied that their wisest course was not to consult their dignity as the representatives of Labour, but rather to consider the needs of the working people who have been unable to obtain even one ton of coal. Hence they decided to let nothing interfere with the co-operation they may be able to render the City Council. And incidentally, if the efforts of the Commission should for any reason come to naught, the responsibility for such failure will not rest on the Labour Council. This point was mentioned last night, for a member reported that one of the aldermen had stated that the Trades and Labour Council was nothing more than a resolution factory. This was Alderman Dobbin's mild impeachment. Its effect was to provide an additional motive for offering no obstacle to the new Commission. One delegate declared that if this attempt failed, the City Council would have to assume the full responsibility, for the personnel of the Commission had already received its full approval.

Mr. Murray's comment was simply that he was at the service of the people through the City Council. He had taken a great deal of interest in the coal question, and if he were to retire now it would appear to be a delinquency on his part. Some of the people who were anxious about their fuel supply would conclude, if he were to quit, that he had "cold feet." In short the Trades and Labour Council, and their representatives, are anxious for the Commission's success. There is a slight suspicion that the Council or the coal dealers may be "passing the buck" in the present willingness to conform with the Fuel Controller's regulations, but the Labour men feel that the newest effort cannot be less successful than any that have preceded it.

The Closing Hour for Stores.

It was stated that some of the stores had discontinued the five o'clock closing on week days, and that some merchants had returned to the six o'clock hour or had compromised at 5:30 p.m. This was the old long hour idea creeping in again. The clerks it was maintained, should be enabled to cease work at five o'clock with the other workers in the city. The need of the old-time was a delusion that should be laid once and for all.

The secretary was instructed to forward to the Retail Merchants' Association the Council's protest against the action of some merchants in resuming the late closing.

The Strand Theatre was reported on the unfair list. In reply to a communication from the Mine Workers of British Columbia, the Council granted five dollars to their defense fund.

The Cigar Manufacturers.

Reference was again made to the strike of the cigar makers in Toronto, Hamilton, London and Montreal. Among the factories in which the men are striking for better wages are the Tuckett Company and the Wilson Company. It was asserted that the principle applied to all workingmen. They should demand the union label not only on their tobacco but on their clothes and other purchases. It was the old question of recognition of the unions, and final success depended almost wholly upon the individual's insistence for union made goods.

A Striking Example.

Several members recalled the incident by which the Sunlight Soap Company absorbed other soap factories in the Old Country. They tried to impose upon the retailers' trade restrictions that had been impossible under the former competition of the independent manufacturers. The regulation of prices was one of the attempted innovations. Immediately, the co-operative stores refused to handle Sunlight soap, and wielded such an influence in the general trade that the consolidation was broken up into its former constituent companies. In the co-operative stores, here as in Great Britain, the merchandise is solely union made.

Strange Drowning Near Lindsay

Thomas Hutton Lost His Life While Out Duck Hunting.

LINDSAY, Sept. 18.—On Tuesday a sad drowning took place on the upper Scugog River, when Mr. "Tommy" Hutton, an employee on the Grand Trunk, was the victim. His companion, Mr. James Hickey, who is also a brother-in-law of the deceased, had a narrow escape from a similar fate.

It appears that the two men left early in the morning on a duck-shooting expedition and were to be back by four o'clock. They secured Mr. P. J. O'Connell's small yacht and were in the vicinity of West Cross Creeks when the accident occurred. Apparently they had been on shore and had just nicely pushed off when on passing through the weeds they struck a stump and were both thrown into the water. The weeds and rice in this vicinity are quite thick and it would appear that the two men had no chance whatever of reaching land again. Evidently Hutton became entangled in the weeds and fell over into a cramped, stooped position, as he was found with his face in the water and a small portion of his back visible.

It must have been some time later that Mr. Chas. Piercey happened along in his canoe and was hailed by Mr. Hickey as he was passing by, 30 feet away. Hickey was spied almost hidden from view by a all clump of rice and was up to his neck in water and weeds. When Mr. Piercey reached him he was unable to extricate the heavy man from the mud in which he was standing. He was mired knee deep and in some manner his belt had become unfastened and his trousers had fallen down around his legs.

"Where is Tom?" he asked Mr. Piercey.

"Tom who," enquired the latter.

"Hutton," replied the almost exhausted Hickey.

On looking around another small bush Mr. Piercey spied the unfortunate victim, and after much struggling succeeded in getting him to land. He saw at once that life was extinct and immediately proceeded to get help to get Hickey out of the water. Mr. Hudson was located and the two men finally succeeded in extricating Hickey and giving him immediate attention.

Coroner Blanchard was notified, but decided that an inquest was unnecessary and that death was quite accidental. Hutton had apparently been dead several hours.

The deceased was well known around Lindsay and is survived by a large family.

FOCH'S QUICK SHIFTS BEWILDER GERMANS

They Find it Increasingly Difficult to Meet Blows in "Quiet" Sectors.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Sept. 19.—The regular rhythm of Marshal Fochs' strategy is at least as impressive for the serious observer, and, we may be sure, for the German staff, as any of its more sensational episodes. Continuity in time with alternation in space—these two characteristics keep the enemy harassed and give the Allies always some benefit or surprise.

The extension of the active front toward the east is particularly important, not only because it brings us nearer the points the enemy must regard with special anxiety, but because in what have so long been quiet sectors he will have very heavy work to create defenses comparable with those further west. These sectors, too, have been so lightly held that whenever they are seriously attacked a considerable number of divisions must be brought in time to meet the onset. The abandonment successively of the Marne, Somme, and Meuse salients shows how difficult it has become for Berlin to find these divisions.

In this fact lies the confession of the substantial accuracy of those figures of the decline of the German force which in my dispatches up to July last always seemed to err on the side of optimism. The turn of the tide has justified those staff calculators on whom I depended.

It is, then, a steady ebb rather than any one current that is carrying us to victory, but tide may be and is being helped by two kinds of influence. One is the individual ability of the allied chiefs, from Generals downward.

The slow but persistent advance of General Mangin's army between the Ailette and the Aisne, where a corner of the Hindenburg line has been chipped and is in danger of a greater breach, illustrates what determined and resourceful leadership can accomplish. Without any fuss, Mangin has taken possession of Monte des Singes and the west end of Chemin des Dames, between Allemant village and Mennejean Farm and the brickheap called the Mill of Laffaux. The small French tanks once again proved their high value.

The whole German position on the Aisne is thus threatened, and it seems most improbable that the enemy can long hold the Aisne Heights. But if they are lost, can the St. Gobain block be retained? Or is Ludendorff already contemplating another retreat?

Woman Runs Great Risk to Give Yankees a Tip

Repeats the Performance of Laura Secord—Americans Rescued Her Entire Family.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Sept. 19.—The devotion of a French woman to her country was recorded last week at one of the American headquarters to which a woman whose name cannot be mentioned had made her way through hell fire and over a region filled with gas and traps to bring to the allies information regarding the Germans.

With her mother and younger brother the young woman, who is not yet 20, had lived at Soulevre farm since the day it fell into the hands of the Germans four years ago. Four other brothers are in the French army. The mother, daughter and boy were forced to remain within the German lines and witness the day by day conversion of their property into a German clubhouse. During those four years the two women endeavoured to placate rather than to antagonize their captors.

Of Utmost Importance.

From German officers who frequented the farm the young woman learned information which she recognized to be of the utmost importance. When she heard the barrage Thursday morning she determined to run the risk of crossing the nearly three miles separating her home from the allied lines.

Telling her mother and the others that she had work to do in the garden, the young woman left the house. She slipped away toward the American lines, although every road was swept by allied and German gunfire. After many difficulties and narrow escapes the young woman reached the American lines and told her story.

In return for the information she brought she asked that every effort be made to rescue her mother and brother. The Germans attempted to maintain their positions at Soulevre farm but the Americans overcame them in desperate fighting. The mother and brother were brought to American headquarters to-day uninjured and there was a joyful reunion.

Allies Invest St. Quentin On Three Sides, Fall Near

French Advance Less Spectacular Than the British, But They Also Made Important Gains—Took Hundreds of Prisoners.

3 MILES FROM ST. QUENTIN

London, Sept. 18.—The joint British-French advance to-day was on a front of 22 miles, and the advance was from one and a half to three miles.

The most important aspect of the advance is that it makes more certain the capture of St. Quentin, which the Germans have been ordered to hold at all costs. This important city is virtually encircled on three sides, and its fall seems only a matter of days.

Not only did the blow bring nearer the capture of St. Quentin, which the Germans are struggling desperately to hold, but it went far towards wiping out the only bulge in the British line, which resembles a salient. Epehy, at the apex of the bend, has been taken, and the same fate has befallen Gouzeaucourt and Hargicourt, which stood at the ends of the wings.

The importance which the Germans attached to the territory wrested from them is indicated by the announcement that they launched dedetermined counter attacks as soon as they could be organized, from Hargicourt to the Omignon rivulet. The success of their efforts remains somewhat obscure but it is not believed that they can recover the ground that they have lost.

While the French advance was less spectacular than that of the British, with whom they co-opreated, they were equally successful in gaining their objectives. They moved forward on a front of six miles to an average depth of 1 1-3 miles, adding several hundred prisoners to the British bag. They now hold the southern outskirts of Contescourt, less than three miles from the suburbs of St. Quentin.

This city, where the troops of Von Goeben scored a great victory in 1871, is one of the buttresses of the Douai-Cambrai-St. Quentin-La Fere-Laon line, beyond which it has been announced, the Germans would not fall back. With the French in the outskirts of La Fere, with St. Quentin invested and with British battling doggedly for Cambrai, the great Hindenburg defence system is in danger of being breached at three of its strongest points. Once ousted from it, the Teutons will have back of them no strong fortifications until they reach the Maubeuge defence.

The taking of St. Quentin remains a difficult task, however, for the Germans are in strong defensive positions, an intercepted order from Gen. Von Morgen to the 14th reserve corps emphasizes the importance of the terrain they hold. He orders them not to yield another foot of ground in "the imminent decisive battles."

The Enemy's Losses Were Very Heavy in Yesterday's Fighting

Desperate Fighting on the British Front—Australians Take a Hand.

(By the Associated Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, Sept. 19.—An assault delivered by the Australians at eleven o'clock last night in the centre of the Villeret sector forced the stubbornly resisting Germans to pull back from their advanced line to strongly fortified defences in the rear. Furious enemy counter attacks delivered at numerous places along the line late yesterday resulted in sanguinary fighting. In every case the Germans were thrown back and their losses were exceedingly heavy. More than 300 prisoners including 13 officers were taken by the British in the night fighting. In addition to capturing forty guns the British took many machine guns and trench mortars. A most portentious counter attack came just before dusk in the region southeast of Havrincourt, little north of the main battle. Here the Germans threw in six divisions supported by forty batteries. They were completely repulsed and their casualties were extremely heavy.

3 STOREY WAREHOUSE ON BETHUNE STREET FOR MR. L. FLORENCE

Mr. Louis Florence has begun the construction of a new warehouse on the west side of Bethune street between Charlotte and Simcoe streets. It will provide another unit in this warehouse district and give an imposing appearance to the railway front, which at present gazes upon great piles of scrap iron. This building will be thirty by fifty feet in dimension, and of three stories and a basement. It will be used for the storage of the more valuable junk, including copper, brass, rubber and other varieties which have soared in value with the decrease in the production of the ores. This warehouse will be fitted with an office and will be otherwise equipped to handle the growing business Mr. Florence finds flowing through his hands.

Mr. Jos. Bullied and a staff of men are engaged to-day in excavating the cellar, and it is expected that the work of putting in the foundation and proceeding with the erection will be commenced as soon as possible. Mr. Florence plans to have the building completed before winter. It will be quite an addition to the warehouse block along Bethune street, and will present a more attractive and complete front to the passengers of the passing G.T.R. trains.

IN MEMORIAM.

In ever loving memory of our dear brother, Pte. Victor J. Northoott, killed in action on the Somme, Sept. 19th, 1915:

We miss his smiling face,
We miss his cheery word,
There's a vacant place in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by all.
—Inserted by His Sister, Mrs. Day.

IN MEMORIAM

AKERS.—In Loving Remembrance of our little darling Dorothy, daughter of Reginald and Ethel Akers, age 11 months, who died on the 19th September, 1917.

God wanted one more angel
To grace His heavenly throne,
And so He took our dear one,
And bade us not to mourn.

We wanted so to keep her,
For she to us was given,
But Jesus said it could not be,
He wanted her in heaven.

God knows how much we miss her,
He knows the tears we shed,
And whispers, "Hush! she only sleeps—
Your loved one is not dead."
—From Grandma and Grandpa.

Dear is the grave where she is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never will fade;
The midnight stars shine on the grave
Of the one we loved but could not save.

Fondly we loved her, she is dear to us still,
But in grief we must bend to God's holy will;
Our sorrow is great, our loss hard to bear,
But angels are guarding dear Dorothy with care.
—From Auntie Flo and Ernest.

AKERS.—In Ever-Loving Memory of our little Dorothy, beloved and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Akers, 195 Auburn Street, who fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 19th, 1917.

We mourn the loss of one we loved,
And did our best to save,
Beloved in life, regretted gone,
Remembered in the grave.

She was a flower too tender, sweet and fair,
To dwell among the thorns of sin and care,
So Jesus took her from this world of vice,
To bloom among the flowers in Paradise.
—From Mama and Dada.

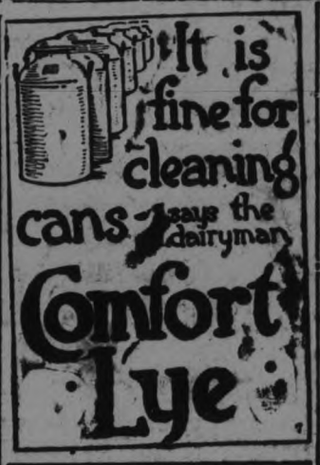
If so many people wouldn't try to take so much coin away from the necessitites of life it would be easier to practice this thrift advice.



Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

"I've not decided," said a lad who was urged to become a Christian. I want to see life first. I am not going to be tied up to the church just yet. There's plenty of time. Of course I don't mean to be bad.

No one means to be bad, said the man who had spoken to him. I've visited hundreds of criminals in prison and none of them ever meant to be bad when they were boys. They just made the same choice you're making.

But I'm not making any choice, I'm waiting, said the boy.

You're choosing this minute, was the answer. You're choosing not to obey God just yet. Why you don't have to choose badness. You'll drift into it just the same, and almost as fast.

I have a friend with me. A young man the morning after his conversion was asked to drink. No, I can't, I have a friend with me. Oh, that's all right, bring your friend with you. No; I cannot bring him in. Then come without him. No, I will not go without him. Where is your friend? My friend is the Lord Jesus Christ. He would not go into that barroom to take a drink, and by the grace of God I do not mean to go anywhere or do anything that will make me part company with Jesus Christ. Human life is character building; for remember that character means exactly what you are, while reputation is only what other people think we are. Every man builds his own character, and it survives the grave. If you do not decide to follow right and strictly too, you are being drawn aside by evil.

What makes you think that doing right would tie you up and keep you from seeing life as you call it; that is an evil thought, a thought that has led thousands of boys into darkness and ruin. Your choice is made for evil this minute.

The man had had experience and he knew what he was talking about. The boy thought he knew, but was he not makin gan unconscious and terrible mistake? King's treasures.

As our character is something that cannot be buried in the grave, and as we each decide each hour, and in view of the special services, have I, seeing my lost estate, fled for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before me in the gospel, through our Lord Jesus Christ?

Now, without doubt there are many Christian people in this fair city who can say with Peter, as given in 2nd Epistle, 1st to 16th, for we have not followed cunningly devised tables, and they are showing their faith by not only proclaiming Christ but bringing an honoured evangelist to help move this fair city. Yes, and holding special prayer meetings, through the week or weeks before. These of themselves are spelndid, but remember there is one thing given to each of us, the power of choice. Oh how wonderful to have a friend continually with us, able to do exceeding abundantly above all we can ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us.

Choose ye this day whom you will serve, is the voice to each of us.

J. H. TAYLOR.

Food Board Flashes

"If a recipe call for 1 cup of sugar, what amount of substitute may be used?"

The answer to this question is simple. Use in place of 1 cup of sugar, 1 2-3 to 2 cups of white corn syrup. Where honey or syrup is used, the amount of liquid called for in the recipe must be reduced one-fourth cup for every cup of honey or syrup.

Use white corn syrup in your cooking as much as possible. It is an excellent and practical substitute for sugar.

Sheep and lambs are steady.

Sunday School Lesson Questions

Sept. 22, 1918.

Fruits of the Christian Life, Matt. 25:14-30; 5:1-12.

Golden Text, All things are yours ....and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's. 1 Cor. 3:21, 23.

1. Verse 14. In what sense is the phrase "the kingdom of heaven" here used, and in how many different senses is it used by Jesus?

2. Who does the "man," and who do the "servants" of verse 14 represent?

3. Verse 15. What does the word 'talents" stand for or signify in this parable?

4. What reason can you give for God giving some men more opportunities for doing good, and greater ability than others?

5. Verses 16, 17. What in present day language, did the gain of "other talents" represent?

6. If we were to say that the two faithful servants used their gracious opportunities (talents) to win human souls to Christ, how would the winning of them represent more talents gained?

7. Verse 18. Is it true or not, and if it is, why is it so, that a larger proportion of men with meager opportunities and poor ability are unfaithful than those who are richly endowed in both respects?

8. Verse 18. What reason can you give for the man with one talent being unfaithful?

9. Verse 19. When will the reckoning day be here?

10. Verses 20-23. On what rule will God meet out to the faithful his rewards when reckoning day comes?

11. What does it mean to be "a ruler" in eternity, and what are the interests over which the faithful shall rule?

12. Verses 24-27. Wherein did the man with one talent falsify the facts?

13. Verses 28-30. How can you prove that God really does give to those that have and takes away from those that have not the little they have?

14. State in plain language your own conception of the nature and duration of the punishment of the finally unfaithful?

15. Matt. 5:1-12. Verses 1-12. How did Christ probably prepare for the delivery of this most wonderful sermon of all time? (See Luke 6:12.)

16. What kind of persons are they who alone get the only desirable things on earth and in heaven?

17. How can you show that each of the nine graces, upon which Christ pronounces the most exquisite blessing, is a link in an endless chain and that no person can have one without having them all?

18. Verses 1-12. Christ was doubtless giving his own experience; would you, or not, and why, say that he has made provision that all his true followers may enjoy a like blessed experience?

19. What would you say are the present possessions of the followers of Christ according to the words of Jesus?

20. What is necessary for each person to do in order that he may possess all the blessings that Christ here pronounces, all the time?

Lesson for Sunday, Sept. 29, Review—What it means to be a Christian. Read I John 3:1-24.

Catch Fish; Win the War

THERE is no reason to doubt that Omar had a fishing excursion in mind when he said, "O, wilderness were Paradise enow." Likely he was on his way to a favorite nook for bass. Coming back, pessimism might have crept into the verse as into most of the quatrains. Moreover, all that we know about Paradise we imagine. There is no experience, since from that bourne no traveller has returned. When one does make his way back we shall be in a position to give a proper definition of Paradise. Until then it must remain something to which one looks forward with keen pleasure. In this sense there need be no hesitation in saying that the ideal combination of wilderness and Paradise is just about a hundred miles north of Toronto. The jumping-off place is Penetang; the Open Sesame is "bait," the treasure to be unlocked is fish. The final result is a chastening and strengthening of character.

From Penetang north and west through the Georgian Bay and its 30,000 islands — count them — 30,000 — The Voice of the Red Gods wails and roars, and it is there that the young men's feet are turning to tramp on the tail of the black bass, the green bass, and the more tenor pickerel and pike and the baritone lunge. All these fish taste much alike, but they are valued by anglers in proportion to their reluctance to be dragged into the boat and submit to a bump on the bean. Thus the black bass, though smaller than the green, is more highly esteemed, for when a black bass swallows the bait the impression of the person on the other end of the line is that a full terrier has suddenly taken hold, and fears for his own life mingle with hope that he may survive to leave a record of the encounter and show up Homer. The pike, too, is larger than either of the bass, but is of a more pessimistic disposition, being inclined to murmur "kismet" when he is hooked, instead of upsetting the boat and swallowing the occupants as seems to be the ambition of the maskinonge.

North of Penetang the waters swarm with fish, not only the varieties mentioned, but with perch, sunfish, rock bass, minnows and other members of what a poetical writer might call the "finny tribe." They would constitute a satisfactory solution of our food problem if they could be freely translated from the water to the frying-pan or the air-proof tin. They are, however, mysterious and irregular in their habits, and only long and patient study will enable the fisherman to so win their confidence that he can count on being able to sit down at the end of the day and eat a satisfying meal of them. Their office hours are not to be found even in the guide books, nor can their haunts be tabulated as was the case of human beings in the mediaeval ages before the Committee of One Hundred rolled the Stream and converted patrons of the back room into patrons of the back lane and adjacent purlieus.

The general principle adopted by fishermen is that the further away you get from camp, and the more trouble you have in getting there, the better is the fishing. What foundation in fact there is for this belief is not easy to say. Sometimes it seems to be invalidated, for it has been known that a party camping five miles from civilization paddled ten miles further into the wilderness and got back with not more than a few dozen fish, none of them more than five or six pounds, while another party lodged on the brink of civilization, paddled five miles up to the wharf of the campers first mentioned and took fish of a number and size that caused bad blood between the two parties of fishermen. The same principle may be observed locally, for one can get more fish on King street east in half an hour than he can get in Lake Ontario in half a year.

But an injustice would be done to fishermen if the impression were conveyed that what they desired was merely to eat a lot of fish. It is the sport of catching them that makes the appeal. Hence the thread-like lines, the willowy rods, the dainty little hooks. Hence also the sportsmanlike practice of throwing back every fish not more than one and three-quarter inches long that accidentally impales itself upon the barb. If one merely wanted to glut a carnal appetite upon fish he would buy a can of salmon. Instead of which the true fisherman does not eat the canned salmon until all his other supplies of bacon and eggs and beef have run short. In fact, the true fisherman does not repine if he fails to catch any fish at all. He realizes that his apparent failure is not due to any negligence on his own part at all, but rather to the fish who fail to keep the rendezvous, and to the rather low order of intelligence that prevails among them. He establishes himself in a shady place and submits his worm, wriggling with anticipatory rapture, to the inspection of the underworld. If the real fish do not bite, there are others that will. The little chaps will obligingly eat the worm and make bail fellows of themselves. At any rate there is a likelier spot farther up."—J. V. McAree, in the Mail and Empire.

Woman's Right In Galt.

The evolution of the new woman was illustrated in Galt a few evenings ago when two factory girls quarrelling over a domestic issue, proceeded to adjust their differences by a rough-and-tumble fight on the public street.

Big Find of Natural Gas.

Prospecting for natural gas has been crowned with success at Hepworth, near Owen Sound, a considerable deposit having been tapped by a 6-inch pipe at 1,415 feet.

Farmers Ruined.

Many farmers of the Fraser Valley report themselves virtually ruined by the late street car strike which prevented the marketing of their fruit crops while they were in condition to be sold.

AutoStrop SAFETY RAZOR

Of Supreme Necessity

Every soldier's kit must contain certain things if he is to present that smart appearance which is so necessary in our Army.

Of these probably the most important is his razor — it must "stand-up" under all conditions — it must be ready at all time so that he can get a clean, velvety, comfortable shave in the shortest time. This is only possible with the AutoStrop Safety Razor because it is the only one that sharpens its own blades automatically.

A GREAT FIGHTER.

Sergt.-Major Robinson Has Seen Forty Years' Service.

Sergt.-Major "Jimmie" Robinson enjoys the distinction of being the first Canadian to win the D.C.M. in the Great War. He is a veteran of veterans, for despite the fact that his abundance of black hair, his ruddy health-betokening face and his alertness and vigor, mark him as a sturdy man in the early forties at most, he is in reality considerably older, with a service record covering just about forty years and including no fewer than five foreign campaigns with the colors.

He was through the Zulu War of 1879 with Lord Chelmsford's 94th Regiment, now the 2nd Connaught Rangers. He fought also in the Seckakunia campaign of the same year under Sir Garnet, afterwards Lord Wolsley. He went through the first Boer War of 1881, including the siege of Pretoria, with Gen. Bellair. He was in the South African war of 1899-1902 with a Natal Indian regiment, with the Imperial Light Infantry and with the Prince of Wales' Light Horse. His peaceful service includes soldiering with the 2nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers in India, from 1884 to 1889; in the Rocky Mountain Rangers at Nelson, B.C.; with the 104th New Westminster Fusiliers; and with the Hart-McHarg Company of the 6th Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles at Vancouver.

He went out for the first time to the present war with the 7th Battalion of the 1st British Columbia Regiment, 1st Canadian Expeditionary Force, under Hart-McHarg, succeeded by Brig.-Gen. Odlum. He was also with George McSpadden, 11th Irish Fusiliers of Canada, being twice in France and in the thick of events. His D.C.M. was won at Ypres in April, 1915, two months prior to which he was mentioned in despatches, Feb. 15, for conspicuous daring and gallantry.

"The Old War Horse," as Sergt.-Major "Jimmie" is affectionately christened in the West, was born on Oct. 31, 1857, at Port n'Down, in the County Armagh, being the oldest son of the late John Robinson, and, like his father before him, he has been prominent in Orange circles all his life. He was first a member of No. 417, Lord Ranfurley's Purple Banner Lodge, and latterly with Britannia L.O.L., Vancouver, for which he was the principal speaker at this year's 12th of July gathering, the associated guest of honor being Gen. John Hughes.

LORD OF LUMBERJACKS.

Gen. Alexander McDougall Is an Astonishing Man.

Famous in Canada, from one end of that great Dominion to the other as a masterman, a man of imagination and audacity, Gen. Alexander McDougall, who at forty years of age is Director-General of the Canadian Forestry Corps, has made a like impression upon those Englishmen who have encountered him on this side of the Atlantic.

He is not so much a remarkable as an astonishing man, a man who takes your breath away and scatters to the wind a number of your prejudgments concerning the proper behaviour of civilized men. "Most people are other people"; but here is a fresh-minted soul stamped with no image now in currency. The life force within his sturdy body is of so driving and fierce an energy that it could no more stop to copy other people than it could spend ten minutes before a looking-glass in search of its reflection. This life-force has one passion, and that is work; it is in his work, and the bigger and the harder that work the more he is pleased, that the spirit of Alec McDougall, quite unconsciously, affirms its own essence. He lives in achievement.

"Say," he cries, "I'll tell you something that will make you laugh. Listen now. When our fellows got over here they thought they'd come to cut faggots. They thought that was all the timber they'd find in the little island. But when the train was running out of Liverpool one of 'em, with his eyes starting out of his head, calls out, 'Why, dam it, there's a big tree!" and then jumping up and looking out of the window he exclaims, 'Why, dam it, there's two or three trees.' Since then they've cut down a tree in Windsor Park seventeen feet in diameter, and looked at one still living that's mentioned in Domesday Book." Here the general flung back his head and laughed till the room seemed to shake.

Consider these figures. The Canadian Forestry Corps, the whole expenses of which are defrayed by the Canadian Government, have provided us here in England with 300,000 tons of sawn timber a year, exclusive of 5,000,000 tons of mining timber cut in 12 months.

"The boys are splendid," says the general. "There's not a man among them who isn't in this war up to the neck. The Germans can't beat them. They've made big sacrifices to come over here, and but for them the war would have been lost a year ago, that's a fact. Timber essential. Lucky for us you've got it here—thanks to your sporting landlords of a hundred years ago. Wonderful timber! But England's wonderful altogether. After the German offensive in March the army sent out a sudden demand for 40,000 tons of timber, wanted at once. Our boys were so keen they worked all hours God ever made (because it was for the men at the front), and they provided 30,000 of the 40,000 tons ten days before the date fixed for delivery. They can hustle, I tell you, when they've got a reason. One of our sawmills over here was designed to cut 20,000 feet of timber in ten hours; the actual performance in that time was 155,366 feet. Some output, what? Ah, I tell you, they're fine."—From the London Chronicle.

New Canadian Section.

An important development in the administrative organization of the Canadian overseas military forces has recently taken place. It consists in the formation of a Canadian section at the British General Headquarters in France. The section is a branch of, and responsible to, the Ministry of Overseas Forces in London.

This new department is an outcome of the desire on the part of Canada to maintain as complete control as possible of her own forces. Sir Edward Kemp has, for some time past, been negotiating with the Imperial authorities, and has been successful in establishing the principle that the Canadian authorities should have complete control of all matters relating to organization and administration of the Canadian overseas forces, with the exception of those which directly affect military operations.

This section at General Headquarters will be a direct and convenient channel whereby the Canadian viewpoint may be presented in those matters which require reference to General Headquarters, and through it documents and communications relating to such matters will be forwarded direct to the Canadian Overseas Ministry in London, and vice versa, for consideration, instead of going through channels which in the past have caused more or less delay.

It is understood that the head of the new section will be Brigadier-General J. F. L. Embury, C.M.G.

So Near and Yet—

A tree not fifty feet from the clubhouse of the Sandwich Golf and Country Club was split in twain by lightning a few nights ago, a party of golfers sheltering from the rain experiencing "a tingling sensation" but suffering no injury.

ONTARIO'S GROWTH.

War Has Had Marked Effect on the Province.

Since the year before the beginning of the war, the increase of the population of Toronto, up to the year 1916, has been 99,285. The figures of the Registrar-General's Department show an increase for the Province of Ontario, but that of 1914 was away bigger than the other years.

The population figures, as given by the Registrar-General's report, are:

1913	2,677,600
1914	2,749,840
1915	2,757,350
1916	2,776,885

The figures for 1917 are not yet available, but are expected in a short time, and it is thought these will show a slight increase over 1916.

During the years recorded the birth figures have shown an increase till 1916, and then a decided decrease is notable. The figures are:

1913	64,516
1914	66,225
1915	67,932
1916	62,264

Whether there is any truth in the old story that during war time male births outnumber female births is hard to say, but since the war started the fact is apparent. But in 1914 (the war broke out in August) the reports show that the male births in the earlier months were just as much in advance of the female births as during the latter months.

The number of births by sex during the last three years are:

	Male.	Female.
1914	34,031	32,194
1915	34,701	32,231
1916	33,663	31,601

Since 1913 there has been a large decrease in the number of marriages in the province. In 1913 there were 3,697 more marriages than in 1916. In 1913 there were 26,398 couples united (while in 1914 the figures had dropped to 24,245, in 1915 to 23,506, and in 1916 to 23,491.

Since the beginning of 1913 135,631 people have died in the province, 1916 having the largest record, followed by 1913. The figures for deaths are:

1913	34,317
1914	32,440
1915	33,294
1916	35,580

The statistics show that the cities have the smaller increases in births, while the places other than cities and towns have the larger figures.

Another thing that the report brings out is the fact that illegitimate births have not increased since the war. The figures, as quoted show that there has been a decrease since 1913:

1913	26.6
1914	22.1
1915	21.9
1916	20.9

The Largest Drydock.

More particulars of the contract which the St. John Drydock & Shipbuilding Co. has secured from the Department of Public Works for the construction of a drydock and ship repairing plant at Courtenay Bay, St. John, are available. The contract calls for the construction of a drydock which will be of the first class and the largest on this side of the Atlantic. It will, when completed, be capable of accommodating the greatest ships of any navy in the world or the largest mercantile vessels now built or contemplated.

The length of the new dock will be 1,150 feet, and its width at the bottom 125 feet, with 40 feet of water over the sills. The control of the enterprise is in the hands of the Canadian Dredging Co., Ltd., of Midland, Ont., a strong and wealthy corporation which has acquired control of the stock of the St. John Drydock & Shipbuilding Co. It is expected that steel shipbuilding will form an important part of the enterprise, provided arrangements now in contemplation are consummated, and that work for two 10,000-ton vessels will be laid within the next year or year and a half.

The work on the new drydock and certain dredging operations in the harbor of St. John which the company has contracted for will, it is expected, be started within sixty days, and both should be completed within three years. The contracts call for an expenditure of close upon ten million dollars.

It is not what you eat—but what you assimilate that does you good.

Bovril has the wonderful power of making other foods more nourishing. This was proved by Professor Thompson, of Dublin, in independent experiments carried out at the request of a Government Department.

Sunk Submarine.

A cablegram has been received stating that Percy Innis, an old Havelock boy, now of his Majesty's navy, distinguished himself by sinking a Hun submarine at a distance of 500 yards it is stated, and has been recalled to London to be decorated. The submarine was totally destroyed.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up and the skin is left soft and velvety.

The "Great Adventure" is Roosevelt's Topic

Fate of His Son the Basis for a Moving Tribute to Our Soldier Dead—Gallant Women Torchbearers as Well as Men at Front, He Says, in Praise to Mothers.

ALL SUMMONED TO SERVICE

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's editorial in the Metropolitan Magazine for October, which was published yesterday, is entitled "The Great Adventure," and, although no name is mentioned, it is apparent that the basis of the editorial was the supreme sacrifice of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt of the American Section; Colonel Roosevelt's youngest son, who was killed in an air battle in the first days of the great Marne drive.

"Only those are fit to live," writes Colonel Roosevelt, "who do not fear to die; and none are fit to die who have shrunk from the joy of life and the duty of life. Both life and death are parts of the same Great Adventure. Never yet was worthy adventure worthily carried through by the man who put his personal safety first. Never yet was a country worth living in unless its sons and daughters were of that stern stuff which bade them die for it at need; and never yet was a county worthy dying for unless its sons and daughters thought of life not as something concerned only with the selfish evanescence of the individual but as a link in the great chain of creation and causation, so that each person is seen in his true relations as an essential part of the whole, whose life must be made to serve the larger and continuing life of the whole. Therefore it is that the man and woman who in peace time fear or ignore the primary and vital duties and the high happiness of family life, who dare not beget and bear and rear the life that is to last when they are in their graves, have broken the chain of creation, and have shown that they are unfit for companionship with the souls ready for the Great Adventure.

Others Are to be Pitied.

"The wife of a fighting soldier at the front recently wrote as follows to the mother of a gallant boy, who at the front had fought in high air like an eagle, and, like an eagle, fighting had died: "I write these few lines—not of condolence for who would dare to pity you?—but of deepest sympathy to you and yours as you stand in the shadow which is the early side of those clouds of glory in which your son's life has just passed. Many will envy you that when the call to sacrifice came you were not found among the paupers to whom no gift of life worth offering had been entrusted. They are the ones to be pitied, not we whose dearest are jeopardizing their lives unto the death in the high places of the field. I hope my two sons will live as worthily and die as greatly as yours.'

"There spoke one dauntless soul to another! America is safe while her daughters are of this kind; for their lovers and their sons cannot fail as long as beside the hearthstones stand such wives and mothers. And we have many, many such women; and their men are like unto them.

"No nation can be great unless its sons and daughters have in them the quality to rise level to the needs of heroi edays. No army was ever great unless its soldiers possessed the fighting edge. So likewise the citizenship of any country is worthless unless in a crisis it snows the spirit of the two million Americans who in this mighty war have eagerly come forward to serve under the banner of the Stars, afloat and ashore, and of the other millions who would now be beside them over seas if the chance had been given them; and yet such spirit will in the long run avail nothing unless in the years of peace the average man and average woman of the duty-performing type realize that the highest of all duties, the one essential duty, is the duty of perpetuating the family life, based on the mutual love and respect of the one man and the woman and on their purpose to rear the healthy and fine-souled children whose coming into life means that the family and therefore the nation shall continue in life and shall not end in a sterile death.

"The Only Way" or "C'est la guerre."

A Canadian soldier stood moodily on the banks of an icy stream, somewhere in what has been called "Sunny" France. Its black water lapped the steep clay banks with weird, whispering noises. Despair was written deeply on the man's face Hope had fled from his soul! So has many an unfortunate lingered one final moment on the tragic banks of the Seine.

But this river—how cold! Wrung with indecision, the man shivered as he contemplated the light flickering across the ripples. How wretched to be found so! If Madame had only been kind, instead of refusing him so coldly. Now nothing remained, but the river. Well, thank God, the dregs of his once strong courage would suffice for this deed. He would show them all.

"If the old lady won't heat any water, I'll simply have to wash here," he exclaimed, as he took the plunge. "Ugh! B-r-r-r!"

Checkmated.

The workers at Henry Ford's Canadian plant determined recently to strike for higher wages, contradicting the well advertised idea that to be a Ford employe is to attain the millennium. Before the plan could be carried out, the works were closed and the prospective strikers summarily discharged.

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot wafer and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

Captured an Aviator.

How a captain of the Canadian Forestry Corps captured an aviator and plane is told me by his comrades. He was awakened at midnight by the hum of a machine over the clearing where his hut was, and rushing out into the moonlight, clad in brilliant hued pyjamas, topboots and armed with revolver, he saw a large plane evidently in difficulties. The machine just managed to dodge the tops of the trees and circled round looking for a better landing. The Forestry officer followed through the woods until it came to earth half a mile away.

He arrived as the pilot was extricating himself, and in fluent German backed by the point of the revolver, called on the aviator to hold up his hands, and with visions of honors and awards marched his prisoner back, plying him with questions in German, to which he could only get staccato replies of Ya, Nein. They arrived at the mess, where other officers in uniform were, and the captive looked in surprise and asked in English:

"Are you British?" On the affirmative answer, he delightfully declared:

"Well, I'm French," and to prove it he pulled off his leather flying overalls, and showed a light blue uniform.

"I thought he was German," he exclaimed, pointing to the pyjama-clad captor. The mistake was soon forgotten in the hospitality of the camp, and next day the Forestry Corps salved the machine.

NEWELL SUFFERED FOR TWENTY YEARS

Tanlac Restores Health And He Has Gained Ten Pounds.

"It's a positive fact that Tanlac entirely relieved me of a stomach trouble from which I had suffered for twenty years, and not only that but I have gained ten pounds since starting on it," recently said James J. Newell, of 82 Alexander Street, who has lived in Toronto all his life and is well known here.

"I suffered with chronic gastritis and a catarrhal condition of my stomach for twenty years or more," he continued, "and although I took all kinds of medicines and special prescriptions nothing did me any good but Tanlac. I had no appetite and couldn't relish a thing I would eat. Almost before I would get up from the table my food would begin to sour and I could feel the gas forming and pressing up around my heart, and I would sometimes bloat up so I could hardly get my breath. I always had a dull, heavy pain in the pit of my stomach and at times felt a terrible burning sensation just as if my stomach was raw and inflamed. Many a time I would have spells of nausea when for days at a time I couldn't retain a thing on my stomach, and I would be in so much agony at night that I couldn't rest. I lost weight, had no life nor strength about me and just felt miserable all the time.

"As everybody seemed to be putting in a good word for Tanlac I decided to try it and it has certainly fixed me up all right. I have a splendid appetite, relish all my food and have no trouble at all with gas or sour stomach. That acid condition has been corrected, the catarrhal condition relieved and my stomach is in better shape than it has been in twenty years. I am putting on flesh and improving in every way, and although I never had much faith in medicines I am glad to endorse Tanlac, and will tell anybody who wants to call and see me just how Tanlac straightened me out."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

A Canadian Homestead

THE typical homestead of the Canadian prairie is open to the four winds of heaven. It is possible there is a road leading to it, but one should not rely upon that. The ocular evidences of a thoroughfare are not everything in this great, level land. It would be safer to accept the friendly guide of a compass than to be deluded by the path which, now beaten, now dim, here wide and there merging into the ploughed furrows of the "fields," may bob up again by a swamp, or else disappear altogether in the tender haze of the horizon line. The homestead can be seen miles away, a fixed though minute point; the "road," on the other hand, makes no pretense to constancy or permanency.

The homesteader who built the house on the treeless, virgin prairie, or who intends to build one, usually hires himself out to an established farmer in a kind of preliminary apprenticeship. This hiring is one of the essential steps in developing his qualifications. He has to get his hand in, to increase his wherewithal, to acquire the practical knowledge requisite for working his land. As a "homesteader," he has secured a tract of unappropriated land not exceeding 160 acres, on condition of settlement, cultivation and continuous occupancy as a home by him for a definite period, and the payment of certain sums. His initial task is to "break" the prairie, so that the soil can be penetrated alike by sun and frost and transformed into a light, friable mold. So one day, fortified by the hard experience which has helped him to adapt himself to his primitive environment, he gathers to himself some household goods, and probably accompanied and assisted by a wife, treks for the one spot on the lonely prairie which henceforth, for some years, is destined to be his promised land. His other possessions, of the portable kind, have the same practical character, to say the least. He must have a waggon, and a pair of oxen or horses, and on to the waggon he loads the greater part of his future home and what is to go therewith. A more incongruous "load" could hardly be imagined. Stovepipes may protrude from the midst of bedding, baskets and lanterns cling like barnacles to the strange-looking "craft." The walls and roof of the new house may be slung, by means of lashings, to the sides just above the springs, while the lowly domestic broom probably sticks up at a rakish angle above the litter at the rear, as if symbolical of that temper which has made a clean and triumphant sweep of all the social encumbrances of the past. For a number of years the homesteader will be called upon to make a sacrifice of almost everything he holds dear, for the sake of this great adventure. The teeming world, the humble fireside, kith and kin, known and loved ways, have been left behind, that he may win his birthright to the soil and gain what, after all, must at times seem to him like a phantom freedom.

A few weeks later his first crude home has arisen on the prairie. There is no architecture to speak of. The shelter is little more than a door and a window with some clapboards arranged rectangularly around them. Owing to the race with time and the hurry to conquer the earth, the ends of the clapboards are not sawed off. The stovepipe now stands like a useless pole above the humble wooden roof. Water barrels and sacks are littered about. There is a grinding wheel, and a bench. Probably there is a tent to relieve the solitude of the shack. There may be a hencoop and a woodpile. A trail, newly-made, may run left and right from the lowly threshold and lose itself in the field. But ploughed furrows are sure to be everywhere, to come up to the door and almost touch it, for nothing must run to waste. Where everything, the man, his cattle, his wife, must yield of their utmost, there is no room for such frivolities as yards and gardens, or hedges or flowers, or lanes and trees. Is not the railroad only two hours' ride away, the schoolhouse a short twenty miles distant, the big town of the prairies a scant day's journey?

It will, of course, be two years before the first crop is garnered, another year, perhaps, before the first rude shanty, with some improvements, will give place to the comfortable farmhouse with its barn, machine shed, granaries, pig pens, and luxury of luxuries, the telephone! And another five years after that? The homesteader rests for a moment over his plough as he pictures in his mind's eye the coming town with stores and churches, the paved roads and the political caucus, his election to a seat in the local Legislature and, it may be, his final return to the beloved beaten ways of life which he left when he set out in search of the heritage of the prairies.

Crazed Cow Causes Panic.

While a herd of cattle was being unloaded at Orangeville recently one of the cows apparently went mad, stampeding through the village streets, attacking everyone encountered. Miss Street and Mrs. John Richardson were gored and seriously injured while Miss Eleanor Williams and Mr. J. B. Irwin had narrow escapes.

Sad Ending for Hero.

Lieut. Alex. McClintock, of Lexington, Ky., who went out with the 87th Canadian Battalion, won the D.C.M., and later wrote "Best o' Luck," has committed suicide at New York.

Straw Hats for Firemen.

St. Thomas' firemen have petitioned for straw hats for the summer and the council is thinking over the request, some of the aldermen fearing that the hats might catch fire.

Farewell to Historic Home.

Sarnia urgently needs a society to inculcate appreciation of the value of historic landmarks, as evidenced by the fact that the old Mackenzie home is now being torn down. It has been inseparably identified with the early history of Lambton County since the days of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie's premiership.

Claim Band Is Nuisance.

Declaring that the health of their children is adversely affected by the practicing and playing of the Highland Cadets' brass band at Lord Roberts' School, Vancouver, ratepayers are asking that the Board of Education suppress the band.

Pioneer Family Among Heirs.

The family of the late George Wishart Gairdner, one of the pioneers of Edmonton, are among the heirs, with Colin Campbell Robertson-Glasgow, Field Marsahl Sir Douglas Haig and other notables, to the great Gairdner estate in Scotland.

Noted Canadian.

Dr. James Douglas, philanthropist, mining engineer, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Phelps, Dodge corporation, died at his home in New York on June 26th, in his 81st year. Dr. Douglas gave away large sums of money for educational and charitable purposes, but his greatest gift was probably made to the General Memorial Hospital of New York of three and three-quarter grammes of radium, valued at about $375,000, to be used for all time in that hospital in cancer and other work. This radium represented the work of the National Radium Institute for years in the west on carnatite ores.

Dr. Douglas was born in Quebec, Nov. 4, 1837. His father, Dr. James Douglas, was a surgeon of repute, and the first to introduce modern treatment of insanity into Lower Canada, as the founder of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum, in the management of which for some time his son, James, participated.

He left Canada in 1875 to take charge of the metallurgical operations of the Chemical Copper Co., a concern operating at Phoenixville, Pa., where he was first to separate, on a commercial scale, the precious metals from the copper by the electrolytic method of refining.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizies Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Sour Gassy Stomachs and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little bisurated magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach, which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

Too Familiar.

A country hotel, a good deal frequented by motorists, took in a showman and his performing bear, and one morning the bear escaped from the stable. Everybody fled before the animal. The hotel man, however, pursued it courageously. It entered the hotel, mounted the stairway, pushed open a bedroom door and vanished. The hotel man, close behind, heard from the bedroom an angry exclamation in a feminine voice and the words: "George, dear, how often have I forbidden you to come into my room without knocking—and in your automobile coat, too!"

A Hard Loser.

"Ignorance, sheer ignorance," said a government official, discussing an attack by a war expert.

"This armchair critic," he went on, "is as ignorant as the lady who got up at the S. P. C. A. meeting and said:

"'Can't something be done, dear friends—oh, can't something be done—to prevent horses from being scratched? The horse is man's noblest friend, and yet we read about its being scratched almost every day in the papers. The process must be very painful.

"'Scratching a horse! Oh, dear friends, I'm sure it is a cruel and painful thing to do, for my husband attended the races last Saturday, and all Saturday night in his sleep he groaned and moaned and went on awfully about a horse that had been scratched. If you could have heard him, dear friends! His grief would have melted a heart of stone.'"

Spooners Are a Nuisance.

A Windsor citizen writes to the Record of that city: "Would the young lady who lives on the right hand side of Elgin street be so kind as to stop in front of her own home and do her spooning there with the gentleman who brings her home late at night and spoons until two in the morning in a grey-topped automobile, as by so doing she will greatly oblige the residents in the locality, who will get a great deal more sleep."

Teachers' Salaries.

If "painfully low salaries" are paid teachers now, as Hon. Dr. Cody says, what must they have been a few years ago? There is not really so much advance, however, as there seems to be, and it is well that the Minister of Education has a proper appreciation of the subject. If a teacher just fresh from the Normal School gets a salary of $550 per annum she can't get her board for probably twice what it would have cost her a few years ago, and everything she has to buy costs her much more than it would some time ago. Then as to male teachers, though there has been an advance in salaries it is probably not equal to the increase in the cost of living. There will be people both in cities and towns, however, who will complain of the high cost of education. Education of the right kind implies a teacher of the right kind. A good teacher is worth a good price.

An Extensive Yawn.

Two soldiers in the front-line trench were watching an enemy plane circle overhead.

Second Soldier—For the love of Mike, man, shut your mouth. Fritz might thing it's a dugout, and shell it!

Hatchery Provides Many Fish.

The Dominion Fish Hatchery at Belleville has in the past four years provided for distribution in restocking provincial lakes and streams no fewer than 21,539,000 salmon trout fry, the total being made up: 1915, 1,500,000; 1916, 6,900,000; 1917, 6,089,000; and 1918, 7,050,000.

Motor Had Through Ticket.

A young lady of Fredericton who had just learned to drive a motor car essayed to return the car to the garage recently, but failed to gauge accurately its impetus, the result being that she passed completely, if not neatly, through the end of the building.

OUR SHARE IN THE WAR

STORY OF THE C.E.F. TOLD IN BRIEF.

How a Nation That Knew Nothing of the Art of Fighting Raised an Army to Aid the Motherland and to Assist In the Protection of the Democracy of the World.

ENLISTMENTS in the Canadian Expeditionary Force of all sorts from the outbreak of the war to June 30th, 1918, were 552,601. This number was diminished by wastage in Canada before sailing. The number who had actually gone overseas by June 30th, 1918, was 385,523.

The movement overseas by years has been as follows:

Before Dec. 31st, 1914....	30,999
Calendar Year, 1916	84,334
Calendar Year, 1916	165,553
Calendar Year, 1917	63,536
Jan. 1st to June 30th, 1918	38,101

Of the foregoing 26,537 were recruited by the Military Service Act.

For all practical purposes Canada was without an army before war broke out. In the pre-war months of 1914 there was a permanent force of about 3,000 men, with no reserves; a lightly trained militia numbering about 60,000; and a confidential plan all ready in the army archives for the raising and sending to Europe of a Canadian contingent—if the menace of Germany materialized into a real danger.

All the world knows the story of how the first infantry division was raised and sent across the Atlantic in the early autumn of 1914. A second division appeared in France in September, 1915. The third division was formed in the first two months of 1916; the fourth joined the army in August, 1916, and numerous corps troops and line of communication units were added. In the late summer of 1916 the Canadian Army Corps had reached its full development with four divisions. A cavalry brigade appeared in France in 1915. Since then Canadian effort has been directed towards keeping the existing formation up to establishment.

Maintaining four divisions, corps troops and a cavalry brigade, in France, means that 125,000 seasoned men must be kept in the front line and lines of communication with around 25,000 more men at the advanced base for the purpose of keeping the fighting formations, line of communications, and auxiliary units up to strength. Early in 1918 the number of Canadians in France was near 150,000.

The foregoing outlines the composition of the first of the three main divisions of the present military organization of Canada. It is the Fighting Echelon.

The total casualties sustained by the Canadian Expeditionary Force up to 30th June, 1918, were 159,084. The details are:

Killed in action	27,040
Died of wounds	9,280
Wounded	113,007
Died of disease	2,259
Prisoners of war	2,774
Presumed dead	5,342
Missing	384
Total	159,084

Of the wounded and sick between 30,000 and 40,000 returned to France for further service. Between 50,000 and 60,000 have been returned to Canada, wounded, medically unfit, or otherwise unavailable.

By periods the casualties were:

From beginning to Dec. 31st, 1915	14,495
Calendar Year, 1916	74,648
Jan. 1st to June 30th, 1918..	14,043

In connection with these sad figures the battle honors won by Canadian soldiers may be given. Omitting all but specifically fighting decorations, the total is: Distinguished Service Order, 413; bar to Distinguished Service Order, 14; Military Cross, 1,368; bar to Military Cross, 59; mentioned in despatches, 1,547; Royal Red Cross, 1st class. 30; Royal Red Cross, 2nd class, 101.

The Second Echelon, in England, comprises the training, equipment, organizing and administering, hospital, evacuation and miscellaneous establishments. Its principal duties are:

(a) To receive recruits forwarded from Canada, and to organize, train and forward them to the advanced base in France.

(b) To harden, train and forward to the advanced base wounded and sick who recover sufficiently to be fit again to go to France.

(c) To return to Canada men who by reason of wounds, sickness or other causes, are unavailable for further service; or who are needed in Canada for instructional or other duties.

(d) To perform certain services in the United Kingdom, such as forestry operations.

(e) To carry on the hospital and other services necessary for (b) and (c).

The Third Echelon, in Canada, is occupied with the procuring of recruits, their equipment and preliminary organization, and their preliminary training. To it also are attached the troops needed for home service and for the instruction of recruits who are being prepared to go overseas. At present the troops engaged in home service number about 12,000 — including the men now garrisoning St. Lucia, W.I.

Large numbers of men have been furnished for the Allied cause outside the C. E. F. The Royal Air Force is a notable example. Military reasons forbid mentioning the actual number of men who have joined alike the Royal Air Force, and its predecessors the Royal Naval Air Service and the Royal Flying Corps. Canadian universities have given several hundred young men who have been given commissions in the Imperial army. The Royal Military College since the war began has furnished 152 officers to the Imperial army, 93 to the Canadian Permanent Force, and 94 to the Canadian Expeditionary Force. One in every four of the 900 cadets from the college who have been at the front have been decorated. Canada has also furnished several hundred doctors and veterinarians, 2,000 nurses and hundreds of motor drivers for the Imperial army. And 200 Canadian officers have been loaned to the United States for instructional purposes. Several thousands of Poles, Serbians and Montenegrins have been raised in Canada by the Military Department and sent overseas to fight with their compatriots.

There were in Canada on June 30th, 1918, Canadian Expeditionary Force troops to the number of 61,143; in addition to these there were 5,900 embarked but not yet sailed from Canada; the men in Canada were being sent overseas as rapidly as ships could be procured to transport them.—Lt.-Col. Vincent Massey.

FIRST BREAK IN CIRCUS.

One Member of Bishop's Squadron Reported Missing.

The first break in the happy comradeship of heroes in the fighting formation and mess room of the Bishop Circus has been made with the report that Lieut. Walter R. Henderson, an original member of this young but celebrated corps, is missing. Lieut. Henderson, R.A.F., was 21 years of age and a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Henderson, of St. Catharines and Toronto.

The missing aviator was one of the Empire's great stunt flyers, and was attached to the new formation of Major W. A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O. (with bar), M.C., D.F.C., after that world's champion of the air had seen him in a great competition which was graced by the presence of H.R.H. the Princess Louise. Earlier he had been engaged in piloting machines across the Channel.

That Major Bishop sought merit first of all in selecting the men for his supersquadron, which has swept the western aerial front this season, is evidenced by the career of Lieut. Henderson, whose exact fate is unfortunately unknown.

Enlisting in Toronto in the Mechanical Transport, Lieut. Henderson, then Driver Henderson, spent several months in the neighborhood of Albert in carrying munition to the guns. He was engaged in this work within six weeks of leaving his work as a munitions worker. Later he trained for the flying service in England and became very proficient in stunt work, although his duties in taking new planes to the hangars in France were prosaic enough.

Major Bishop was present at a great field day of the airmen to receive a bronze decoration as a tribute to his air triumphs when he took notice of Lieut. Henderson's skill in competition. Lieut. Henderson was one of a team of two Canadian aviators contesting for first place in the day's honors with two English flying men, the stunts being rather for the benefit of the royal guest and the crowd than for the premier aviator.

The new squadron commander picked his men then and there, and for the past three months Lieut. Henderson has been with the Bishop formation in France, from the very first until missing after the flight of July 15. The disquieting report was sent to his mother in St. Catharines. Hope is still held out that he has fallen safely into German hands, although no particulars have been secured by the parents.

Mr. Henderson, sr., was for a number of years connected with the Polson Iron Works in Toronto and is now superintendent of the McKinnon Dash Co., engaged in munition work. The son was educated at Bishop Ridley College, St. Catharines.

Our War Orders.

According to figures compiled by the Monetary Times, Canada's war orders from the outbreak of war to the end of 1917 totalled $1,812,000,000, and during 1917 the value of munition orders totaled $338,000,000. The volume of munition orders placed up to September 30 was $262,000,000, of shipbuilding orders, $46,730,000, and of all orders since the outbreak of the war, including shipbuilding, $972,000,000. The number of people engaged in the munitions industry in Canada was approximately 225,000.

How Labor Unions Grow.

The seventh annual report of the labor organizations of Canada shows that where as in 1911 the total of trades unionists in Canada was 133,132, in 1917 it had grown to 204,630. There are now 1,974 unions in the Dominion, of whose members 27,130 are overseas 26,438 as volunteers and 692 as reservists.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

"I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Mr. W. E. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

Strength

Life's greatest assets are Health and Strength and without these existence becomes intolerable.

The Human Body, under the best of conditions, is a fragile structure, easily susceptible to climatic conditions, over-heating, exertion, mental and physical emotions. This subject requires constant attention if health and strength are to be continually maintained. The most sensible method of preserving health is to consume food which produces it. The food which produces health is that which contains Carbo-Hydrates, Proteins and Fats. COCOA is a palatable liquid food containing, when mixed with milk, all these necessary substances in a form that is not injurious to the weakest digestion. For the easiest and most pleasurable way to obtain just the right kind of nourishment the body needs, drink Cocoa. For the best and quickest results drink Cowan's Perfection Cocoa.

TOO GENEROUS AND HIS BIRDS ESCAPE

Cornwall License Inspector Has Truck and the Firewater.

CORNWALL, Sept. 19 — John Uren, local license inspector, tried to hold up a couple of men who were going through the village of Moulinette with a Studebaker motor truck, presumably filled with egg crates.

The men refused to stop so Mr. Uren secured a car and overtook the pair for whom he had been on the lookout for a cuple of weeks.

When he caught up with them they threw up their hands and acknowledged they had a quantity of liquor stored under the egg crates.

Mr. Uren brought them and the truck to Cornwall and took them to a local hoted, where the consignment of "eggs" was locked up for safekeeping. Being of a rather affable disposition the two strangers were allowed to occupy a room in the hotel instead of being placed in the cells. Between keeping an eye on his men and on the garage containing the booze Mr. Uren had a busy night of it, and between trips the two birds rewarded his generosity by sliding down a rope from their room and made off, leaving the officer with the truck and stock of wet goods, but the men have not since been seen.

The trusck is a large one, probably worth $2,000 or $2,500, and it is said the liquor is worth between $500 and $600. The man who was running the car gave his name as Andrews, of Montreal, and the other as Lafevre, of Prescott. They said they were taking the eggs to Kingston. They offered Uren $400 to let them continue on their journey.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE PIECE APRON.

In this age of the efficient housewife it is not sufficient to have just kitchen aprons—one should have various kinds for different requirements, such as cooking aprons, clothespin aprons, child's aprons, &c. A very clever dust cleaning apron which is marvellously simple in construction is illustrated in No. 8863. The apron only requires 1¼ yards of 36 inch material, and it is cut out in the one piece, without any seams. There are four buttons and the two narrow straps go over the top ones, cross at the back and are brought around to the front, where they button to give the effect of a belt.

The lady's one piece apron pattern No. 8863 is cut in three sizes—36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 1¾ yards 27 inch; 1⅝ yards 30 inch, or 1¼ yards 36 inch material with ⅛ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

Lenine, Trotsky and Company

Or the Betrayal of Russia.

Series of Communications Between Bolsheviki and German Government Reveal the Relationship Between the Two Parties.

Note—Both circulars bear the penciled notation that the German secret service bureau at Petrograd has received there, signed A. G| Asfer, the cipher signature of Major Luberts, head of the bureau as will be shown in document No. 5. The German intent here was to remove from the records of the old Russian government the evidence, first, that Germany was beginning in June, 1914, its active preparations for the war that surprised the world in August, 1914, and second, to remove the evidence of its responsibility for incendiarism and explosions in the United States, a country with which Germany was then at peace. The result was to give new evidence of the truth of the charges.

Have original of protocol and have printed circulars.

G. G. S. Nachrichten bureau, section R. No. 35) January 17, 1918.

To the Commissar of Foreign Affairs:

The section has received exact information that the leaders of the Socialist party now ruling Russia, through Messrs. Fuerstenberg and Radak, are in correspondence with Messrs. Scheidmann and Parvus regarding the destruction of the traces of the business relations of the party with the imperial government. We also know that this demand was caused by the demand of leading groups of German Socialists, who saw in the said communications a danger to the cause of world socialism. By order of the staff, I have the honor to request the submitting of this question to special discussion in the presence of the representative of our staff and Mr. Von Schoenemann.

For the head of the department: M. Waal.

Note—The world penalty, therefore, was apparent to some Germans. Of the personalities named in the letter, Scheidmann, the leader of the German government supporting wing of the Socialist party if the most notable. Once before he has been named in relation to the "Business Relations" of the Russian Bolsheviki with the Imperial government, writing a letter from Berlin August 25, 1917 to a "Mr. Olberg" in which he stated that 150,000 kroners had been placed at Olberg's disposal at Feurstenberg's office through the the Nia bank.

Document No. 18. Now Feurstenberg by this time, January, in Petrograd at Smolny, is trying to help Scheidenmann in covering up old trails. Radek is a clever Polish Austrian Jew who came from Switzerland with Lenine. Secret Department No. 31.

To the Council of People's Commissars: In accordance with the agreement which took place in Kronstadt in July of the present year between officials of our general staff and leaders of the Russian revolutionary army and democracy, Messrs. Denin, Trotsky, Raskolnikov and Dybanko, the Russian division of our general staff operating in Finland is ordering to Petrograd officers for the disposal of the information department of the staff. At the head of the Petrograd division will be the following officers who use the Russian language perfectly and who are acquainted with Russian conditions. Maj. Lubers, cipher signature Agasfer; Maj. von Boelke, cipher signature Schoet; Maj. Bayermeister, cipher signature Ber; Lieut. Hartwig, cipher signature Henrich.

The espionage department in accordance with the agreement with Messrs. Lenine, Trotsky and Zenoleff will have the surveillance of the foreign embassies and military missions on the counter revolutionary movement and also will perform the espionage and counter-espionage work on the internal fronts, for which purpose agents will be assigned to the espionage cities. Coincidentally it is announced that at the disposal of the government of people's commissars are assigned consultants; to the ministry of foreign affairs, Mr. von Schoenemann, and to the ministry of finance, Mr. von Toll, chief of the Russian division German General Staff O. Rausch, adjutant U. Wolff. (And below on the same letter) To the commissariat on foreign affairs. The oficers indicated in this paper have been before the military revolution committee and have agreed on conditions with Muravieff, Boié and Danishevski with regard to their mutual activities. They have all come under the direction of the committee. The consultants will appear as called for Chairman Military Revolutionary committee, Council of Workers and Soldiers deputies, A Joffe, secy., F. Krushavitch

Note—Here is the working compact If Rausch was then in Berlin he presumably came immediately afterwards to Petrograd. It is more probable that the letter was written in Finland than in Berlin. In some other letterheads on which Berlin is printed the word is run through with a pen. Stationery was hard to get in Petrograd Maj. Luberts became head of the information or intelligence bureau (Nachrichten Bureau). Kronstadt was the midsummer headquartere of Lenine Raskolnikoff has been referred to in connection with the project to sell the Russian fleet to Germany. Dybenko was the commissar of the fleet, the naval minister, a driving man and keen witted. Zinovieff is the president of the Petrograd soviet, during the winter the most powerful of the local bodies of the Russian soviets He is Jewish and well educated. Joffe, in the letter of Bolsheviki acceptance of the German compact, against stands forth for what he is, the spokesman after Lenine in all matters of supreme importance to Germany.

Confidential.

To the commissar of foreign affairs: By the order of the local department of the German general staff, the intelligence section has informed us of the names and the characteristics of the main candidates for the re-election of the central executive committee. The general staff orders us to insist on the election of the following people: Trotsky, Lenin, Zinovieff, Kameneff, Joffe, Sverdiov, Lunacharkis, Kollontal, Fabrizius, Martov, Steklov, Golman, Frunze, Lander, Milk, Preobjajenski, Sollers, Studer, Golberg, Avanesov, Volodarski, Raskolnikov, Stuchka, Peters and Neubat. Please inform the president of the council of the general staff's wish. Head of the department, Agsfer, Adjutant Henrich.

Note—The endorsements are "copy handed to chairman council workmen and soldiers deputies N 955."

Deliver to Comrade Jinovieff and to secret department."

Signature illegible, January 12 Russian calendar, "all in the early dissolution of the constituent assembly. The election came at the end of the week and was perfunctory re-election of practically the whole former executive committee of commissars. Lacking the exact list I can nevertheless state that the present executive committee was drafted from this group. The name there suprising to me is that of Martov, the leaders of the Memshiviks, though it is my recollection that this party of opposition was allowed representation.

Martov is an able writer, was associated with Trotsky in his Paris journalistic venture, but was supposed to have split with him in Russia. The evidence that he is still agreeable to Germany is pertinent. Madam E. Kollontai, the only woman on this list, was the commissar of public welfare. She was sent abroad for foreign propaganda in February, but did not get beyond Scandinavia and later returned to Russia. Kameneff who went out of Russia with Kollontai also sought to return, but was arrested by the Finnish White Guards, (Not the Germans) on the Aland islands, and his release was subject to negotiations. He is Trotsky's brother-in-law. Sverdlov was temporary chairman of the All-Russian soviet. Lunacharski is commissar of education.

Steklov is editor of the official paper Isvestia. Volodarsky, who has lived in the United States, was in close confidence with Lenine. He was killed in Moscow the last week in June. Agasfar, who delivered the order in behalf of Rausch, is Major Luberts. Have photograph of letter.

British and Canadians in U.S.A.

ON September 28th the work of British and Canadian Railway Mission in the United States automatically comes to a finish under the new treaty which has just been signed between Canada and the United States. Col. J. S. Dennis, who was given leave of absence from the C. P. R. to take an active and leading part in this mission, and has been made a C. M. G. in recognition of his services, has recently been addressing a series of meetings in the Middle West, with very notable results in the shape of recruits. His explanation of the treaty and of the work of the Mission have been widely quoted in the United States and are reproduced here:—

"Before the United States entered the war, and while you were a neutral country, it was illegal under the provisions of your Criminal Code for any of the allied nations to recruit their citizens resident in the United States for military service. I am not committing any breach of confidence now in saying that in spite of this provision certain Britishers were enlisted in the United States and went forward to fight, and, as you know, some over-zealous persons in San Francisco were imprisoned for breach of the law but were released after the United States entered the war.

"Very shortly after the United States entered the war, the Criminal Code was amended so as to give the Secretary of War the right to issue a permit to properly accredited commissions of any of the allied countries to come into the United States and recruit their citizens for military service, and it was under a permit of that kind that the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission came here in June, 1917, and have been recruiting Britons and Canadians since that date. When this Mission was established, the information available from your last census indicated that there were about 400,000 Britons and Canadians resident in the United States. When your Government called upon all men between 21 and 31, irrespective of nationality, to register, the returns showed that 286,000 Britons and Canadians were included in the ten million men who registered, and the names and addresses of these men were given us by the Draft Boards and carefully card indexed by us. The military age in Great Britain and Canada is from 18 to 45, so it is quite safe to assume that if we add to the 286,000 men between 21 and 31, who registered, those between 18 and 21 and 31 and 45, we are safe in saying that there were 350,000 Britons and Canadians of military age in the United States, and these are the men we have been trying to reach through the Recruiting Mission.

"Now let me tell you what we have been able to do through the Recruiting Mission since it was established. We opened recruiting depots in all the main centres, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. We asked these resident in the United States to come forward and meet the agonizing need of the countries of their birth for men to win the war. What has been the result? Fourteen months of concentrated effort and hard work has induced some 65,000 Britons and Canadians to volunteer up to last week. Of that number we have been able to accept and dispatch to the armies about 42,000. I said a moment ago that there were 350,000 Britons and Canadians of military age. 65,000 have volunteered. What has become of the remaining 285,000? It is for the purpose of dealing with this large number who have failed to respond to their countries call that this treaty has been entered into.

"Why did these Britons and Canadians come to the United States? They came because they thought the opportunities here were better than at home. You welcomed them—you gave them every chance to share with you the bountiful resources with which nature has blessed your wonderful country—they have been allowed to take advantage of all the privileges of citizenship, but have not become citizens, and in that they failed in their duty to you and to the flag that has protected them. 285,000 of these men are living in your midst and have not responded to the call of the country of their nationality. They say Great Britain and Canada can't reach us because we are in the United States and Uncle Sam can't get us because we are Britons or Canadians, so why should we worry. Well, this treaty was entered into to meet that situation and now they are going to be given every reason to worry.

"This treaty is really an historical event. It is true that a treaty on offices with officers and non-commissioned officers who have been on active service, and most of them have been wounded. We brought military units with bands from Canada. We have covered the country with posters; have sent appeals through the mails on three different occasions; have carried advertisements in the papers and have held public meetings and recruiting rallies without end—all for the purpose of carrying the urgent appeal of Great Britain and Canada to their citizens similar lines was entered into a short time ago between Great Britain, France and Russia, but it has remained for this war to make history in the completion of treaties between allied countries, under the provisions of which the citizens of one allied country resident in another allied country can be forced to do military service in the army of the country of their residence, instead of in that of the country of their nationality.

"The treaty provides that a period of sixty days is granted during which the Britons and Canadians in the United States can volunteer. That period expires at midnight on September 28th next; sixty days from the date of ratification of the treaty on July 29th last. Every Briton or Canadian who volunteers during that period will be given a certificate if he is found medically unfit, and this certificate will be exchanged for an exemption certificate, issued by the British Ambassador at Washington, which certificate will be recognized by the United States as exempting the holder from military service.

"Provision is also made for exemption during the sixty day period by the Ambassador for certain specified causes, as set out in the regulations, and practically similar provisions exist regarding American citizens resident in Great Britain and Canada; these cases being dealt with by the American Ambassador in England, and the American Consul-General in Canada. You will, therefore, see that the treaty is reciprocal and perfectly fair in its provisions.

"Now, what is going to happen to the Britons and Canadians who have not volunteered or been exempted when midnight strikes on September 28th next? I will tell you! From that date and for all time thereafter they and their children and grandchildren after them will be branded in the eyes of the world as men without a country—duty dodgers, duty shirkers and slackers, who would not respond to the agonizing appeal for help from the country of their birth and nationality, and who had to be turned over through the provisions of a treaty to the country of their residence to be forcefully made to do their duty, and our sincere hope is that early in the morning of September 29th, Uncle Sam will take every one of these Britons and Canadians by the back of the neck and march them down the street to the nearest military camp. Why am I justified in saying these hard things? Well I look back to the sacrifice made by Britain and Canada during the past four years and the lavish way in which Britons and Canadians have shed their blood in the cause, and then I look on these Britons and Canadians here who have made no sacrifice; have enjoyed peace and plenty, high wages and comfortable living, and I ask you is it fair that while your boys are going to the front as volunteers or under draft regulations these British and Canadian slackers shall be allowed to sit in peace and fill the positions made vacant by the departure of your sons, and to act as if the country of their birth has no call on their services in its desperate need?

"Is there any Englishman within sound of my voice who, after the 28th of September next, will ever again presume to call himself an Englishman and thus attempt to share in the standing given that name throughout the world by those English regiments that have fought when they stood outnumbered fifty to one until they died?

"Can any Scotchman ever claim kinship with the land of the heather, knowing that the glens of Scotland are depleted of men up to fifty years of age to re-inforce those kilted battalions of the British army, who, in this, as in every other war, have been foremost in the fight?

"Is there any Welshman who can hope to face the hills of Wales and claim citizenship with men from those hills and valleys who, under the badge of the leek, are fighting in France?

"Can any Scotchman ever again claim the wrongs claimed by Ireland, presume to class himself with the men of the British Guards, the Connaught Rangers, the Munsters, the Inneskillings, and those other units of the fighting Irish race, and, finally, is there any Canadian who, after the 28th of September, will presume to head north and cross that imaginary boundary separating Canada from the United States and hope that they will be any welcome for him there, and that he will be allowed to share in the name "Canadian," now known throughout the world as signifying citizenship in a country that voluntarily sent three thousand miles to war, and on many a bloody battlefield proved that the name designated a virile nationality?

"I have endeavored to put the position of Britons and Canadians in the United States clearly before them and must leave the final decision to them. They must decide whether they are going to play a man's part or be forever ear-marked as men without a country and absolutely lacking in the red blood that we are justified in saying is recognized throughout the world as characterizing Britons.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Legal War Bride

By ELIZABETH FORREST

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Robert Peters, attorney at law, with a newspaper in one hand, a pen in the other, sat before his office desk, a very picture of perplexity. "Thunder" he finally exploded, dashed the pen onto the desk, and swerved around to his startled stenographer.

"What is the proper thing to write o an engaged girl?"

"It all depends on how well you know her."

"Humph! If I tell you all about it, will you help me with this matter of etiquette?"

"Agreed." And Mary Borden listened.

"Well, Ruth Hampton and I grew up together. She was a good pal and everybody's friend; she appealed to me because she had intellect and good nature. I always have liked girls who can really 'do' something.

"Then after both mother and dad were—gone, Ruth and her mother were like sister and mother to me. So when I took up law, it was with Ruth that I studied—and I do believe she could have passed the bar exams when I did, had she been so minded. There was never anything more than sincere friendship between us, so I have had no ties to draw me back to Morton during these busy years here in New York—it has been nearly three." He hesitated, but Mary Borden's twenty years in the business world had molded her sympathetic nature into a character by which harried men were ever inspired to confidence.

"But," he continued, "although I was fast forgetting Ruth, she was vividly brought to mind this morning. While reading my newspaper I chanced on a picture of her, and the announcement of her engagement. The picture doesn't look like the Ruth I used to know, but time, I suppose, does effect changes. Now, Miss Borden, the really funny part of my tale is this: I feel actually angry that Ruth has become engaged, and I've concluded that I'm what you

HOW THIS NERVOUS WOMAN GOT WELL

Told by Herself. Her Sincerity Should Convince Others.

Christopher, Ill.—"For four years I suffered from irregularities, weakness, nervousness, and was in a run down condition. Two of our best doctors failed to do me any good. I heard so much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others, I tried it and was cured. I am no longer nervous, am regular, and in excellent health. I believe the Compound will cure any female trouble."—Mrs. ALICE HELLER, Christopher, Ill.

Nervousness is often a symptom of weakness or some functional derangement, which may be overcome by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as thousands of women have found by experience.

If complications exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions in regard to your ailment. The result of its long experience is at your service.

night call, well—er—jealous! And thanks, awfully, but I've just decided that I'll not write her at all—she didn't send me a personal announcement."

"But is it reasonable to expect that of her? Do you write to her? Does she know where you are?"

Peters flushed. "Well," he grinned "you've got me in a corner. I believe it has been some eight or ten months since I last wrote."

"May I see that paper, please?"

"Certainly." Then Miss Borden busied herself some minutes in the reading of the article in question. She started to read it again. At a sudden exclamation from her Robert looked at her inquiringly.

"Where did you say you used to live?"

"Morton, Ky."

"But, look, this notice reads, 'Miss Ruth Hampton of Berkeley, Cal.,' so it can't be your Ruth!"

Robert snatched the paper eagerly from her and for a long time studied the cut. "No," he said at length "there can't possibly be two Ruth Hamptons who look sufficiently alike to be sisters.

"There has been time enough for them to have traveled clear around the world, for all my knowledge of Ruth and her mother; so without a doubt the simple truth is that they have gone to California to live."

He sat a while in troubled silence, and at last tried to fix his attention on some briefs. It was useless. His mind wandered continually; and he asked himself over and over "Why do I care, why do I care?" There could be but one answer!

At noon he lunched absent-mindedly. Before returning he visited a Western Union office and sent a telegram to the postmaster of Morton. Of course the message was an inquiry regarding Ruth. But his conclusions of the morning were confirmed by the answering wire, sent collect: "Ruth Hampton and mother left Morton last October. Whereabouts unknown." And it was now April! After some time spent in gloomy pensiveness he roused himself.

Robert Peters was not backboneless and given to mooning. Frequently, to be sure, he thought and wondered about Ruth; but "the world is full of a number of things"—and wise men keep busy. Robert was wise, hence oblivious, and not troubled by sleepless nights.

Clean-minded, red-blooded, energetic, Robert grew daily more alive to his country's needs. So by June he had enlisted, since, so he said, "the law schools are yearly turning out hundreds of young men as brilliant and as capable as I"—further arguments were lengthy, superfluous.

A few days before he was to leave for camp he had his last case, a short case, but rather difficult. There had been trouble getting a lawyer for the defense, so Robert did not know who was to play opposite him, who had the prosecution.

The trial lasted three days. The morning of the second day Miss Ruth Hampton, counsel for the defense, received a fragment bouquet and a note asking if Mr. Robert Peters might call that evening. Of course, for obvious reasons overlooked in Mr. Peters' haste, he "might not." The morning of the third day history was repeated. That night he called.

As the maid removed his coat a crackling within reminded him of something. When Ruth and her mother entered to greet him they found him seated stiffly, with a dingy, edge-worn newspaper across his knees. Their greetings were cordial, but Peters' embarrassment increased; his tongue was about as active as the limbs of an athlete who has been bed-ridden for some weeks. Mrs. Hampton, being of the same cloth as all tactful mothers, presently withdrew.

"Bob," Ruth demanded, "what on earth is that newspaper that you have been clutching so madly?" He handed it to her silently, the cut and article folded on top.

She glanced it hurriedly through and returned it. If Bob had looked he might have noticed a hope-raising twinkle in her hazel eyes; but being perverse and foolish, he was engaged in that universal occupation resorted to in times of stress; tracing the pattern in the carpet! His fingers closed absently over the proffered paper.

"Well?" from Ruth.

"Er—oh, yes—er—d-doesn't that mean y-you?" he finally exploded.

"Me? What, the Ruth Hampton mentioned in that notice? And if I were?"

"Then you are. I knew it! When are you to be married?"

"Married?" she echoed. "Robert, use reason. Do you suppose my fiance would allow me to run off to New York to dabble in law?"

"I beg your pardon, Ruth. I hate to ask, but is it—er—er—"

"A broken engagement?" she supplied. "No. Never been engaged in my life. But listen; I'll not tease you any more. The Ruth of Berkeley is my own cousin—my father's twin brother's daughter. You see, that accounts for our extraordinary likeness to each other. This brother ran away when he was eighteen, to the West evidently, but was never heard from; so I never knew I had such a relative until this Ruth's engagement was announced. Being curious, I wrote for information."

"But her name?"

"Father's mother's name was Ruth, and both boys named their only child for her. Hence the coincidence."

"I don't like coincidences. Don't tell me it was one that made you active in this murder case!"

"It wasn't. I passed the bar exams over a year ago; you surely aren't surprised at that! Last October I took an office in Syracuse."

"Ah, that's why—"

"Sh-h-h! And when I read about this case and the difficulty in getting a lawyer to defend the girl I was inclined to do it myself. What decided me was your being in it. I thought it would be rather much of a surprise, you neglectful boy!"

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Good-will value

Every Semi-ready Suit is tailored to give satisfaction to the wearer—made so good that it will earn and retain your good-will.

For nearly 25 years the makers of Semi-ready Clothes have followed that policy, to gain your good-will.

Five years ago, merger promoters offered the Semi-ready Company one million dollars for their good-will. The offer was declined.

Semi-ready Customers in Canada represent that million. It is their good-will.

Should a suit go wrong we would rather have that garment back than lose your good-will. That is the reason the label is in the pocket of all

WHAT COURAGE IS.

Definition Given by a Canadia Fighting Man.

The "stuff" that soldiers are made of is described in the following extract from an article by Lieut. Leo Archibald. This Canadian officer enlisted at the beginning of the war was wounded at Ypres, fought at Armentieres, Looe, and the Somme and is now at home recovering from wounds. He writes:

"Winter certainly measured out its full quota of hardships for us. On account of the impassable condition of communication trenches, our journeyings to and from the front line were reserved for the darkness. This condition increased our difficulties materially. The wounded, for instance, were almost invariably forced to remain in a cold, dirty, and water-logged trench until darkness arrived to obscure their passage out. One day, however, in order to give a badly wounded boy the benefit of his one chance in ten thousand that he had to recover, two of his chums decided to make the attempt to get him out in daylight to a dressing station. Stretchers could not be used on account of the sharp turns and narrowness of the trench, so the boy was placed on his rubber sheet, the two bearers grasping each of the four corners. The wounded chap's leg had been badly shattered above the knee, while his left arm and side had been liberally dosed with shrapnel. He was a large fellow, and the going was bad. Every few yards, owing to obstacles or to the fatigue of the bearers, it was necessary to put down the improvised stretcher, when the occupant's body from his shoulders downward would immediately sink out of sight into cold, soupy muck. Just what that boy suffered and just how many times a minute he died is not difficult to imagine, but we never heard a murmur.

"Arriving at the junction of the trench and a hedge, the little party laboriously climbed out and still more laboriously bore their comrade back to the expert attention which finally saved his life. No finer demonstration of self-sacrifice have I ever seen than the exhibiton of this wounded boy's two chums. They openly courted disaster every inch of that seven hundred yards back to the dressing station, and in the end their sterling courage and indomitable perseverance were crowned by success. I heard a senior officer remark on seeing the pitiful little procession go down the trench, 'That sort of thing will never learn the bitter taste of defeat, for it will never know when it's beaten.'

"It was this same indescribable 'stuff' for which I saw a little lance corporal receive a V.C. not many days later. The award, like many such, was posthumous. During a period of great stress this little chap, with his arm literally torn out by the roots, kept circulating among his men, encouraging them and using them to the best advantage. He died two hours later from loss of blood, still on the job when he could have sought the aid that might have kept him alive."

You Feel Fine

Fatigue is the result of poisons in the system, the waste matter resulting from the activities of life. The kidneys have failed to filter these poisons from the blood and you are tired.

But awaken the kidneys and liver by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you soon feel fine. The poisons are swept from the system, the pains and aches are gone and you are ready for work and for play.

Indians In France.

The American Indians in France quickly adjusted themselves to the conditions of the country. They soon became just as cunning as in their native western haunts. This is illustrated by an incident which occurred when the Germans were withdrawing across the Marne. Indian scouts were sent over the river to ascertain the German movements and other details.

At one crossing three Indians improvised a raft and chained it to the north side of the Marne. They hid the raft and then started on an exploring expedition. The Germans discovered the strange footprints on the river bank, and came upon the raft. They awaited the Indians' return. But, after reconnoitring, the Indians approached their hidden raft cautiously and scenting trouble made a hasty retreat.

The Germans recognized that the strange red men were not of their kind, and must therefore be an enemy and began firing. The Indians ran through the woods like deer, and finally struck for the water, in an endeavor to reach the south side.

These Indians, reared along the rivers, swim like Hawaiians, and are able to remain below the surface for a long time. The Germans saw splashes in the water and began firing. The Indians dived and swam downstream under water, only coming to the surface for a brief breathing spell.

Finally the Indians reached the south bank far below the Germans, the current assisting them materially. The Germans, thoroughly angered, shot the raft to pieces.

Many of the brave women who attend our wounded heroes in this war are women who have used Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, or who recommend it. The hospital, with its work and long hours, imposes extreme hardship on a woman's strength. Every woman should make herself fit for war's call at home or abroad. She should obtain a book called the "Medical Adviser," either at her nearest drug store or by sending 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont., for this book which tells about Nursing, Bandaging, Anatomy, Physiology, Marriage.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Sold by druggists in liquid or tablets. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg.

Chatham, Ont. — "I am very glad indeed to add my recommendation to the many others that have found relief in 'Favorite Prescription.' After motherhood I could not properly regain my strength. I was very weak and nervous, also had a terrible cough. I was very miserable when I began taking the 'Prescription.' I noticed a marked improvement before I had finished two bottles. I kept up its use and was completely cured of my cough and it built me up in a good healthy state. Favorite Prescription is one of the best tonics for women."—Mrs. Geo. Hill, 219 Wellington St. E.

TRACTORS AT WORK DESPITE THE RAIN

Demonstration at Old Rifle Ranges, Cobourg, Attracts Big Crowd.

COBOURG, Sept. 18.—Most of the farm tractors entered for the fourth annual field demonstration went into action at the old rifle ranges here this afternoon before a good crowd of spectators, gathered from all parts of the county and abroad; and although rain came within half an hour after the start was made, the plowmen did not allow it to interfere with their work, and each man finished his allotted land before pulling out, and on the whole a very considerable acreage was accounted for. Neither did the spectators allow the weather to interfere with their object of getting in line on the work turned out by the different machines, and it was well on toward evening when the crowd at the field began to disperse, the members making their way first to the tents to inspect the belt-driven machinery before returning to town.

When ploughing started, a little after two o'clock, the land was in ideal condition for working and some first-class work was turned out, but as things grew damper the turning of a pretty furrow became more difficult, and to-night the plowmen are concerned with nothing else but the weather prospects for to-morrow, as a continuation of the rain will mean bad going, though with soil such as exists at the demonstration grounds, a few hours of good drying will work wonders in restoring satisfactory conditions.

Of the many workers who did their stunt this afternoon none attracted such general attention as Mrs. Hall, of Cobourg, one of the Daughters of the Empire, who had charge of the refreshment tent at the grounds. Although she had never seen a tractor at work until to-day Mrs. Hall undertook to steer one over a piece of land such as is allotted to each of the demonstrators, and was successful in her effort. On finishing her land Mrs. Hall was congratulated by the superintendent of the field work, on the good showing she had made, and all present joined in applauding her work.

Among the prominent guests present at the demonstration to-day were: F. G. Behrends, of Albany, N.Y., who holds the position of special superintendent of farm machinery for the United States Government, and H. W. Riley, professor of rural engineering at Cornell University.

THE MOST COMMON AILMENT

Kidney diseases are our most common ailments. When the kidneys fail to remove the inert poisons from the system, nature will attempt to get rid of them in some other way in the form of pimples, boils and other skin diseases which are due to the poisons remaining in the system. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will free the system of these poisonous acids, and you should have no hesitation in trying them.

WILL INVESTIGATE DEATH OF INDIAN

CORNWALL, Ont., Sept. 19.— The death of Louis Quart, a Hogansburg Indian who was found on his piazza with a revolver by his side a couple of weeks ago, is not thought to have been a case of suicide, as was at first supposed. The body has been exhumed and a postmortem examination made which developed the fact that the wound from the revolver shot could not have been made by the dead man. It is alleged there were domestic affairs in the Quart family in which an Indian named Joe Bovia was involved, and the coroner issued a warrant for his arrest, and he has been placed in jail to await the action of the grand jury.

The bayonet first became a British weapon during the reign of King Charles II. But at that time it bore a strong resemblance to a lance or pike head, and could only be screwed into the barrel of the musket after the latter had been discharged.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1918

The British Forces Made Further Progress During Night Near St. Quentin

Important Gains Were Made by Both the French and British—Positions Consolidated--Villages Recaptured.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(3 o'clock.)—Australian troops to-day continued the penetration of the Hindenburg system and are now two-thirds of a mile from Bellinglise, four miles north-west of St. Quentin.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(Official.)—British troops last night made further progress north-west of St. Quentin, capturing the strong point of Maillaisese Farm, opposite Le Gotelet. Important gains were scored by the British in Lempire (Ephy sector), the troops pushing in to a depth of more than a mile. The town of Moeuvre, an important point on the Canal Du Nord, opposite Cambrai, which was taken by the Germans in a local counter thrust recently, was recaptured by the British.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 20.—(Official.)—In the enveloping of St. Quetnin from the south the French have carried Essigny-Le-Grand. The Germans during the night made strong attacks against the new French positions north of Allemant, between the Ailette and the Aisne. The enemy was repulsed with very heavy losses. The French have gained further ground north-east of Vailly, in the direction of Chemin-Des-Dames. A German attempt to cross the Vesle where American troops are in line, was repulsed.

The statement reads:—

In the region of St. Quentin, the French troops last night captured Essigny-Le-Grand and made additional prisoners. East of the Ailette the night was marked by violent enemy reactions. Five different German counter attacks were broken up before our new positions north of Allemant and east of Moisy Farm. The enemy suffered very heavy losses without obtaining the least results. On our side we occupied territory west of Aisy and north-east of Vailly. An enemy attempt to cross the Vesle at Jonchery was broken up. Our patrols penetrated enemy lines north-west of Souain (Champagne) and brought back prisoners.

MOEUVRES RECAPTURED.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 20.—British troops recaptured Moeuvres (seven miles directly west of Cambrai) in an attack last night, Field Marshal Haig announced to-day. Fighting is still continuing in that region. There were local engagements on other parts of the battle front.

EXTRAORDINARY SUCCESSES.

(By Lowell Mellett.)
(United Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 20.—The British have made the extraordinary successes of the past two days complete. The Germans who held the outposts of the Hindenburg line, in spots between Cambrai and St. Quentin have been cleared out, while in other places the British have regained the outpost positions, temporarily recaptured by the enemy, which are absolutely essential to the safety of the great defensive system.

This is especially true on each side of Bony, a mile and a quarter south-west of the important town of the Cateletpy, where the St. Quentin canal, running just east of the village, forms one of the main defenses of the Hindenburg line.

British troops now occupy a ridge approaching the line, and their artillery is overlooking the final German stronghold in this sector.

Australian troops have pushed farther forward in this zone than the Allies have penetrated since 1914. The facts explain the earnestness of the German counter attacks.

FAMILY DISPUTE HEARD IN COURT.

Parties Urged to Arrive at a Settlement.

The action of McMartin vs. Duggan was before Judge Huycke this morning. It is an action in which Mr. McMartin, who owns 104 Stewart street, had a dispute with his daughter, Mrs. Duggan. In the course of the case the Judge called all the parties up to the bench and suggested that it was a family matter which ought to be settled amicably, and the parties left the Court for the purpose of seeing if they could arrive at a settlement. It was stated in Court that this was a family affair, and should be settled with as little trouble as possible. It has not transpired what the terms of the settlement are. Mr. J. G. Guise-Bagley appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

HE PUTS THE "PEP" IN IT.

DESPERATE FIGHTING

Kaiser Has Ordered a Fresh Sacrifice of Man Power—The Present Activity Reviewed.

NO STRATETIC VALUE

(United Press Service.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Von Hindenburg's stiffening of his defences in Western France, coincides with a renewed effort on the part of Austro-Hungary to secure consideration of the Hapsburg plot for a peace conference. It is intimated that the Kaiser has ordered a fresh sacrifice of manpower in the dispairing hope that Austria-Hungary may yet accomplish the impossible, and Germany may be able to stalk into a peace congress from the conquered fields of France and Belgium. The Kaiser is an inveterate gambler with destiny. The crushing failures of the submarine campaign and of this year's bloody offensive do not seem to have cured him. He has returned to the tables for another throw.

Gambling With Reserves.

He is now gambling with his reserves. Instead of moving slowly backward and conserving his manpower for the defense of German territory and the Rhine, he is trying to hold fast at any cost while Austria-Hungary repeats her appeal for peace. It is a highly dangerous position for the German army, but the Hohenzollerns have now become more than graspers after straws. The strong opposition of the Germans along the Hindenburg line during the last three days contains no strategic value for themselves.

Line Is Doomed.

The line is doomed if the war continues, and only the Central Powers have any idea that it may not continue. When the retreat to Belgium is again resumed the Germans will discover that the chief result of the Austro-Hungarian peace overture has been to beggar still more the failing supply of German reserves. The Vienna statements are now trying to intimate that if only the Allies will enter upon a confidential discussion of terms they will be astonished at the liberality of the Central Powers. There is no hope of the Hapsburgeri asking any kind of an impression by this kind of argument. The Allies cannot be inveigled into a secret conference by any such camouflage. The only peace terms that can make the world safe for democracy are not to be given to the world in a spirit of liberality by the Teutonic military. They are terms that must be forced on the militarists to demonstrate the defeat of militarism.

First Details of New Bridge Plans Before Committee

Mr. Frank Barber, whom the Council has engaged as the engineer of the new Huner street bridge, was in the city to-day and discussed with the special committee some of the preliminary details of design and approaches. The committee has asked for the completion of the plans by the middle of November, and Mr. Barber states that his staff are now busily at work on them. He remarked that before the plans and specifications are finally approved by the Council they must first pass the Dominion Railway Board, the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, the Department of Railways and Canals and the Public Works Department.

The bridge will have a total length of 1,800 feet of which 1,000 feet will represent the bridge proper, the rest being approaches. The span of the river is 250 feet; the floor of the bridge will be 46 feet above the summer level of the river, or a little higher than the top cord of the present structure. The Quaker figure on the third storey door of the Quaker Oats building will step directly out upon the floor of the new bridge. Mr. Barber will meet the committee on the grounds at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

EIGHT AMERICAN PATIENTS KILLED

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Eight American patients were killed when German aviators bombed a plainly marked clearing hospital behind the American lines. Doctors and male nurses were injured.

STRAINING AT THE LEASH

Spectacular Deeds of the American Troops Are Beginning to Filter Back to Headquarters.

A CAPTURED GUN

Special to the Examiner:
(By Frank Taylor).

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE METZ FRONT, Sept. 20.—The Doughboys are strong at the leash. The unit which wiped out the St. Mihiel salient are impatient to push on. Their accomplishments to date have only whetted their appetites and the newest recruits and oldest veterans alike feel that chasing the Boches is the greatest sport in the world. The Germans are still digging in along the Hindenburg line, while our artillery continually swamps their efforts. Accounts of spectacular deeds filter back to headquarters. A certain battery had a gun put out of commission. The gunners immediately took charge of a captured gun of medium calibre, well supplied with ammunition. They had a little trouble in understanding the range finder, so they discovered a German range table book, which was translated by German-American members of the battery.

The Doughboys are finding a knowledge of the German language useful up in the front. I saw a German field library which had been hastily abandoned. German-speaking Americans were browsing among the volumes. Several chaps were reading translations of Shakespeare and Emerson.

"I never knew Shakespeare wrote so well until I stumbled on to this library," said one.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. —The Associated Press to-day issues the following summary:

British and French troops are making further progress in the envelopment of St. Quentin. German resistance continues stubborn and battles are taking place along a front of more than twenty miles from the south of St. Quentin to the west of Cambrai. In the north the British are pushing toward Le Catelet and have advanced a mile nearer the town on the west, capturing an important farm position between Epehy and Lempire. South of this point the Australians are east of outpost positions of the Hindenburg line and steady progress of the British threatens the main defences of the line all the way from Lempire to St. Quentin.

THE WEATHER

More than the usual amount of rain has fallen lately. In September, up to the present time, we have had 4.62 inches. In September of last year, the total for the whole month was but 1.03. Farmers complained that the ground was too dry for ploughing. October of last year, however, had an excessive rainfall, totalling 6.32 for the month. Last fall the first time freezing point was reached was Sept. 23rd. This season the temperature has not been down to the freezing point yet except in sections in the southern end of the city and in Ashburnham, where blackened leaves of tender plants show that there is a considerable variety of climate even inside the limits of the corporation. The first snow last year came October 25th, and the first zero, November 27th. The foliage of the trees at the present time shows but little of the coming autumnal change, and the country generally looks green and fresh, in marked contrast to the browned and burned appearance of some seasons.—W. ALLIES CAPTURED 10,000 BULGARIANS

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Ten thousand Bulgarian prisoners were sent to the rear on September 18th alone, says Marcel Hutin in the Echo de Paris. The pursuit of the retreating enemy continued with great success, the article adds.

SIXTH BODY FOUND IN HOTEL RUINS.

Two Children Perished When Their Home Burned at Timmins.

PORCUPINE, Sept. 19.—The finding of the head of an unknown man in the ruins of the building destroyed by fire at Iroquois Falls last week makes the sixth victim of the catastrophe. During the week eight persons met death through fire in this district, two children belonging to the family of Mr. E. Clouthier being added to the list of victims in a fire which destroyed their home at Timmins on Wednesday evening last.

THE CORNER STONE OF THE G ERMAN POSITION. — Dotted line shows the Hindenburg line. So lid black line shows the Allied position. If the Germans are forced t o give up this position it is proof that they are beaten. If they hold it through the winter the decision will be postponed. But Haig's smash ing advance northwest of St. Quentin, a little above the zone shown on th is map, makes defeat almost certain, as it will give opportunity to get b ehind the Hindenburg line and force the evacuation of both St. Quen tin and Laon.

Evidence of Debility of German Military Machine

Enemy Reserve Forces Are Diminishing—Average Strength of a Division Is Now 10,000.

THE AMERICAN FRONT

(By Fred S. Ferguson—United Press)

With the American Army on Metz Front, Sept. 20. — Diminishing of the German effective fighting force as a result of the allied hammering, is shown in authoritative information received at the American headquarters.

The enemy has 87 divisions (about a million men) in reserve, not counting three Austrian divisions, which probably are in the Metz region. Thirteen of the 87 divisions have had more than a month's rest and are regarded as fit for immediate service. Twenty have rested for three months. Then there are totally rested divisions which include three first-class, six second class, two third class and two fourth class. All others were engaged in former attacks, July 15th, or in the allied counter offensive.

THE METZ FRONT QUIET.

The quality of the rested reserves may be shown by the fact that they have not been used in serious fighting. The German command is making replacements from other divisions, less rested, but apparently regarded as possessing better fighting qualities.

Aside from artillery and aviation activity, the Metz front continues comparatively quiet. The Boches attempted a raid near St. Die farther south yesterday morning, following an hour's bambardment, but they were repulsed before they reached our lines.

Airplane photographs of the region about Metz show that bombing by allied planes has been very effective. The triangle between Mentigny and Sablon, just south of Metz, is an extremely important junction point of three railways. It forms a veritable maze of tracks, and more than a thousand freight cars are shown in the photographs. The results of many direct hits may be observed in the pictures. Marc La Leur and Chambly, which are being shelled as well as bombed, also have been badly damaged.

ROADS BOMBED.

(Special to Examiner.)

London, September 20. — One hundred and fifty American airmen swooped down on a road crowded with German soldiers during the advance into St. Mihiel sector, dropping bombs and firing machine guns.

The Germans were retreating along two main roads, the despatch said. One of these was closed by the American fire and the Germans were all sent down the other, with the result they were seen and attacked by Americans.

FURTHER EVIDENCE.

(Canadian Press.)

With the American Army, Sept. 20. Further evidence of the debility of the German military machine is shown in a summary of information gathered by the intelligence officers of the allied forces. There are now eighty seven divisions in reserve not counting three Austrian divisions, in the vicinity of Metz. Of these only thirteen are regarded as fit for an immediate offensive, having had more than a month's rest. Twenty are considered fairly fit, having had three weeks' rest. The total of German divisions is approximately 230. The average strength of a division is now 10,000.

A CAPTURED ORDER.

Forces Led by German Officers Were Defeated—Operations in Siberia.

In northern Russia, Karelian troops severely defeated forces led by German officers at Ukhtinskya, says an official statement issued by the War Office to-day. The battle took place on Wednesday.

Despatches regarding Siberian operations declared that the Soviet have occupied Bindousk and that the Czechs have captured Bisertski. Bolshevik troops are retiring from Crasnofimsk.

(Special to Examiner.)

London, September 20. — Madame Alexandra Bedschkajeuns, organizer of the Russian Women's Battalion of Death, was executed at Vitebsk, on September 12th, for participation in a counter revolution, according to a wireless despatch received here to-day. The despatch declared that the woman was shot.

Ukraine insurgents have blown up a German military train, and have captured ten villages, according to despatches received.

WILL EVACUATE.

The Soviet government has requested the British diplomats to leave Russia immediately, according to a Berlin despatch to-day, quoting a Russian Moscow despatch to the "Wezer Zeitung."

BIG SEIZURE OF LIQUOR

ACCUSED MEN ESCAPED FROM CUSTODY AND ARE STILL AT LARGE

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 19.—This morning three provincial policemen passed through this city with a truck loaded with liquor valued at $800. The liquor had been seized by License Inspector Uren, of Cornwall, yesterday, and the provincial men were taking it to Toronto. Three accused men were lodged in a hotel in Cornwall and during the night escaped.

When arrested the men were armed to the teeth. It is understood they were traced to this city, and their arrest by the local police is expected.

HINDENBURG IS PUZZLED

Finds It Difficult to Cover All Parts of the Line—Several Points Threatened.

RESERVES DWINDLING

(By William Phillip Simms — United Press.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Von Hindenburg has begun to hit back. With his main line defences overwhelmed and a possible second retreat far more disastrous than the first, he is being forced to sacrifice part of his precious reserves in an effort to save himself.

The latest news as this is cabled is that the German artillery have everywhere been repulsed in their counter-attacks, while piles of dead lie before the British lines between Cambrai and St. Quentin. Meantime Generals Byng, Rawlinson and Debency are enclosing St. Quentin on all of the important pivot points of the Hindenburg line, which is exactly what Hindenburg had hoped to prevent. With the regularity of the swing of a pendulum, Marshal Foch is hitting the Germans all along the line. The Huns are reported madly digging themselves in from the sea to Switzerland, not knowing where the next blow will fall. Fearing for Lille and Douai, Von Hindenburg has been forced to concentrate a part of his available reserves there. Cambrai and St. Quentin are threatened, so another mass of men is required in that region. General Mangin's menace toward the keystone positions north-east of Soissons necessitates a third batch of reserves. General Pershing's press toward Metz and Dricy, at the very gates of Germany itself, calls for a fourth group, while the fear that the Allies will strike toward the Rhine through Alsace is keeping the Huns worried there. Thus Marshal Foch's strategy is to split up Von Hindenburg's forces until it is problematical and the German leader will not be able to put more punch into a blow anywhere even if he should have more troops in reserve.

THE COAL SITUATION.

...cording to reports there are many ...zens of Peterborough who have not ...yet been able to secure any coal ... the coming winter. The attention ... all of these citizens is called to ... coupon appearing in today's issue ... the Examiner, which they should ...e no time in filling and returning ... the proper address. Those in charge ... the local fuel administration are ...xious to know as soon as possible ...t how many citizens are without ...l at the present time so that it is ... important that all such cases ...uld be reported in the manner ar...nged without delay in order that ...ps may be taken to see that they ...ovided with enough fuel for the ...r part of the winter at least.

...People who have some coal are not ...ed to report; it is only the names ...d addresses of those who are with...t any supply that are required at ...esent. A prompt and general com...iance with the request made by the ...el Commission will go a long way ...wards adjusting the situation.

COMPARE THE SACRIFICES

...Day after day the yellow telegraph... forms that tell of the death or ...unding of Peterboro soldiers are be... delivered in the city—day after ...y hundreds of citizens, relatives of ...her soldiers overseas wait anxiously ... word of their loved ones. Sad ...essage after sad message tell the ...ory of the sacrifice that is being ...ade for the cause of liberty. SAILORS' FUND GROWING

The local campaign on behalf of the Navy League, it is a pleasure to announce, is gaining in momentum. The $9,000 mark has been reached and there is still hope that the citizens of Peterboro will arise to their responsibility and roll up a sum that will ...d table to the good name of the ...ity. Never has there been an appeal ...et had behind it more substantial ...d indisputable causes for support ...an the Naval League effort on be...alf of the merchant sailors. Day ... ay in momentary danger of ...eath and with no hope of pensions if they are injured or of sustenance for their dependents if they are killed, ...men have kept the Atlantic bridged so that our troops, munitions and supplies have gone over in a steady stream that spells defeat for Germany. The Navy League Fund will look after the dependents of these men so that the widows and orphans of the merchant sailors who met death at the hands of the German undersea pirate craft will not be left penniless. It is a noble cause on behalf of gallant men and the response to the appeal should be more hearty than has hitherto been the case.

THE BRITISH LEAVEN
(Canada London)

A very significant statement was recently made by the Manitoba Free Press, which so largely speaks for the Canadian Middle-West. Our contemporary, in discussing the question of immigration after the war, speaks of the need for greater discrimination in the character of those admitted to the Dominion, and says "especially shall we try to fill up our empty spaces with 'men of the bull-dog breed,' brothers of the rank and file of that 'contemptible little army,'" etc. In days gone by Winnipeg was not noted for specially favoring the English immigrant. The Scot and the Irishman were welcomed, but there was a prejudice against the English. He was found to be much less adaptable than any of the other new-comers to the prairie towns, apt to criticize, and prone to grumble.

The sterling qualities of the English man when he has "made good" and permanently settled down in any new country more than make up for any disagreements he may have with the older settlers while he is becoming acclimatised. It is highly significant that the Free Press, which reservedly ranks so high amongst the chief organs of Canadian public opinion, should now emphasize the importance in the future development of Canada of the leaven of British immigration.

In connection with this, we remember two very interesting conversations we had with the Hon. Frank Oliver. On the first occasion, he had only recently assumed office as Minister of the Interior, and expressed himself to us as greatly valuing Scottish, Irish, and Welsh immigrants, but by no means anxious to encourage the English, who, he was then of the opinion, were almost undesirable owing to their want of adaptability.

On the second occasion, which was towards the termination of his years of office, he had entirely changed his view. He said that the policy of his department then was to encourage and attract the Englishman as much as possible, because they found that his insistance on making the conditions around him as near as possible alike to those to which he had been accustomed in the Old Land was a most valuable agency towards good Municipal Government and rural development. This was a definite conviction arrived at by a public man who had a very intimate knowledge of the various problems of settlement and emigration in Western Canada, and, as a result of the facts which one learnt while in control of his department, he entirely changed his views and realized that the English settler, on account of the very defects of his qualities, provided the most valuable leaven for a new country of mixed nationalities.

raine Front, Sept. 20th. — Efforts made by the German high command to counteract the effect of the allies' endeavours to express their war aims to the German people are evidenced in an order from General Hutier, which has fallen into the hands of Americans. The order, which attacks Lord Northcliffe, follows: "The enemy begins to realize that we cannot be crushed by his blockade, his superiority in numbers and his force of arms. He, therefore, is trying my trickery and underhanded methods (of which he is a pastmaster) to induce in the minds of the German people doubts of their invincibility. He has founded for this special purpose a special ministry for destruction of German confidence. At the head of this ministry he has put that most thoroughgoing rascal of all the entente, Lord Northcliffe, who has been given billions for the influencing of opinion in Germany and at the front by means of paid agents, the assassination of ambassadors, and in all other ways, in favor with the entente methods."

Prominent Citizens Commend Progress of Exhibition Board and Promise More Support

Directors Generate New Enthusiasm at Luncheon Given by President Denne Last Night—Many Suggestions Offered for the Increased Success of the Fair.

THE BOARD IS GRATIFIED

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, together with Mayor Duncan and a few of the citizens who have been actively interested in the Fair, were the guests of Mr. Roland Denne, the president of the Board, at an informal luncheon at the Empress last night. Mr. Denne's personal hospitality was exceedingly felicitous, and despite the sumptuary restrictions of these times the dinner and its service left nothing to be desired. During the evening there were vocal numbers by Messrs. Asa Huycke, Douglas Carlisle and Edward Hanrahan, with which the music of Mrs. Fenwick's orchestra added to the pleasure of the occasion.

The addresses were impromtu, sometimes reminiscent, but always helpful and suggestive. The old enthusiasm that has marked the semi-monthly meetings of the directorate during the year sparkled with new warmth that has been kindled by the support and encouragement offered by the citizens last week, when their attendance, despite the unseasonable weather, saved the directors from a serious deficit. This evidence of co-operation received full recognition last night. The members of the Board did not hesitate to express their appreciation of the help of the citizens, and their gradually awakening realization of what the Exhibition means to Peterborough and its rural district has quickened the directors, crystallized their hopes into new plans, and filled them with a keener determination to push on to greater success.

Invite Suggestions.

It was stated last night that the Board not only expects the support of the people during Fair week, but also invites suggestions throughout the year. Every proposal may not be put into effect, but if it is possible to employ them they will be doubly welcome. At any rate, every idea will receive careful consideration.

It may not be generally understood by the public that the Exhibition Board is composed of farmers and citizens who give their time, thought and labour to all the details of the Fair without any other reward than the material sympathy of the public in furthering their efforts eventually to give Peterborough the best Fair outside of the big cities and commensurate with Peterborough's importance as the leading city between Toronto and Ottawa. There are no shirkers on the Board; all the members are on an equal footing of service, and the spirit of fellowship welds the members as in no other similar organization in the city. Although the energy of the directors is unflagging during the entire twelve months and refuses to recognize obstacles, yet the cordial assistance of the people is a sustaining inspiration that is invaluable.

The annual meeting is always advertised, but only the old guard attends. Members who have droned during the year are quietly dropped, and with a feeling of disappointment. This has been the procedure for years, and by this process of elimination only the busiest and most earnest members survive. The farmers are well represented in the list, and like the late J. H. Garbutt, have always been foremost in carrying on the Fair without enjoying the first taste of success that is now emerging as the result of their cumulative efforts and the enthusiasm that exists in the directorate to-day.

Last night's gathering accorded to Mr. Denne the heartiest congratulations upon the fine results of his leadership, but he replied that if there had been some improvements that met with the public's approval, and concrete success that was an earnest of greater achievements to come, the credit belonged to the directors as a whole. Without their unfailing support, their readiness to work when real labour was needed, and their attention to the last details there would not be the present conviction that the Exhibition is just entering upon a period of development that would be more noticeable and notable every year.

A Winter Fair.

The desirability of securing a winter stock show for Peterborough was referred to last night. With the Government's help special building could be provided on the Fair grounds that would assure a winter exhibition of cattle that would prove interesting and profitable to the farmers. The building or buildings would be available for the autumn fair.

Plans are already completed for a big day next 1st of July. It was suggested that the Exhibition should be held on the first three or four days of the week. This would permit an extension of the duration of the Fair whenever that step was considered advisable. There was some opinion that Fair week should be postponed one week in order to avoid the Ottawa exhibition and secure the amusements and exhibits that Peterborough has been missing by reason of this com-

[illegible] Ottawa.

Mayor Duncan congratulated President Denne and the Board for their extensive improvements to the grounds, and remarked that the least the Council could do was to provide sewer connections for new lavatories that are much needed. His Worship promised his financial and personal assistance to the directors.

Good Agricutural Exhibits.

Business men assured the Board that they expressed the sentiments of the people in congratulating the Board on its progress and assuring them that they had the public's sympathy and actual support as never before. It was recalled that at one time the Toronto Exhibition Board tried to induce the city to assume the Exhibition but were refused. Ultimately the city reversed its attitude and begged for the Exhibition, which is now returning a very considerable revenue. It was predicted last night that Peterborough's Council would yet become eager to take over the local exhibition for similar reasons that converted Toronto.

These were only a few of the opinions and suggestions that were offered under the stimulation of the President's luncheon, but not the least interesting and likewise entertaining, were Mr. Harry Winch's recollections of the old days when he was at times an exhibitor and again a director. The Fair was then held on Central Park. His recital of the gala occasion when Lord Aberdeen opened one of the Exhibitions at the Fair grounds and of other occasions in the more strenuous "good old days," suggested a zest that is lacking in these arid days.

The Officers and Directors.

The officers and directors of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, most of whom were present at the President's luncheon, are as follows:

Losses In the Italian Army

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 20.—A statement printed in the United States that 180,000 Italian soldiers had been killed in the war was denied in despatches from the Italian front. At least twice that many have died, it was stated. Semi-official estimates of the Italian losses in the war received here yesterday declared that 1,350,000 had been killed or permanently disabled.

A Strong Debate at Labour Congress

Radicals Opposed Payment of Interest on War Loans.

Canadian Press:

QUEBEC, Sept. 20.—After a several hours' acrimonious debate, the Trades and Labour Congress to-day adopted a resolution urging every worker to invest in the forthcoming War Loan. The Radicals in Congress opposed investment in war loans, but finally lined up with the amendment, calling for the repudiation of all interests on loans, their contention being that real patriots should not accept a reward for supporting the soldiers.

The Socialistic delegates were not sparing of their criticism of the war and those who helped to carry it on. There were many interruptions and much disorder, and Chairman Watters had considerable difficulty in controlling the meeting.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MRS. HUTCHINSON GLADSTONE AVENUE

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 18th, about 30 friends met in the form of a surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hutchinson, 102 Gladstone avenue, on the occasion of Mrs. Hutchinson's birthday. The evening was very enjoyably spent in music and dancing, solos and duet being rendered by Miss Beulah Payton, Miss Lillie Parsons, Miss May Caird, Rodney Kerr, William Fields and others.

The party broke up in the wee sma hours, after joining hands and singing for 'She's a Jolly Good Fellow and 'Auld Lang Syne.' The present were numerous and costly.

Voice of the People

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—There are many ways in which a library can be made of benefit to the citizens, and I am sure you will allow me the space to bring to the notice of the public one or two at least in which they may help in this regard. One of these is in sending to our care back numbers of the parish magazines of the various churches in the city. In looking over a stray number of the Parish Journal of St. John's Church this morning I was struck with the amount of interesting information it contained. It was 22 years old, but that only added to its value as a record of work accomplished by past and well-known members of that church. There could be no better way of preserving a complete record of the doings of the Peterborough churches than in asking the ministers of the various denominations to send us regularly the printed records of their parish work. They would be kept on fyle and would be at the service of anyone desirous of consulting them. And the same thing holds good of the annual records of the different societies, fraternal and otherwise. The Library is the place to which the public come for information on almost every subject. In order to prove its worth it needs the co-operation of the citizens, and it is hoped that they will be as willing to further our aims in this as they have invariably been in other particulars.—Yours, etc.,

Fred. M. Dela Fosse.

Citizens Without Coal Are Asked to Sign a Coupon

Coupons Will be Checked Up and Statements Verified.

Anticipating that the new regulations to be issued by the Fuel Commissioner for Canada will be ready for publicity purposes by the end of the month, it is deemed desirable that some record should be obtained, and in the least expensive way, of those who have so far failed to obtain coal. Working under the regulation that allowed of the delivery of as much as 70 per cent. of normal needs, many citizens have secured amounts that will make them safe for the early part of the winter, at least. But there are many, as it is stated, who have up to date failed to secure any at all. That is, if we take the statements made as being the truth.

The Mayor thinks it desirable that we ascertain at once who is without coal. Instead of putting on men to go over the city and make a personal call at each house, those without coal are asked to sign the coupon as it appears in this issue of the Examiner and mail to the address indicated.

The coupons will be, if deemed advisable, checked up against the delivery records now kept under the direction of the Fuel Commission, for the time being, and statements can be so verified. Then a view can be had of the absolute necessities of the situation, and such action as may be taken, based on the new instructions from Ottawa, will be in order.

All interested should attend to the despatch of the coupons at once. Personal appeals are not desired. 'Phone messages will not be taken. What is needed is the definite statement in writing, as required by the coupon.

WAR HORSE REQUIRES LONG EDUCATION

Training as Severe and Certainly As Comprehensive as That of Recruit Who Rides Animal.

London, Sept. 20. — You cannot just buy an animal and put him into a cavalry brigade. The real war horse has quite a long education before he is proficient, an education almost as severe and certainly as comprehensive as that of the recruit who ultimately rides him, says "S. M." in the Daily Mail.

It was in no small way due to the mettle of the horses they rode that Lord French was able to say of the British cavalry at the first battle of the Marne that they were able to do as they liked with the Germans. The well bred cavalry horse possesses a highly strung nervous system, but when properly trained he will face barbed wire and even rush an entanglement when put to it, regardless of lacerated legs and flanks. But his education is begun carefully, or he may be ruined by a few careless lessons.

His education must not begin too soon after being brought to camp or his legs will not stand the strain and the first step is the most important. If he is terror stricken or if his temper is aroused he may never get over the incident. He is walked around free from the leading rein and after he has been accustomed to have a man mount rapidly on his sensitive back he is taught to kneel with his rider.

This is an elaborate lesson. The first stage consists in getting him to bend his forelegs slightly before he gets to the stage of lying down on his side. He has to be taught to pull up in his own length from a gallop, to stand steady while his rider fires from his back and to lie still on the ground while he is being used as cover for his rider who snipes over his side.

One of the most difficult things required of a war horse is to get familiarized with the sword in fighting from his back. Here the greatest care is taken or he may be frightened at first and never recover his nerve. In real warfare it is a common trick for a cavalry man to aim his first blow at his opponent's horse. This is especially the case with lancers, for no horse will stand after being pricked on the nostril or lip. He will wheel around if he has room to turn, and the fight becomes a chase.

It is a peculiar fact, however, that when a horse knows his rider well he will face blows if promptly handled such as would not usually be expected of him. A brigade have been known for instance to go through three lines of bayonets and then through a barbed wire entanglement, trampling everything underfoot as if it were straw. Within the last year there was a case of a Canadian troop who charged two lines of German machine guns and rifles, wheeled and came back at them again, and rode through them for the second time, leaving a trail of dead and wounded Huns as a punishment. Seventy five per cent. of the men who started on that charge were casualties—but practically all the Huns were dead or dying. And the horses stood it well, bless them.

When it is considered that the average weight, including equipment, carried by a cavalry horse is something like twenty stones, it must be admitted that these fine, intelligent animals deserve every care. And they get it, too. For when the big retreat begins it is they who will keep the Germans on the run.

TELLS OF BESTIALITY OF HUN IN FIELD

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Dr. P. H. Howard, of St. Louis, a member of the Chamber of Commerce of that city, is convinced of the bestiality and brutality of the German soldier. Dr. Howard is back in this country after serving in France with the Salvation Army. He tells the story of a East Liverpool (Ohio) sergeant, who was nailed to a barn door, with bayonets through his hands and feet and the additional story of how his brother, A. C. Cole, found the pitiful lifeless figure and then exacted vengeance from the fleeing Germans.

There also is the ghastly tale of Joseph Chicano, who was wounded, captured, and shot because he couldn't reply to a German captain's questions. Also there is the story of how Chicano was left on the battlefield four days pleading ineffectually for aid from the retreating Germans, and the details of how a German officer took another shot at him.

"I cannot give the details of that venegance," said Dr. Howard, referring to the revenge of Sergeant Cole's brother, "but the American boys are satisfied with what happened to Fritz."

Dr. Howard said he stood within a city block of a certain sector when the Prussian Guard attacked the Americans. "I don't believe it is profane to say that the Americans simply knocked the hell out of that crack Prussian unit," he declared. "There isn't enough left of them to make a respectable link sausage for a cannibal."

Football was a crime in England during the reign of Henry VIII.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

Local Council of Women Want Police Matron Appointed

Matter Was Discussed at Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon—A Lyceum Course.

GENERAL BUSINESS

The Local Council of Women resumed activities yesterday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A., after two months' intermission for the summer months, with a fairly large gathering. The president, Mrs. Robert Harstone, who was in the chair, opened the meeting with a few words of welcome, saying she was glad the ladies are again ready and willing to carry on. In conclusion, Mrs. Harstone welcomed to the Council the Women's Art Association, which has now become affiliated.

Treasurer's Report.

The treasurer's (Miss Nina Davidson) report showed a balance of $16.54.

Playgrounds Committee.

In her report, as convenor of the Playgrounds Committee, Mrs. A. Mowat briefly outlined the difficulty under which the playgrounds had been carried on. With the only source of revenue, the collection of rags and paper, two playgrounds had been kept up, and hundreds of little children given valuable training through their supervised play. Mrs. Mowat hoped, however, that presently the town will realize the value of the playgrounds and support the work. One hundred and ninety dollars was realized by the rag and paper collection. "I'm still in the rag business to make funds for the same end," concluded Mrs. Mowat.

Mrs. James Kendry, seconded by Miss F. Hatton, moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Mowat and Mrs. W. R. Morris for their untiring interest in the work of the playgrounds.

Equal Moral Standards.

Mrs. A. Stevenson, convenor of the Equal Moral Standards Committee, suggested, as a result of information she had received through the visit of two representatives of the Women's Council to the Police Court, that a propaganda should be spread amongst all women who have young girls either employed or boarding, or of whom the women are in any authority, urging the absolute necessity a set time for girls to be in the house. This propaganda, she said, could be spread through the different societies, who would educate the people to the necessity of the step, and dire results of lax rules in the time for coming in at night.

Appoint Police Matron.

In considering the report of the Equal Moral Standards Committee, the question of filling the vacancy left by Mrs. McElhiney's departure from the city came up. Mrs. Kendry said that women voters should have a voice in the appointment of a Police Matron to fill this place. Toward this end the President and Mrs. Stevenson were appointed to approach the Police Commission to urge having a regular Police Matron appointed.

Lyceum Course.

Through the Women's Council, Peterborough will have a lyceum course under the same circuit as the summer Chautauqua. In this course the best talent in America has been secured, including ex-President Taft and Bertha Farner. To sell the tickets, at Mrs. Neal's suggestion, five captains will be appointed, who, with five helpers, each will take over the work.

Mrs. Pankhurst's Speech.

Miss Jean Harstone gave a splendid resume of Mrs. Pankhurst's speech given in Toronto this week, which, with her own observations of conditions in England, proved very interesting.

Immigration.

Immigration, the subject which will be dealt with by the Women's Council during the next few meetings, was introduced by some interesting facts and figures given by Mrs. A. Mowat, who showed that a surprisingly large percentage of the immigrants to Canada are non-English speaking. The subject will be followed up by papers on the subject at the monthly meetings.

The Council of Women have solved the question of doing two things at once, and while they lay the foundation of higher principles and better laws at their meetings, a visitor couldn't help but be struck by the industry of the women, every one of whom knit ceaselessly while considering the questions.

DREAMS AFAR

War is the background for most of our thoughts to-day, and a novel without a war tinge would seem almost out of keeping. In "Drums Afar," the new novel by John Murray Gibbon, the war interest is kept subdued till the latter part of the story, which indeed vibrates with echoes of the great conflict. Canada plays its part in this international romance, the author obtaining some vivid local colour from a patriotic fund campaign and from the sailing of the first Canadian Expeditionary Force. Described in a subtitle as an international romance, "Drums Afar" has as its hero a happy-go-lucky young Englishman who, after three years of Oxford University with vacations in Germany and France, becomes director of an illustrated weekly newspaper in London. The charms of an American girl lead him to the United States, where he arrives just on the outbreak of the war. All through the pictures of life at Newport, Rhode Island, at Chicago, and at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, the drums of war are heard beating ever louder. On the one hand is the call of the Mother Country; on the other is the prospect of luxurious ease in a country of mixed races which at the time of the story was aiming to be neutral. It is the influence of Canada, however, which brings the hero to his great decision—a decision which first entangles and then disentangles the skeins of love woven into the story. "Drums Afar" is published in London and New York by John Lane, and in Toronto by S. B. Gundy, of the Oxford University Press, who also published "Hearts and Faces," the well-known novel by the same author.

The Duke of Wellington once fought a duel in Battersea Fields.

The homely girl seldom figures in an elopement, but she's an important factor in most happy homes, just the same.

EDWARD CIANELLI, GRACE HOE Y and JOSEPH KENO in the catchy "Can the Cabaret" song in "HA VE A HEART" the musical comedy treat which Henry W. Savage will offer at The Grand next Wednesday, Sept. 25. Seat sale opens Monday.

Pte. S. Whitehouse Describes the Conditions of German Trenches

Peterboro Soldier Has Been in a Number of Hot Scraps—Interesting Letter to His Father.

Pte. Sam. Whitehouse has written the following letter home, describing the conditions and thrills of the front line trenches. He is in the pink of condition. The letter was written after a raid had been made on the German front line, and he describes the chaotic conditions of the enemy's trenches. His parents reside at 771 Water Street:

France, Aug. 29, 1918.

Dear Dad and Mother,—I have been having a great time these days. I just got back from a walk into Fritzies' front line. Gosh it is an awful mess. He was completely surprised and dropped everything and ran. Gas masks, rifles, bayonets, coats, ammunition, helmets and other Heinie equipment are scattered all over the place. Here and there a bunch of "stiffs" lie that were caught in the barrage. Some of them in bare feet, some only with socks, and others were killed while doing up their puttees. I've got no sympathy for those fiends at all. I can look over a bunch of mutilated Heinies without the least bit of feeling, but I can't bear to see any of ours. The Canadians have certainly made a name for themselves.

A temporary forward dressing station was established near us the other day, and I watched the flow of Heinie prisoners carrying in our wounded. They make them work you know. Some are used as stretcher-bearers and others mending roads. That's the stuff to give them. Most of them are poor, under-sized looking creatures. They look as if they had lived on air for a week. Some are very young and many have glasses on. None of them seem sorry that they were captured. In fact they appear quite glad. One officer said he had tried six months, and then shouted, "La Guerre est fini pour moi."

Our wounded are a cheerful bunch. They are tickled to death if they have a Blighty, and can bear any pain as long as they're smoking a fag. I am a bear cat after souvenirring. A couple of days ago I got a "Gott mit uns" belt and an identification disc in the shape of a bracelet. When I go to Blighty I'll take the odd rifle and helmet and send them home. I'm collecting shoulders too.

I am bunking in an old gun hut now and sleeping on a stretcher. It's rather narrow, but very comfortable. I could sleep on a slack wire anyway. Anywhere I hang my hat is home, sweet home to me now. I'll be pulling some bonehead plays when I get back like flopping when a door slams, or getting up from the table with my plate and cup in my hand and lining up before the kitchen door for dinner. I think we have old Fritz just about on his back. He doesn't know where we're going to hit him next. He seems to have very little artillery, and his shelling is very widely scattered.

I am in the pink and hope you are likewise. Love to all.

Sam.

Resolution Passed by the Company

Reference to Death of Major C. Ross Cameron.

The following is a copy of a resolution passed by the Board of Directors of the William Hamilton Company, Ltd.:

"That the directors of the William Hamilton Company, Ltd., have learned with the deepest sorrow of the death on the field of battle of Major C Ross Cameron. We recall his many estimable qualities, his integrity as a business man, and the fidelity and zeal with which he discharged his duties in connection with this company, and also the energetic and public-spirited way in which he interested himself as a citizen in many things that were for the good of our city, and thereby earned for himself the respect and affection of a wide circle of friends. We feel that we have been honoured in being associated in business with one who has now so nobly made the supreme sacrifice in freedom's cause, and we desire to express our deep and heartfelt sympathy with his father, Mr. John A. Cameron, and with the other members of the family in this their hour of great sorrow."

Open Cars Stored Away--Snow Plow Ready for Action

Street railway workmen are engaged at the car barns these days in re-arranging the rolling stock, pushing into the back ground the open air cars and dragging out the snow plows to a convenient position for the first emergency. These activities, accompanying the changing seasons, denote the passing of the summer as surely as the unseasonable weather that has set in with September. The appearance of the first open air in late Spring is as welcome to the sidewalk crowd as are the first blue birds. Gradually the annual novelty wears off, and the birds and the cars dissolve out of the passing pictures without a farewell.

Star Boarders at Castle Nesbitt

County Gaol Harbours Eleven Prisoners at Present Time.

Gaoler Nesbitt has accommodation for 13 boarders on the hill at present. Only 11 out of his 24 cells are tenanted with 8 male and 3 female prisoners. This number is higher than usual, six being the usual number. Of the eleven prisoners, four are held on serious charges, one an alleged horse thief, three on remand on suspicion of a serious offence. The rest are all old people. All are kept busy by the turnkey, either sawing wood, working in the garden, or tidying up the place generally.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT BETHANY TABERNACLE.

The Sunday morning service at Bethany Tabernacle will be specially conducted in memory of Pte. Milton F. B. Griffin (son of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Griffin, 420 London Street), who fell in battle on the fields of France on August 27st inst.

Pte. Griffin has been from his boyhood a faithful and respected member of Bethany Tabernacle Sunday School and congregation, and being of a particularly genial and sunny disposition, was much loved by all.

While we mourn his absence, we are consoled in the assurance of his eternal salvation through Jesus Christ Whom he trusted as a personal saviour, and of Whom he so frequently spoke in his letters.

CANNON BALL SCOTT TO PITCH AGAINST RIVERSIDES IN TO-MORROW'S GAME

A Toronto despatch says that Cannon Ball Scott, star pitcher of the Hillcrests, is resting up in preparation for to-morrow's big game here with the Riversides and that he expects to be in the best of condition. The game at Riverside Park should be a battle royal and there will undoubtedly be a big crowd on hand, for it is not only the last, but by long odds the best, of the season. Hillcrests have played great ball in winning their own League and in annexing the Toronto Daily Star trophy.

Manager Solomon will have his strongest line-up in action. The game will be handled by Umpire Taylor of Toronto, and Kay of Peterborough, who will also look after the return game in Toronto a week from to-morrow.

Good weather is the only thing needed to ensure a great game and a big crowd.

The batteries will be Scott and Hennessy for the Toronto team, and Kirn and Phelan for the Riversides.

LABOUR CONGRESS URGES THE FIXING OF FOOD PRICES

Labour Will be Represented on Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Committee.

SUPPORT WAR EFFORT

QUEBEC, Sept. 19.—Labour representation was promised upon Sir James Lougheed's Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Committee by Lieut. Holmes of Toronto, who spoke here, to-day at the Dominion Trades Congress. Lieut. Holmes said that he had been instructed by Sir James Lougheed to deliver a message of this character. He expects to remain until the question of vocational training is being discussed, that he may answer questions and the allegations of delegates who are not satisfied with the vocational training policy of the Government.

Lieut. Holmes made the statement that he personally thought no more than 5,000 returned soldiers would be handled by the Vocational Training Department, and that only one-half of these would be placed in shops alongside trade unionists. He expressed the opinion that if soldiers were permitted to take wages while under training and receive their pension also, it would be an incentive for the employer to demand the mixiumum of labour from the returned soldier, which was an answer to the claim of organized labour that employers were now obtaining cheap labour by taking soldiers for a short time and then asking for others before the six months' training was completed.

The Congress also adopted a resolution calling for the nationalization of the practise of medicine, and of all hospitals.

President Watters Endorsed.

At the opening of the session this afternoon it was announced that President Watters had been endorsed as a delegate to the Congress by his Ottawa local, thus rendering his eligible for re-election as an officer of the organization.

Urges Irish Home Rule.

Addressing the delegates, William Mahone, International President of the Street Railwaymen's Union, Detroit, asked T. G. Hancock, M.P., the representative of the British Trades and Labour Congress, to take back with him instructions that Ireland must have Home Rule.

"As an Irish-American," said Mr Mahone, "and as the father of three soldiers, I say our boys will fight the battle for democracy and against Prussian militarism, but Britain must do justice to Ireland, and all her provinces."

was very loudly applauded.

The statement of Mr. Mahone

Hamilton Council's Initiative.

The debate on the price of food was started this morning, when a motion sent up to the Congress from the Hamilton Trades and Labour Council asked for a Commission.

R. J. Johns, Winnipeg, moved to amend the motion so that it demanded that when food prices soared the members of the unions affiliated with the Congress should get a corresponding increase in wages.

The Resolution Adopted.

P. M. Draper, Ottawa, moved in amendment to the amendment:

"Be it resolved, that it is expedient that the Government of Canada should immediately assume full and effective control of all prices of essential foodstuffs, cereals, meats, etc.;

"That such fixed prices be not more than those now existing in each case, thereby preventing further increases in the cost of these essential articles to the consumer, assuming that present prevailing prices are ample to stimulate production;

"That such control be exercised effectively, uncompromisingly and with penalties attached to the violation of such regulations as from time to time are established by the Government."

How it Worked in Alberta.

J. Wheatley, Bankhead, Alberta, explained how successful the wage-raising system introduced among the miners in his district had been. He said that, under contract with the company they worked for, the men got increases every time the price of food raisod. It had meant $1,250,000 to the miners in extra money in a few months.

J. Kavanagh, Vancouver, argued that, with the inexhaustible demand for foodstuffs, it was impossible to keep the prices from rising. Then, again, gold would not buy so much now as some years ago.

Mr. Draper's amendment was substituted for that of the Hamilton Trades and Labour Council and carried by a large majority.

NORTHERN FARMERS URGENTLY NEED HELP.

Wet Weather Threatens Heavy Loss and All Possible Aid is Required.

COBALT, Sept. 19.—The loss of approximately one million dollars' worth of the crops of the farmers along the T. & N. O. Railway between Cobalt and Cochrane is threatened unless dry weather sets in, and unless a large number of volunteer farmers can be secured to gather the harvest. About three weeks ago wet weather set in, with the result that the greater portion of what promised to be one of the bumper crops in the history of the district is threatened with ruin.

CLAIM DIVIDENDS WENT TO BANK

VICTORY BOND HOLDERS APPEAR BEFORE ASSESSMENT COURT ON APPEAL

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—Income from Victory bonds was the subject of an appeal before the Court of Revision when the Canadian General Electric Company protested being assessed for income on $3,000,000 worth of Victory bonds bought in 1917, and later sold. The company, its representative states, did not receive any dividends on these bonds, as it was applied on borrowings from the bank.

Mr. Ardagh claimed this had nothing to do with it, and the company will submit a statement regarding the disposition of the bonds.

Machine Caught Fire in Mid-air

How a British Pilot Kept on the Job in Spite of Flames.

The British Press Bureau (London) has furnished the following sketch obtained from an official source:

"We were flying over No Man's Land spotting for the artillery, and by constant changing direction and height we had pretty well escaped the attention of the ubiquitous Hun 'Archie.' The 'shoot' to locate a canal bridge was progressing satisfactorily and our battery would soon be all ranged, but our engine was running very badly. Suddenly a smell of burning wood reached my nostrils. I looked down and found the framework near my feet blackened and smoldering. The engine's frequent backfiring must have made a torch of the exhaust. I switched off the petrol supply and opened the throttle. One steep, swift dive and the fire was out.

"Then I hesitated. Should we hurry off for home or continue the 'shoot?' I turned to the observer. He leaned over and inspected the damage. It was not very bad really. He shouted into my ear:

"'Let's carry on.'

"I climbed again and we continued the 'shoot.' Our battery was very soon firing as a battery — all guns—our last messages having completed the registration and now shells were dropping all about the target. Our part was done—pretty well done, too—and in a few minutes' time the bridge was entirely destroyed. In our excitement the faulty engine had been forgotten, until, with one last splutter, it gave out completely. It stopped. This time the machine was really on fire, and I was too late. The woodwork was burning independently of petrol or exhaust, and to dive now would only fan the flames about my feet. Yet we had to get to the ground, and very quickly, too.

"I put the machine into a violent sideslip away from the lines. The flames were thus fanned toward the opposite wing. The observer, leaning over my shoulder, played his fire extinguisher about my feet. This enabled me to keep control of the rudder bar. We were down to 1,500 feet, but the heat was now intense.

"The fire had reached the right wing. Would the fabric continue to support us? I pushed down the nose to hasten our descent, keeping the machine also in a side-slip. The rush of air slightly changed the direction of the flames. We were nearly down. There were very few shell holes and hardly any hedges. Unless we were unlucky we should not meet any serious obstacle.

"The ground rushed toward us. I took off the 'bank' and 'flattened out.' One landing wheel touched with a bump, broke away and continued its course independently. The machine pirouetted on the remaining wheel, and finally crashed on its nose and left wing. It was quite a wild affair, and we were unhurt.

"Springing to the ground we hurried away from the burning wreck, only just in time, for a few seconds later the petrol tank exploded. We looked at each other, and I am quite sure we neither of us regretted having chanced it and finished our job."

If Kaiser Sends Ships, "God Help Them"

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. — "If the Kaiser sends his ships out to fight the fleets of the Allied nations I only can say, 'God help them!'"

Thus Representative Daniel Riordan, of the Congressional Committee, appointed to investigate American naval activities in foreign waters, epitomized the alert preparedness of the Allied fleets in the North Sea upon his return to New York.

"A seventy-eight mile cordon of floating steel stands guard," he said. "Even though the German Navy were fifty times greater than it is reported to be it would meet complete defeat and destruction if it ever ventured beyond the protection of Kiel. It would be a maring slaughter, in which the Imperial German flotilla would be blown off the map."

PICTOU STRIKE STILL ON.

Company, in Anticipation of a Long Strike, Removes Horses From Mines.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 20. — No change in the strike situation at Pictou County colliers has taken place. In anticipation of the strike being protracted the management of the Acadia Coal Company have decided to remove the horses from their pits. There are 40 all told, of which 20 will be taken out at once and the other 20 later.

One of the general managers, remarking on the situation, stated last night that the Federal Government had been notified of the impendin strike, but had ignored the matter. Citizens in the mining towns want the Government to send a man down to look into the situation.

CANADA SMASHES OWN SHIP RECORD.

Completing of War Camchin Lowers Mark by About Sixty Per Cent.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—Canada has again smashed all records for speed in wooden shipbuilding. The latest feat has lowered this country's own mark by about 60 per cent.

The "War Camchin," a wooden ship of 3,100 tons, built for the Imperial Munitions Board, was launched by the Foundation Company Ship Yards at Victoria on August 31. Installation of machinery commenced at the Imperial Munitions Board's installation plant at Victoria on September 3. The installation work was completed in 12½ working days. On September 17 a successful sea-going trip was held. This vessel will commence loading cargo within seven days of the trial trip.

The previous record in Canada was held in Quebec.

Preliminary Estimates of the Average Yields Per Acre of the Principal Grain Crops

The Drought and Severe Frosts for July Responsible for Large Acreage of Unproductive Area—Stocks of Wheat, Barley and Oats.

CONDITION OF OTHER FIELD CROPS

OTTAWA, September 20.—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports to-day its preliminary estimate of the average yields per acre of the principal grain crops in Canada, the condition of field crops, the areas unproductive and the stocks of wheat, barley and oats in farmers' hands, as compiled from the reports of Crop Correspondents on August 31. The preliminary estimate of the total yields of grain, usually issued at this date, is deferred pending completion of the compilation of the returns of areas sown, as collected jointly throughout Canada by the Dominion and Provincial Governments.

AVERAGE YIELDS PER ACRE

For the whole of Canada in 1918 the average yield per acre is estimated at 16⅓ bushels for fall wheat, as compared with 21⅓ bushels last year and 23 bushels the ten year average for 1908-17. For spring wheat the average is 12½ bushels as compared with 15⅔ bushels last year and 19 bushels, the decennial average. For other grain crops the respective averages are in bushels per acre as follows: Oats 33 as against 30¼ and 35¼; barley 25⅗, as against 23 and 27; rye, 14⅕ as 16¼ against 18¼ and 18¼; flax 8 as against 6⅓ and 10⅕. For the Prairie Provinces the estimated average yields per acre for 1918 are as follows the yields for 1917 and for the ten year period 1908-17 being placed within brackets. Manitoba: Wheat 17 (16 3-4; 17 3-4); oats 38 3-4 (30¾; 35½); barley 29¾ (22¾; 25 3-4); rye 18¾ (17¼; 18); flax 11 3-4 (9; 11¾). Saskatchewan: Wheat 11⅓ (14¼; 18⅖); oats 31¼ (27¼; 38¼); barley 22½ (21; 26-3-4); rye 15 (18 3-4; 20 3-4); flax 8⅓ (6¼; 10¼); Alberta: wheat 10 (18⅘; 22½); oats 23¾ (34; 42); barley 16 3-4 (32; 38¼); rye 15 3-4 (20½; 23½); flax 5¾ (7; 10⅕).

CONDITION OF OTHER FIELD CROPS.

The condition of other field crops in Canada on August 31, measure against 100 as representing the average decennial yield, is as follows: Mixed grains 100, peas and beans 106, buckwheat 91, corn for husking 87, potatoes, turnips, mangolds, etc. 95, corn for fodder 96, sugar beets 94, pastures 87.

AREAS UNPRODUCTIVE.

In consequence of drought and the severe frosts of July, the areas in the three Prairie Provinces and in British Columbia that will fail to produce grain crops are exceptionally large. Crop Correspondents were requested to estimate at the end of August the percentage of areas sown that would (a) prove a total loss and (b) that would be cut green .The returns show that for all four provinces 13 p.c. of the area sown to wheat will be a total loss, whilst 13 p.c. will be cut green, the area not producing grain being therefore 26 p.c. For oats the percentages are 8 total loss, 15 p.c. cut green 23 p.c. not producing grain; for barley 6 p.c. total loss, 7 p.c. cut green, 13 p.c. no grain; for rye 10 p.c. total loss, 7 p.c. cut green, 17 p.c. no grain; for flax 14 p.c. total loss.

STOCKS OF WHEAT, BARLEY AND OATS IN CANADA.

Inquiries made by the Bureau show that about 4 million bushels of wheat, 1,453,500 bushels of barley and about 15 million bushels of oats remained in stock in Canada at the end of the Canadian crop year on August 31. For wheat the quantity estimated as in farmers' hands is about 400,000 bushels, of barley 354,000 bushels and of oats 8¼ million bushels, the balance in each case being in the terminal, public and country elevators. The quantitites do not include grain in transit nor grain in flour mills or retail hands. The returns from Crop Correspondents are remarkable as indicating an almost absolute clearance by farmers of their stocks 1917 grain especially as regards wheat and barley.

Good Value and How to Get it

YOUR interest, as a member of the consuming public, and ours as Canada's largest manufacturers of shoes, are really identical. They may be summed up in a single phrase: "Quality Shoes at Fair Prices."

A fair price today is a higher price than usual, because the cost of every item of material and labor which goes into a pair of shoes has increased greatly and is still increasing.

In order that you may continue to get quality at fair prices, we shall feature in advertisements certain specific shoes which we know will give you good value. From our knowledge and experience, we will suggest to you the best methods of buying, whether you select shoes of our manufacture or not.

We ask you to buy for service rather than merely for style; to go to a reliable dealer, and to look for the manufacturer's trade-mark on the shoes. By so doing you may be assured of good value for your money.

NEW LIQUOR MADE FROM COAL OIL AND WOOD ALCOHOL

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 19.—A modest and recognized genius of this locality has recently gained no little notoriety through his claimed discovery that by the judicious mixture of a certain amount of coal oil with wood alcohol the latter stimulant may be deprived of its death dealing qualities and converted into a comparatively non-fatal beverage.

Those who have had the opportunity of viewing at close range the practical demonstration of the discovery assert that while it is barely possible death will not immediately follow more than one dose of the "booze" the matter is open to discussion, and they are led to believe that those who once offer their lives upon the experimental altar will not at once ask the inventor to "set 'em up again."

The first official tester of the deathless wood alcohol is said to have immediately left the place of experiment and to have stolen his own watch; "it is not," asserts this "sport," "any kind of liquor a thrifty man ought to monkey with."

Since the great drought of several years ago hit this section of the earth wood alcohol has been the one bright spot in the horizon of the rum demon. It has all the required kick of the old genuine "hooch," but a search of former records indicated too many fatalities in the lists of those who sought solace and cheap liquor in alcohol of wood origin.

"Coal oil may take instant death away from it," is the present verdict, "but before we purchase petroleum in wholesale lots let's watch the new hummocks in the cemetery a while."

Impressions of a Prisoner

"AT the German war prison at Crefeld we were only twenty miles away from the Dutch border," said Capt. Len Morrison, who recently reached Canada after being exchanged by the Germans. Capt. Morrison was captured at the second battle of Ypres, and was wounded in both legs. One leg was very severely wounded with a compound fracture, but the German doctors saved the leg, which is now nearly as good as ever.

"At Crefeld three French officers made an escape into Holland, but none of us tried it. It was a very well guarded camp, and the Frenchmen escaped by dressing themselves up as a German under officer and two privates, and marched themselves right over the border. When they got there they had the nerve to write the commandant of the prison and ask that their own clothes be sent to them in Holland," he said. "I do not know if they ever got them or not."

Capt. Morrison for the last six months of his imprisonment was in Switzerland, where he was sent as an invalid from Germany. He explains there is an agreement between Switzerland, Germany and Great Britain that an equal number of officers from each can be sent to Switzerland. The Swiss Government is responsible for them. This is called exchanging prisoners.

"I am not repatriated, however, which is quite a different thing. Officers who are repatriated are on parole and cannot fight further in the war," he said. "There is no limit to the number of officers from each side who may be repatriated. That depends on the medical officers who decide whether or not a man ought to be sent home."

Continuing, he remarked that there was a rumor in Switzerland that two German officers had given their parole and then gone back to Germany to be later recaptured by the French as captains in the German army. "I cannot say that this is true, but it was spoken of in Switzerland when I was there, and most people seemed to believe it."

Speaking of the conditions in Switzerland, Capt. Morrison said that officers there have a very good time indeed and are able to get anything they want. The town where he stayed was Murren and there the people were all Swiss-French. The German officers are sent to one of the German districts of Switzerland and are of course never seen by the British and French.

The great feature in Switzerland is the amount of German propaganda which one sees everywhere. In every little farmhouse there are pictures of the German victories in Russia and in the west front as well. The people do not understand it. They say that Germany must be winning when they see all the pictures which are sent out from Germany. The Allies are not doing this work at all," he remarked.

While a prisoner at the beginning of the war immediately after the second battle of Ypres, Capt. Morrison said that he had the good fortune to be sent to a German civilian hospital for treatment of his wounds. There was only one other officer there and he was a Frenchman.

"I sent home some X-ray pictures of my leg and they were shown to some of the prominent surgeons in the city and they remarked that the saving of my leg was a very wonderful piece of surgery, so I have no fault to find with the treatment I received. I heard that some English officers were not so lucky. The Germans were so incensed with Britain for coming into the war that they heaped all sorts of indignities on the officers whom they captured."

How did you spend the two years in Germany when you were a prisoner?" he was asked. "I did quite a lot of studying," he replied, "I took up French and Russian. I did not study German at all."

The officers in the German prisons are not required to do work of any kind and they may walk about as they like. Walking in the country around the prison is the usual diversion and parties of thirty or forty officers march over the countryside avoiding the large towns, and visiting in the country.

During the whole term of his imprisonment, Capt. Morrison declared that it was an article of faith with the Germans that the Americans would never come into the war. The fact that America is taking such a large share in it now must have a very great effect on their morale, he thinks, when the truth filters down to the people from the soldiers at the front.

A Zulu Chief.

There has just died at the Brockville General Hospital, Mr. Charles Cetewayo, who by right of birth was a king in his own country, he being the eldest son of the famous King Cetawayo, of Zululand. For some time past he had practiced as a mining engineer in Ontario, being engaged in investigating mica deposits near Westport, for Kingston capitalists, when taken ill.

A New Complication.

Ottawa has been asked for a ruling in the case of a Seventh Day Adventist now incarcerated in Lethbridge jail for declining to work on Saturday — which is the Sabbath of his sect. The prisoner claims the same right of tolerance which he enjoyed in the army, and the warden is all at sea, the prisoner being the first of his faith ever to enter an Alberta jail.

LAKE HAS APPROPRIATE NAME

Body of Water in Eastern Turkestan Resembles a Pendulum in Its Regular Swing.

Lake Lop-nor, the wandering lake of the desert of Tayla-makan, in eastern Turkestan, is the termination of the River Tarkin. Like a pendulum, the lake has swung from the south to the north of the desert, and back again, since the memory of man. The wanderings of the lake are a tradition handed down from father to son for centuries. The natives of the lake shore have always followed the waters.

At present Lop-nor is in the southern part of the desert; a shallow reedy body of water hardly deserving the name of lake. Murky and unpleasant, it furnishes a livelihood to the inhabitants of its banks, the majority of whom are fishermen. In their frail shallow boats they cut through the reeds, fishing and hunting for water fowl along the banks. In some places the reeds are too thick to admit the passage of the boat; in such cases, however, it is possible to walk over the water on rafts of dried and rotting stems. The chief native delicacy is the eggs of the reed-birds.

Lake Lop-nor is one of the hottest places on the map in the summer and the coldest in the winter. During the winter months the lake is entirely frozen over, the temperature diving to 20 degrees below zero. In the summer the combination of a temperature of 106 degrees and the innumerable flies and mosquitoes which swarm on the banks make Lop-nor anything but a summer resort.

The explanation of the lake's wanderings lies in the fact that Tarim carries every year quantities of silt to the lake bed, which slowly rises. In time, a hundred years or so, the river must seek a new outlet, and the pendulum swings to the north or south of the desert, as the case may be.

THE ONYX SHOE

BELLEVILLE

Mrs. A. Lott, 49 Grier street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "About nine years ago I was a nervous wreck—so bad that my arms and shoulders had to be bandaged, and sometimes my friends had difficulty keeping me in bed. One time, I went to the hospital to see my sister, and while there became so nervous that my arms and feet had to be bandaged and I had to be brought home. Through reading of it in the Receipt Book, I was induced to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after taking several boxes I began to recover and get stronger, and now feel perfectly well. I am very pleased to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all my friends."

BRANTFORD

Mrs. A. North, Grand street north, Brantford, Ont., writes: "Both my husband and I can speak very highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, having used it with splendid results. My husband suffered from weakness and a rundown system, and became so bad he finally had to give up work. He also had spells of melancholia. He commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after a treatment of this medicine I never saw such a change in anybody. He is now able to attend to his work, and is enjoying splendid health.

"Before I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness and a pain around the heart. The Nerve Food built up my system, made me feel stronger in every way, and relieved me of the annoying symptoms from which I had suffered. We always keep Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house ready for use in case they are needed."

PETERBORO'

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgety feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep for only five minutes, I would lie awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going, and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

How the Good Word is Passed Along

IT is over the teacup that women exchange confidences. Not infrequently "Health" is the subject, and this often leads to the discussion of the merits of Dr. Chase's medicines, and more particularly his Nerve Food.

The doctor had a fine appreciation of the needs of the feminine system, and had this in mind when developing this great restorative treatment for the nerves.

More blood—and always more blood—is required in order to make up the periodic loss and to supply the nourishment required to sustain the delicate and complicated nervous system.

Because no treatment ever seemed to meet this need so nicely as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, this food cure has attained wide popularity and enormous sales.

There is sure to come times in every woman's life when such restorative, blood-building treatment is required. It is a blessing to know just where to turn for help. Ask your friends about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and then give it a chance to build you up with new energy and vitality.

LONDON

Mrs. S. Meathrel, 23 Hyla street, London, Ont., writes: "About a year ago I had a complete collapse from my nerves. I was taken to the hospital for a treatment, but it did not give me much relief. Then I went to the country for a change of air, but after my return home I did not feel much better. I used to have nervous spells, when my limbs would begin to shake, then grow cold, and I would be completely exhausted. I was also troubled with an accumulation of gas on my stomach, which caused palpitation of the heart. At last I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after I had used them for a while I could see that they were helping me, so I continued using them until I got well again. I became real strong and healthy, could sleep well at night, and was able to do my own housework. As I got stronger, the nervous spells disappeared, and I have not had one since."

WOODSTOCK

Mrs. Lydia MacKay, 285 Hunter street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "I suffered from a weak and rundown condition of the system. I also had severe headaches. I got some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, took a good treatment of this medicine, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel much stronger now, have got rid of the headaches, and am able to do my own work without any difficulty. I have recommended the Nerve Food to many of my friends, and would recommend it to anyone suffering from nervousness of any kind."

GALT, ONT.

Miss Alice Howes, 21 Haddington street, Galt, Ont., writes: "I was very ill with anaemia, could not sleep at night, and my appetite seemed entirely gone. I suffered in this way for nearly three years, and had treatment from two doctors in Toronto, where I was living at the time, but did not get any relief. I became completely run down, and as I did not see any immediate hopes of getting better, I went back to live with my mother in Galt. I thought perhaps the change of air might do me good. My mother saw that I was in a bad state, because my nerves were affected, and everywhere I went I used to take dizzy and fainting spells. My hands and limbs would become numb, I would see black specks before my eyes, and cold perspiration would come out on me. My mother had been taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with excellent results, and she advised me to do the same. But it is hard for me to take pills, so I went to a doctor in Galt instead. However, his treatment did me no good, so I at last decided to follow mother's advice. I began taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and gradually found myself getting better. I soon was able to sleep at night without any difficulty, my appetite came back, and I began to gain back my natural color. After taking about twelve boxes of this medicine I was able to return to my work in Toronto. My friends there all noticed the improvement in my condition, and I am now stronger and healthier than I have been for a long, long time."

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

DONT'S FOR WIVES.

The leader of Rockefeller's church at Cleveland, Ohio recently took the above heading as his text, and he asked his hearers to put the following ten don'ts in their wives' mirrors.

1. Don't marry a man for a living, but for love. Manhood without money is better than money without manhood.

2. Don't overdress nor underdress; common sense is sometimes better than style.

3. A wife with a hobble skirt and a husband with patched trousers make a poor pair. A woman can throw more out of a window with a spoon than a man can put into the cellar with a shovel.

How Not to Run a House.

4. Don't think that the way to run a house is to run away from it. It is wrong to go around lecturing other women on how to bring up children, while you are neglecting your own.

5. Don't tell your troubles to your neighbours. They have enough of their own. Fight it out with yourself if it takes all summer.

6. Don't nag. The saloonkeeper is always glad to welcome your husband with a smile.

7. Don't try to get more out of a looking glass than you put into it. Nature's sunshine is better for a woman's beauty than man's powders and paints.

Whist Parties as Perils.

8. Don't make gamblers and drunkards of your children by running whist parties for prizes and serving punch with a stick in it.

9. Don't forget to tell the truth, especially to the conductor about the age of your child; honesty is worth more to you and them than a nickel. A boy who is 8 years old at home and 6 on the cars will soon learn other things that are not so.

10. Don't forget that home is a woman's kingdom, where she reigns as queen. To be a mother of a Lincoln, a Garfield, or a McKinley, is to be the mother of a prince.

We saw a group of content the other morning—a happy boy about 14 years old, who was driving a dirt cart along the street. The lines were secure between his knees; the horses were jogging merrily along; the sun shone pleasantly; his coat was off; and his calico shirt looked clean and cool; his hat was tipped back upon his head and he had two pebbles that he had picked up from the dirt, and these he was tossing, throwing one up as the other fell, catching each in his turn, and on his face was a happy boyish look of content that any world-weary man would give a fortune to wear as his own. Looking at him we thought life is pretty much what we make it after all. Happiness does not spring from wealth or leisure but from a contented mind. We doubt if there is a happier heart in our city than was that of the boy riding upon his dirt laden cart, tossing his pebbles in the sunshine.

Your Boy.

You do not know what is in him. Bear with him; be patient; wait. Feed him; clothe him; love him; he is a boy, and most boys are bad. You think him so light hearted, and fear that he is light-headed as well. But remember he calls you father. When he played in your lap, you fondly hoped he would some day be a great and useful man. Now that he has grown larger, and his young blood drives him with gleeful sport, and makes him impatient of serious things—rattling, playful, thoughtless—you almost despair. But don't be snappish and snarlish, and make him feel that you are disappointed in him. He is your boy, and you are to live in him. He bears your name, and is to send it down the stream of time. He inherits your fortune and fame, and is to transmit them to generations to come.

It cannot be otherwise. A daughter divides your fortune, transmits less of your fame and loses your name. A boy is more nearly yourself than anything else can be. It is through your boy that you go down in history; through your boy you are to live in the future; by him you are to act upon the generation that is to come.

It may be difficult to govern him, but be patient. He may seem adverse to everything useful and good; but wait. No one can tell what is in the boy. He may surprise you some day. Hope. Let him grow. While his body grows larger and stronger, his mental and moral nature, may expand, and improve.

Good morals will be the crowning attribute of your peaceful home, "the crown of living stars" that shall adorn the night of tribulation and the pillar of cloud and of fire in the pilgrimage to a better country. It will strew the family threshold with the flowers of promise and enshrine the memories of loved ones gone before in all the fragrance of that blessed hope of reunion in Heaven which looms up from a dying hour. It shall give to the infant soul its perfect flowering and expand it in all the fullness of a generous love making "lustrous in the livery of divine knowledge." Then in the dark hour of home separation and bereavement, when the question is put to the mourning parents, "Is it well with the child, is it well with thee?" You can answer with joy "It is well."

The love which every child brings with it is in itself the very strongest indication of the needs of the child. Love is like sunshine; without it there can be no harmonious growth or development. As well expect a fruit tree to bear delicious fruit in a cellar as to expect a child to grow up in symmetrical manhood or womanhood without love. As invariably we appropriate the sunniest nook in the garden to the nursery, so must the warmest and sunniest apartments of the heart be given to the little ones. Nurtured in an atmosphere of love, their various powers expand in unconscious but harmonious beauty.

JOINED NAVY ON EGGS.

Ate Three Dozen a Day For Two Weeks to Make Weight.

Benson Leichhardt, of Bowling Green, Ky., decided recently that he was going to join the Navy, having passed his eighteenth birthday, but was rejected because of underweight. Benson went home and ate three dozen eggs a day for fourteen days, gained twelve pounds, went back to the recruiting officer and was finally enlisted as an apprentice seaman.

A Drop On a Touchy Corn

Instant relief! Then corn or callus lifts off with fingers.

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without one twinge of pain.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful! It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. Women should keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn ache twice.

Men Are Taught How to Estimate Height Distance

One of the Best Methods Adopted is Teaching While on Route Marches.

Practice Alone Can Teach Correct Range Finding Without Instruments.

By Capt. H. C. C. Pollard, of the British Army.

(Written for the United Press).

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Every British soldier is expected to be able to judge distance approximately, and every non-commissioned officer and officer is expected to do it with fair accuracy. It is an essential part of his training. Without it he cannot give his orders correctly.

Most people have their own mental unit of comparison. Such and such a place is a mile away, and they always think of distances in terms of comparison with that mental picture. But though to the ordinary man, half a mile or so is close enough reckoning, the soldier must be able to estimate distances in units of 50 yards or less, and he can only teach himself to do this by hard practice. It is by practice that he gets a store of mental units of comparison which enable him to judge distances in the field.

One of the best ways of teaching men distance judging is on route marches. At a halt the men estimate the distance of objects visible ahead of them along the road. When the march is resumed these estimates are checked by pacing the distances. In this way the men are taught to take an interest in distance judging, and a competitive spirit is encouraged among them.

In the same way the ranges of all prominent objects near camp are carefully taken with a range finder, and the men are taught by heart the various distances. Natural objects, such as houses, average sized trees, or roads where men or traffic move are preferred to merely landscape features, for men retain a mental picture of such objects best.

Accurate Rules Help.

In addition to the "mental picture" method of estimating ranges there are certain rule-of-thumb methods. One of these is the observation of objects through a service rifle barrel with the bolt removed and the eye placed immediately above the butt plate. Thus a standing man completely fills the diameter of the barrel at 300 yards distance. If he occupies one-half he is some 550 yards away, and at eight hundred yards he occupies a third. This system is good for ranges up to 800 yards, but it requires a good light to see a dismounted man through the barrel at this range.

For close ranges the following table is an accurate guide to a man of normal vision:

Mouth and eyes of a man can be seen at 50 yards.

Eyes appear as points at 100 yards.

Buttons and details of uniform can be seen at 200 yards.

Face can be seen at 300 yards.

Shoulders are square at 400 yards.

Shoulders go bottle-shaped at 500 yards.

Head is visible as a dot at 600 yards.

Head is invisible at 700 yards.

Man looks like a post at 800 yards.

Half-Way Landmarks.

In long distances the best way is to select an object which appears to be half way, to estimate the distance is to it by one or other of the methods and then to double the estimate.

Flashes of guns at night are useful for range finding. Sound travels about 360 yards a second. A more accurate computation can be made by counting 11 beats to 3 seconds, each beat between the sight of the flash and the noise of the sound equalling 100 yards. But here again practice is required to estimates the beats correctly.

All the foregoing rules are for good light, in mist, when looking across a valley or when estimating distance lying down, the tendency is to overestimate distance.

A distinct object will lead to underestimation and an indistinct one to over-estimation.

Practice alone can teach correct range finding without instrum but it can be learned.

COAL ENOUGH IF IT IS HUSBANDED

Ottawa, Sept. 19. — Unless the coming winter is one of exceptional severity the supply of coal available for use in Canada in the opinion of Fuel Controller C. A. Magrath, should be sufficient if properly husbanded. Of anthracite coal Canada's allotment is somewhat smaller this year than last, but of bituminous coal some 1,200,000 more are being brought into the country. Mr. Magrath maintains that the Dominion Fuel Control organization has done all in its power to secure supplies of coal for Canada, and by regulation, to secure an equitable division thereof.

Municipal authorites, he holds, must do their part, by appointing fuel controllers to ensure proper distribution of coal available for consumption in their own localities.

Those municipalities which fail to appoint fuel controllers and to take action, he predicts, will be the ones most in danger of feeling the pinch of coal shortage should the approaching winter be an unusually long and severe one.

Representatives of firms engaged in the manufacture of musical instruments, automobiles, liquors and clay products were here to-day conferring together and with the Fuel Controller respecting the manner in which the proposed limitation of coal consumption by those industries is to be carried out. It is understood that a plan has not yet been finally prepared. The manufacturers will, it is said, continue their conferences with a view of arranging for a fair division among them of a supply of coal allotted to their group of industries.

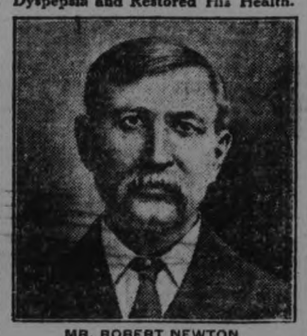
"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Conquered Dyspepsia and Restored His Health.



MR. ROBERT NEWTON.

Little Bras d'Or, C. B.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years. I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches, and did not sleep well at night. I lost so much weight — going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous". ROBERT NEWTON.

Harvesting and Storing Vegetables

If the fully- green specimens are picked being frozen, and each speci- vrapped in paper and stored in boxes, they will be found, tests made at the Experimental to ripen better than by expos- em to the sun. Even if put into boxes without wrapping each nen, they ripen well.

If the plants are pulled eplanted in boxes in the cellar, ept watered, they will go on de- ng, and one can have cauliflow- some weeks. Brussels sprouts lso be replanted in this way of these vegetables may, how- be left in the ground for some yet.

If cabbage begin to split and it is not yet time to harvest them, the splitting will be prevented to some extent by twisting the plants so as to loosen them. This checks the flow of sap into the head. If the cellar is warm and dry, and the cabbage have to be harvested owing to the frost, they will keep well for a time outside if covered with leaves.

Where the accommodation is poor, celery may be kept outside in the soil well into the winter by opening a trench, preferably a narrow one fifteen or sixteen inches wide, and deep enough so that the tops of the celery will come about level with the surface of the ground. The celery plants are put close together in it, and before there are severe frosts, a thin layer of straw or leaves is put over the top. When the cold weather comes a heavier covering of leaves may be put over, if it is desirable to leave the celery longer, and then twelve to fifteen inches of soil over that. By putting sufficient leaves or straw over the soil again, frost may be kept out, and the celery dug out as required.

In harvesting potatoes, any which show signs of decay should be kept separate from the rest and used first, thus helping to avoid the devlopment of rot when stored. Potatoes should be dry when they are stored.

Keep onions dry, spread thinly. Squashes, pumpkins and citrons should be kept in a moderately warm, not a cool, place.

Chicken's Feet Make Wonderful Soup

Some time ago the Butcher's Advocate directed the attention of the trade to the food value of chicken feet. A recent clipping from an Illinois newspaper is of interest in this connection.

"That chicken feet make wonderful soup is very well known to the chefs serving our large hotels, exclusive clubs, etc., but the average town and city housewife is blissfully ignorant of the fact.

"Here is something which every dealer—whether in a large market or in a small town—can take up in an educational way by passing the word out among his customers and asking them to tell others not to throw away chicken feet, but to clean them properly and make soup. Almost any woman who has the suggestion ought to know how to proceed; but if not, she may find out by referring to a cook book.

EMPOWER LAYMEN TO BAPTISE CHILD.

Synod Gives Authority for Ceremony in Extreme Emergencies.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—By an amendment to the service for Infant Baptism made at yesterday afternoon's session of the Anglican Synod, the new revised prayer book will contain a rubric which will draw attention to the fact that Infant Baptism by laymen is permissible, and also giving instructions therefor. The rubric added reads as follows: "That if no lawful minister may be had and the child be in danger of death, then let one of those present pour water upon him and say, 'I baptize thee in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, Amen.'"

Somehow the things we imagine would make us partially happy are generally possessed by others.

CREATE A LARGE CREDIT BY A SMALL DEPOSIT

When you take out a life insurance policy you are making the biggest bank deposit you ever made at one time. Did you ever put $5,000 through the receiving teller's window and say, "Credit that to my account?" Well, when you pay the first premium on a life insurance policy for that amount, you are really paying the first instalment on your new bank account. You have actually provided that entire sum—against the day that is coming to you some time—the one on which you will never get an extension of time. That is banking in a new sense and banking with common sense and foresight.

Why not arrange for this Deposit with the Sun Life Assurance Company, the largest Canadian Life Assurance Company—Assets exceed $89,000,000.

BOY KILLED TRYING MOVIE HERO STUNT

RECEIVED FATAL SHOCK WHEN HE CLIMBED POLE AND GRASPED WIRE.

CHAPLEAU, Sept. 19.—Arthur Payne, a High School lad of 13 years, lies dead at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Fred Payne, of this town, as a result of trying to intimate the "stunt" of a moving-picture hero which he had seen at the local show a few nights ago.

On Saturday evening last the lad and his younger brother witnessed a movie film in which the "hero", with the aid of wire, twisted around his feet, climbed a telephone pole, and by means of his hands traveled along the wires.

For several days the boys have been trying to imitate what they had seen, and yesterday afternoon, about 5.30, Arthur climbed a pole opposite his father's house, and grasping the Electric Light Company's power line with one hand swung his foot over it, thus completing the circuit, and received the high voltage through his body. After receiving the shock he fell to the street below.

The lad was carried to his home across the street, where he expired.

Every infantry battalion of the line, with the exception of rifle corps, carries two colours as standards, called respectively the King's colour and the regimental colour, the latter bearing on it the regimental "honours," or the names of the campaigns and battles in which they have been engaged.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Awakening

By MINNIE M. TOWNSEND

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"'By, Myra, I'll be late for lunch, but if you get hungry don't wait. Molly won't mind warming mine over."

Myra, comfortably settled in the easiest chair of the sitting room, lazily waved a slim white hand to her mother's cheery good-by, and turning toward the window watched the lively little body cross the street and join several other dear mother people on the corner. Myra laughed scornfully.

"I'm surprised at mother; such a motley crowd, tall, short, fat, lean, rich and poor."

Myra, however, failed to take note of the one connecting link among the women. Each one carried a huge sewing bag and everyone from old Mrs. McCane's worn brown lining monstrosity to the wealthy Mrs. Van Eaton's creation of satin and ribbon was overflowing with its burden of brown and gray yarn and partially finished garments for Uncle Sam's soldier boys.

Myra yawned and turned lazily to a book in her lap, but somehow she could not get interested. A coming party was uppermost in her mind and she was having rosy visions of herself in the new satin gown which she had ordered just that morning. She was wondering if she could get slippers to match the delicate hue of her dress material, and if she had better have her hair done by a hair dresser or trust to her own nimble fingers to get just the correct amount of wave into the glossy strands of bronze. Pleasant reveries were interrupted by the insistent peal of the telephone bell.

Her eager greeting of her dearest chum was cut short in horrified dismay.

"Cut out the party? Surely, you must be mistaken, Dora—why I ordered my dress today. On account of me war? My soul! This old war makes me tired. I don't see what this country got into it for, anyhow. I wish to goodness I lived in a warless age . . . What's that—make comfort bags instead of dance? Well, of all the nonsense. No, I won't help. It makes me tired. No, I said, Dora. 'By."

Myra returned to her easy chair, pouting dreadfully. She caught up the book she had tried to read and flung it to a far corner of the library table. Her childish spite thus appeased, she slumped down into the luxuriant depths of the chair and sulked herself to sleep.

Her brother awakened her later by flinging the morning newspaper into her lap. Myra turned lazily to the woman's page and read the fashion talk first. Then she skimmed the lovelorn letters and read the next chapter in a thrilling serial of love and adventure. That digested, she turned in a bored fashion to the jokes.

One or two rather scandalous headlines caught her eye, but as far as the remainder of the paper was concerned it might just as well have been blank.

Her brother finally turned wistful eyes toward the feminine heap in the easy chair.

"Awful, isn't it?" he inquired glumly.

Myra surveyed him lazily. "What's awful, Bob?"

"Didn't you read the war news?" he asked sharply.

She grunted in disgust:

"I should say not; I hear enough of the old war. Why, just think, Bob, they've postponed our club party on account of the war, and I ordered my dress—"

"Myra!"

There was a new note in her brother's voice. She glanced up quickly, and the expression on his face made her get slowly to her feet, her eyes wide and questioning.

"Don't you dare talk like that," he continued, huskily. "An old party—and real men dying for their country and for right. Read that."

Mechanically she took the sheet he held out to her and glanced over it carelessly, as though a cursory look would reveal the cause of his perturbation. "Do you mean this, Bob? Why, it's only a list of the casualties," she said, reprovingly, as though such a list could be of no special interest to them.

"Only! Read 'em, I said."

Dumfounded, she read them down. Suddenly she stiffened, peered closer at the printed sheet and then turned in a bewildered fashion to her brother.

"It can't be he, Rob; why, Bert was only a boy—just a boy—he can't be dead."

"It is true. He was only a boy, but he died for his country, while you—hate to give up an old party."

She did not heed the reproof. Staring at the familiar name, she was darting back over the years to their high school days. Albert Blake had graduated in her class, just barely acquiring the necessary points to let him pass out into the world with a diploma.

Back over the years she slipped. In the grammar grades he was a big, overgrown tease. Too silly to be really popular, he had laughed his way through the grades. The feminine portion of the school had always steered clear of him, as wherever a jolly, good-natured face shone there was always to be heard the squeal of a hair-pulled lass.

Myra's eyes were misty as she remembered the boy. Suddenly they brightened. Across memory's page was coming a long-forgotten incident. The one time when she had really admired the lad and forgot his much-be freckled countenance. She turned animatedly to her brother, anxious to tell him of this one worth-while thing Bert had done in her presence.

"Rob, Bert did have a brave nature, even though perhaps we didn't realize it at the time. I remember one beautiful summer day, when he and I were going home from school together. We were crossing a swampy field over a narrow path. Suddenly a nasty, little green snake reared its head just ahead of me in the path. Horrified, I squealed my loudest. Bert, who was chasing a butterfly just in back of me, hurried near to see what the trouble was. I suggested that we step aside and let the reptile go its way, but Bert emphatically said no, the younger children were coming just behind us and they, too, would come across the snake. Though I remonstrated, boldly he took heavy stones and crushed the menacing creature before the other children came along."

She paused reminiscently, and then, as if some sudden understanding had taken possession of her, her eyes widened and a new light came into their dark depths.

"Oh Rob, I never thought about it in that light before, but what Bert did that day was what he tried to do when he enlisted, wasn't it? It's just what all the soldier boys are trying to do—make this world safer for those who come after. I see it all now. Oh what a selfish creature I've been! Oh Rob, I—I—"

Sobbing, she turned shamed eyes to her brother, and he, boyishly caught her against his shoulder and patted her tousled head comfortingly. After she had quieted down a bit he arranged the chair pillows about her in a somewhat embarrassed fashion, and then stood before her eager eyes, asking the question which his parted lips were shyly refusing to do.

Myra sensed the situation immediately, as she looked up into his face. She sighed a bit woefully, but there was real bravery in her voice as she said wistfully:

"I know what you are aching to ask, Rob, seeing that I have been the objector until now."

"Until now—does that mean that you consent, Sis?"

She nodded, though it cost her a brave effort.

"Yes, I couldn't say otherwise now, Rob. Uncle Sam needs every young man, and—and Bert's place in the ranks is empty."

"Thank you, Sis, he does need us, every one, and I've wanted so much to answer the call. I know mother'll be glad."

An hour later, when Mrs. Crane entered the house, smiling happily with the thought of a morning well spent, a distinct odor of scorched potatoes crept up her nose. Hurrying into the kitchen through the sitting room, a surprising sight met her eyes.

Molly, supremely unconscious of burnt potatoes, was busily superintending the cutting out of a big red cross, while Myra's untrained fingers were clumsily following instructions. The boy, whistling happily, was gathering up the remains of tan silk, from which the dainty sewing bag, hanging across the chair arm, had been cut.

At a glance the mother knew that something unusual had happened, and burnt potatoes and everything else were forgotten until she heard the story of the casualty list and how it had awakened the heart of her daughter at last.

With her arms about her daughter, the mother's eyes looked over the bronze tresses and smiled bravely, proudly at her son, who was soon to be one of Uncle Sam's soldier boys.

Home comfort in all weathers

A poor furnace well installed might give satisfaction for a time.
But a good furnace poorly installed can never be successful,
—while a good furnace properly installed will give best results from the day it is fired up.

The Sunshine Furnace, installed the McClary way, is guaranteed by McClarys to warm every room in your house—to warm it with the right quality, as well as quantity, of heat, —to make your home healthy, pleasant and enjoyable in all weathers.

And it is to do these things a furnace is for—those are the results which mark the successful furnace. The furnace that fails to do them all the time is only a nuisance.

The Sunshine Furnace is a never failing source of pleasure, satisfaction and home comfort.

Engineering Service Free. McClary's own heating engineers are at your service when you buy a Sunshine Furnace, to give you free expert advice on your home-heating requirements. WHEN PLINY VISITED BELGIUM

Great Roman Has Left Us an Interesting Description of Country as He Saw It.

Pliny, the learned and industrious Roman naturalist, who perished in the eruption of Vesuvius, 79 A. D., visited in the course of his duties as an official of the Roman empire, the heroic country which we call Belgium. It is interesting, comments the Protectionist, to recall his description of this country.

"There," he wrote, "the ocean pours in its flood twice every day, and produces a perpetual uncertainty whether the country may be considered as a part of the continent, or of the sea. The wretched inhabitants take refuge on the sand hills or in little huts, which they construct on the summits of lofty stakes, whose elevation is conformable to that of the highest tides.

"When the sea rises they appear like navigators; when it retires they seem as though they had been shipwrecked. They subsist on the fish left by the refluent waters and which they catch in nets formed of rushes or seaweed. Neither tree nor shrub is visible on these shores. The drink of the people is rain water, which they preserve with great care; their fuel, a sort of turf, which they gather and form with the hands. And yet the unfortunate beings dare to complain against their fate when they fall under the power and are incorporated with the empire of Rome!"

HEAVY FINES IMPOSED ON WHISKY SMUGGLERS

ONE CARRIED CARGO OF LIQUOR IN HIS GASOLINE TANK

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 19.—Four foreigners who attempted to smuggle liquor into Canada at this point on a colossal scale were heavily fined by Magistrate Fraser. Tony Bastile, of Hamilton, it is believed, has been carrying on smuggling of liquor for some time, and the customs officers here were given his auto number. They examined his car and found he had divided his gasoline tank into two compartments, eight gallons for whiskey and two for gasoline. In addition he had 24 bottles of whiskey hidden under the seats. He was fined $1,000, and Joco Moxolusa, also of Hamilton, $300. Both had to go to jail, Bastile for six months and the other man four months.

Antonio Pasio, of Hamilton, who had 76 quart bottles of gin hidden under a false seat in his Overland car, was also fined $1,000 and had to go to jail. His companion, Frank Kavanoski, was fined $300. He was the only one who paid. Two women who were with Kavanoski and Pasio, were allowed to go without any charge being laid.

Both cars were confiscated by the authorities and will be sold by the Government.

Appealed to Council.

NERVOUS TROUBLE

The nerve system is the governing system of the whole body, controlling the heart, lungs, digestion and brain; so it is not surprising that nervous disturbances should cause acute distress. The first stages of nervous debility are noted by irritability and restlessness in which the victims seem to be impressed by their nerves. The matter requires immediate attention, for nothing but a suitable treatment will prevent a complete break down. The victim, however, need not despair for even severe nervous disorders may be cured by improving the condition of the blood. It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich blood that this medicine has cured extreme nervous disorders after all other treatment had failed. The nerves thrive on the new blood made by these pills, the appetite improves, digestion is better, sleeplessness no longer troubles the former nerve shattered victim and life generally takes on a cheerful aspect. Every sufferer from nerve trouble, no matter how slight, should lose no time in giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, thus regaining their old-time health and comfort.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

One of the biggest meat dealers in Canada says that there was never a time when people went in more lavishly for the choicer cuts. He accuses young brides of recklessly buying T-bone steaks.

"Get them to cut out porterhouse and try liver for a change and they will not only be better off but they will bring down the price of porterhouse," he vouchsafes.

PRICE OF MILK

NOT TO GO UP.

Producers Postpone Their Decision Reached Three Weeks Ago.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—A change of policy affecting the winter milk prices has come over the Toronto and Peel Milk Producers' Association, and as a result the expected advance of one cent a quart to city consumers will not go into effect on October 1. The decision of the retailers to go far afield for their supply, rather than pay more, probably caused the Toronto and Peel producers to reach the decision to continue the present scale of prices.

Wife and Little Boy

SAVED BY

DR. FOWLER'S

EXTRACT OF

WILD STRAWBERRY

Both Had Dysentery.

Dysentery comes on very suddenly and is one of the worst and most dangerous of all bowel troubles. The pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood. Unless these discharges are checked the sufferer becomes weak and languid, and very often death ensues. There is only one remedy to use in all cases of dysentery or any other looseness of the bowels, and that is "Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry."

It will cure where all others fail. It has been on the market for 73 years.

Don't accept a cheap substitute and thus endanger your health.

Mr. W. J. Metcalfe, Tofield, Alta., writes: "I wish to state that we have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry with good results. I will say that it can't be beat. It saved my wife and little boy last summer, when they were very low with dysentery. We always have a bottle of it in the house, and would not be without it if it cost five dollars a bottle."

The genuine "Dr. Fowler's" is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35c.

CONNAUGHT TO CANADIANS.

Duke Tells Wounded They Have Done Splendid Service.

The Duke of Connaught visited the Hospital for Convalescent Canadian Soldiers at Bear Wood recently. The men were delighted with the privilege of chatting with their late Governor-General, who, on his arrival showed his kindly thought for their comfort by asking that they might stand at ease. He inquired if there were any members of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry present, and had quite a long talk with each of them. There are now about 500 Canadians at Bear Wood, and the duke addressed them as follows:

"I am very glad to have this opportunity of seeing you. I had wanted to come for some time. I am glad to hear you are getting on so well. All of you have been wounded, more or less severely, and all have done splendid service. As one who had the great privilege of having been your Governor-General for five years, it is a very real pleasure to see you all, and to think how splendidly you have maintained the name of Canada in France. You have been in many hard-fought engagements, and I am sure that all Canadian regiments have done exceedingly well, and have every reason to be proud of all the good work done. However charming Bear Wood may be, I only wish you may not be here too long, and that those who go home soon will find all their people well, and proud of the fine work that you have done."

Love, Life and Eugenics.

Suppose the eugenists could have their way and banish love, who would care to live? What purpose would life have? It would have none. There would be no life, only an existence, wearisome and dull. The world feels that love is beautiful, it sees in practice that it is true. Love makes the world, love keeps it, only to love shall it be given in the future. Therefore have poets sung it and story tellers told of it; therefore do eyes shine and cheeks burn for it. Therefore it is the soul of art, of music, of literature.—Atlantic Monthly.

French Capture the Town of Benay in the Fighting South of St. Quentin

Fighting Was Renewed This Morning Between Cambrai and St. Quentin—German Attacks Repulsed.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 21.—In their drive for the outflanking of St. Quentin, on the south, the French last night captured the town of Benay and made progress north of that place, says to-day's War Office announcement.

Fighting was renewed this morning east of Epehy, between Cambrai and St. Quentin, Field Marshal Haig reported. Fresh German attacks north of Moeuvres (seven miles directly west of Cambrai) were repulsed yesterday afternoon.

In the neighbourhood of Gauche Wood, further to the south, German infantry succeeded in slightly pressing the British back from one advanced post. North of the Wood the enemy made repeated attacks but was completely repulsed, after fighting which lasted all night.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(Official.)—Further steps forward have been taken by the British on the Flanders front. Field Marshal Haig's statement to-day announced the improvement of British positions west of Messines, to the south of Ypres, where a strong point was captured. Northwest of St. Quentin British continued their progress through the main Hindenburg line, advancing their front northwest of Bellenglies.

PARIS, Sept. 21. — At Castres, where the French are but slightly more than two miles from St. Quentin, a German counter attack was repulsed.

During the night French troops operating in the region of St. Quentin captured Benay and made progress north of that village. A counter attack by the enemy upon Castres was repulsed. There was activity by our own and the enemy's artillery in the region of the plateau north of the Aisne. In Lorraine, two attempts by the Germans upon our posts at Arracourt and Ancervillers, north-east of Luneville, were without success.

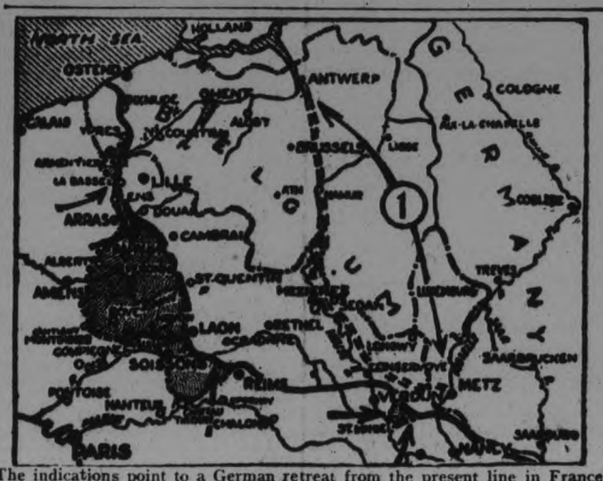
PRESSED BACK SLIGHTLY.

North of Gauche Wood, west of Villers-Guyslain, British rave been pressed back slightly. British detachment of seven men were surrounded and believed to have been captured when the Germans took Moeuvres. Their post was in the northern part of the village and they held it for two days during German occupation, inflicting losses on the enemy. When the village was retaken the entire party rejoined its unit without loss.

ON SERBIAN FRONT.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Serbian troops east of Monastir have advanced more than nine miles in one day and are now less than eight miles from the main highway connecting Prilop with the Vardar river. Great numbers of prisoners have been captured and the Allies have taken Godyak, west of the Cerna river, and 15 miles south-east of Prilop.



The indications point to a German retreat from the present line in France to positions running from Antwerp in Belgium to the Meuse River, near Namur, up the Meuse and across to Metz.

Some of the Fiercest Fighting of the War is Taking Place on the Present Hindenburg Line

The Allies Are Attacking the Prussians in Some of the Wildest and Fiercest Struggles of the Present Fighting—The Boches Are Not Yet Licked.

HUNS HAVE SHORTENED LINE

(By William Philip Simms — United Press).

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The most stubborn fighting seen in weeks is taking place in the regions of Cambrai, St. Quentin and Soissons, where the armies of Generals Byng, Rawlinson, Debeny and Mangin are battering against the very gates of Germany.

With a desperation bordering on panic, the Crown Prince Rupprecht, General Von Boehm and the German Crown Prince are throwing troops into the melee with orders to hold or die, retake or be killed. Field Marshal Hindenburg realizes the menace to his far-flung fortress, behind which lies the Hun frontier, and is thus attacking. The Allies are meeting the attacking Prussians in midfield, in some of the wildest, fiercest grapples of the war.

A Big Fact.

One big fact stands out in this fighting—the Boches are not yet licked. For weeks the general tone of the war stories has been that the Huns haven't any more fight in them, but if you want to make any regular fighting man mad, be he American, British or French, just intimate that his job is easy and that the war is now over. He knows Germany can be licked finally, but he readily admits that much hard scrapping is certain before the knockout. He insists that mushy stories to the contrary are helping the Boche. He points out that the Huns have shortened their line seventy miles by their retreat, as a result of which only 114 German divisions are holding the line now as compared with 140 needed before Marshal Foch's counter offensive.

Time to Refit.

Then the Germans had only 35 divisions in reserve and 33 resting or refitting. Now they have 13 in reserve and 71 resting or refitting, and three weeks is considered ample time to refit, unless something happens to prevent it.

Von Hindenburg thus shortly will have 84 divisions in reserve, ready for operations.

In the meantime the Allies are up against a line of the Huns own choosing, giving the latter a big advantage. Unless the Germans are thrown out of these positions they will be able to hold them with fewer troops still, thus increasing the number of reserve divisions out of line, resting and training.

BOY HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Fell in Path of Moving Automobile.

About 10:15 this morning a boy about 17 years of age, hade a narrow escape from serious injury. On the curb at the corner of Hunter and George streets when he accidently lost his balance and fell in the roadway right in the path of an oncoming automobile. Only a quick swerve of the car saved the boy from being run over. He picked himself up and went on his way apparently thinking little of the narrow escape which he had.

PETERBORO CASUALTIES

Pte H. Knowles Gassed and Pte. George Thibault Now Reported Killed.

Pte. Henry Knowles who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and went overseas with that unit afterwards transferring to another Canadian Battalion in France is officially reported gassed. Pte. Knowles is a brother of Sergt. Jack Knowles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion and now home from overseas service, and a brother-in-law of Co. Q.M.S. Jack Williams, formerly of the 93rd. He was a close friend of Pte. T. Goodwin who was a few days ago reported killed in action.

KILLED IN ACTION

A few days ago it was announced in the Examiner that Pte. George Thibault was reported missing. Word has since been received that Pte. Thibault was killed in action. His wife, Mrs. George Thibault resides in Belleville. He also leaves three children. Pte. Thibault enlisted in the 59th Battalion. He was a son of Mr. Joseph Thibault of this city and was well known here. Four sisters, one brother at home and another overseas who has been wounded, also survive.

The Green Cross Will Distinguish Doctors' Cars

In the request made by the Fuel Controller for the elimination of pleasure motoring on Sunday doctors using their cars on business were among those car owners named to whom the request did not apply. In order that the public may be able to distinguish doctors' cars from those of joy-riding motorists, the Ontario Medical Association is supplying its members with a green cross which will be displayed on the windshield of the car and which show that the vehicle is being used by a doctor on business. The green cross was used by Toronto doctors last Sunday and a supply has been received for the use of local physicians to-morrow.

86 Applications for Coal This Morning

Before noon to-day tre number of citizens who reported trat they had no coal was exactly 86, and there is every likelihood that this will be greatly increased to-day and on Monday. In a sense it is not considered a formidable list, and should it remain at a comparatively low figure the work of distributing coal so that every citizen shall receive some supply should be easily handled. But there are the hundreds of homes who have managed to secure a few tons, a quantity sufficient to carry them into the winter, but with the danger of leaving them stranded in the coldest weather.

Incidentally there are numerous reports that citizens are already dipping into their coal bins, having already disregarded every advise to economy.

CAUSED A SENSATION

Bombardment of Metz by the Americans Was a Painful Surprise to the Enemy.

PRESS COMMENT

Geneva, Sept. 21. — The bombardment of Metz, by American heavy artillery, caused surprise, but there was no panic ,says the "Metzer Zeitung." The enemy is merely copying the method of the German bombardments of Paris. The paper adds that few persons were killed and the damage was insignificant.

It is learned from Basle, however, the American bombardment of Metz caused an enormous sensation in Germany. Many of the inhabitants have left the fortress, but the neutrals are prohibited from leaving. It is the first time since 1870 that Metz has been under artillery fire.

Australians Advancing

Numerous German Cemeteries Reveal Wear and Tear on German Army.

(United Press.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 21.—The Australians have advanced north of St. Helens and are now within half a mile of the St. Quentin canal. This is the nearest point to the main defense of the Hindenburg line which has been reached anywhere between Havrincourt and St. Quentin. The villages of Holnon and Lempire have been entirely cleared of the enemy.

In the Lys sector 4,439 German graves were found in one cemetery. The earliest date was April 17, the latest was August 25, revealing the wear and tear on the German army in the last four months on a small and comparatively quiet portion of the line.

The British in their advance in the north are finding many populous cemeteries beyond the Hindenburg line.

SIX MONTHS AGO TO-DAY

Greatest Battle in History Began Six Months Ago To-day.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A war review of the past six months, issued to-day by the Associated Press, says:

Six months ago to-day the great German offensive began. For weeks victory seemed about to perch on German banners. Today the Allied star is in the ascendancy. Anxiety and encouragement, decision and joy have succeeded each other since at dawn on March 21, the greatest battle of history began. It has been a period of almost incessant fighting and of bewildering changes in situations that developed from day to day and from week to week. The Allies knew it faced Germany's mightiest effort last March, but it stood unafraid.

GERMANY HAS LOST.

Germany has lost her chance to force peace on the Allies before the Americans enter the fight with all their strength. This was her hope in March. Losses of a serious nature were suffered by the Allies during the long battle, but they have been more than offset by the inflowing American legions. Germany's losses on the other hand cannot be made good. Hopes blasted, crack divisions broken up, and seeming victories turned into defeats, have lowered the morale of the German armies, which to-day are on the defensive everywhere.

BATTEN'S EXCURSION

Mr. William Batten's annual excursion from Lakefield to Bobcageon Fair takes place on Thursday 26th instant. The Steamer "Stoney Lake" will convey the usual large crowd that takes advantage of this popular annual outing. Mr. Batten will officiate as master of ceremonies and deliver his favorite oration on Massey-Harris machines to all enquiring friends.

Gen. Foch Has Broadened Scope of Plan for Keeping the Hun Busy on All Fronts Present Plan of Action Has Been Extended to the East and May Include An Italian Drive.

AMERICAN VIEW

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—General Foch has broadened the scope of his plan for keeping the Hun busy everywhere, the war authorities pointed out to-day. For some time, he operated this method mainly on the west front. But the past week's developments show that his scheme has been extended until now it reaches into the east, and it may become more inclusive with an Italian drive.

American man-powen has a direct bearing on this relentless, never ceasing warfare. With the United States expeditionary forces overseas approaching the two-million mark, it is now fully possible for Foch to strike continuously and at widely separated points so as to keep the Boche guessing and his forces more than busy. With the United States force growing steadily together with development of material and with the Boche constantly weaker, General March's prediction of a military victory next year gains added weight.

Fall Is Distant.

The transportation of material is going forward amazingly well. That the artillery situation is improved is evident from the known American hammering at Metz with nine-inch and larger calibre guns. Metz is the American objective. But its fall is distant, for it is a stronghold harder to crack than Verdun before which Germany hammered many bloody weeks. The pincer operation rather than direct assault will be tried as the latter involves a large and useless waste of life.

Turned the Tide.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 21. —American fighters turned the tide of war, broke Germany's spirit, and filled the Kaiser's people with "wonder and terror," Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, declared upon his arrival here from France.

"America's fresh troops," he asserted, "have humiliated the German army." The submarine is a complete failure in everything it attempted," he said.

Arrangements for Big Entertainment

Committees Named to Complete Preparations.

Arrangements are under way for a big entertainment on Hallow'een to be held in Victoria Hall, the proceeds of which will go to buy wool to make socks for our Peterboro boys overseas.

Mr. Hughson Johnstone presided at a meeting of those interested and the following committees were struck and are now working to get things under way.

Advertising Committee, Messrs. G. Porter, J. C. Drummond, Harold Copp.

Committee of Arrangements, John Waldie, Ed. Files, Angus McLeod.

Programme Committee, Hughson Johnstone, John Spence.

Ushers Committee, D. Dunlop, F. McGee.

Ticket Committee, Geo. Roper, W. J. Hancock.

These gentlemen will be assisted by some members of the Y. M. C. A., and also by members of the Mothers' Club. It is hoped that an entertainment of high order will be offered and it is the intention of those behind the undertaking to put on one of these popular entertainments at popular prices each month throughout the winter and in this way people who feel the need of a little entertainment may have it, at the same time knowing that their money is going for some worthy object—in this case wool, that the ladies will use to make socks for your boy.

It is intended that the first series will be held in Victoria Hall where there is a large stage which the boys will need to do their gymnastic and acrobatic stunts, etc. Those who have in the past witnessed the Y.M.C.A. boys know that a treat is in store for those who attend. It is a most worthy object and should meet with the heartiest response from Peterboro citzens in general and especially those who have boys overseas.

GOVERNMENT CRISIS IN GERMANY

Three Conditions Enumerated by the Socialists.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 21.—The government crisis in Germany is approaching a decisive stage, according to the Leipzig Tageblatt, and the majority of the parties are firmly resolved to form a parliamentary government without delay. The government with entire independence of headquarters will pursue the policy made necessary by the seriousness of the hour. Socialists have declared readiness to enter the new government under the following conditions.

First—Abolition of certain paragraphs in constitution.

Second—Entry of at least two or three Social Democrats in the government.

Third—Occupation of one important political post, presumably ministry of the interior, by a Socialist.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.— The Associated Press this morning issues the following summary:

Turkish forces along the line from the Mediterranean Sea to the Jordan north of Jerusalem appear to have suffered a serious defeat at the hands of the British and French armies and their allies, the Arabs. If the situation develops as favourably to the Allies as it is indicated by reports of the opening phases of the fighting, the Sultan's forces may suffer disaster. Attacking over a front of sixteen miles in length the allies have virtually overrun the whole Turkish defensive system along the Mediterranean coast. The railroad junctions have been taken and cavalry is operating in the rear of the Turkish forces which are holding the line to the eastward of the front where the attack was launced. These enemy units are prevented from retreating eastward by hostility of the Hejas tribes beyond the Jordan and they face a serious problem in making their way back to safety along the western bank of that historic stream. More than 3,000 prisoners have been captured by the Allies, who have also taken great quantities of war materials.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

Along the battle line in France the British are still hammering away at the Hindenburg line north of St. Quentin and have made gains of considerable importance. This region is one great fortress and progress must of necessity be slow. The success of the British, especially that of the Australian units, gives reason for the belief expressed in despatches that the German lines north of St. Quentin may be broken by the Allied onslaught. South of St. Quentin the French are fighting relentlessly and are making progress in the region of Essigny-Le-Grand.

THE PATRIOT OR THE SHIRKER?

To save and serve or to spend and shirk—that is the question. If we decide—as we will—on saving and serving, then we must cut down on all luxuries to the limit.

Motoring for pleasure is a luxury. Most of the Sunday motoring is for pleasure, and as long as the Fuel Controller asks us to desist from Sunday motoring, it is our patriotic duty to respond.

By refraining from pleasure-motoring to-morrow we discharge a double duty. We save the gasoline needed overseas. We save the money which Canada must have to finish the war. The car in the garage to-morrow is the Patriot's car. The car on the highway, if there for pleasure, is the car of the Shirker. Which is YOURS?

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, SEPT. 21ST, 1918.

SAVE IT FOR THE TANKS.

The first motorless Sunday in Peterborough was not as generally observed as it should have been. Tomorrow the car-owners of the city have another chance to show their patriotism, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the response to the Fuel Controller's request will be in keeping with the reputation that Peterborough has gained in war work since the conflict began. It is surely a small sacrifice—if indeed it can be considered worthy of such a designation—that is being asked of car-owners. A reserve supply of gasoline is absolutely necessary for war purposes, and despite the utmost efforts of those engaged in the oil industry production is falling behind. The only solution is to exercise economy in the use of gasoline, and naturally the first step is the curtailing of pleasure motoring. In the European countries at war this was done almost at the start so that there can be little complaint from motorists on this continent at being asked at this late stage in the war to refrain from using their cars on one day of the week.

With comparatively few exceptions last Sunday was marked throughout Canada by a general compliance with the request. Peterborough was one of the few cities to fall down. There were far too many cars in evidence around the city streets—far too much gasoline wasted that is needed for the tanks overseas.

Better things are looked for tomorrow.

UNNECCESSARY EXPENDITURE.

The Government is pleading with citizens of Canada to exercise the greatest possible thrift in order that there shall be available throughout the country the financial reserve necessary to carry on the Dominion's war effort. This campaign for economy is a necessary one and is being heartily supported by the press of the country, but it would gain much more weight and have a much greater effect if the Government itself were to show the people that economy in public matters is being sought.

The action of the Militia Department in building huge barracks at Kingston, London and other points causes people to wonder at the expenditure of large sums on what seems unnecessary things. In No. 3 Military District there are many splendid armouries standing idle that would accommodate during the winter all the troops that will be under arms in this district. In the Peterborough Armouries for instance, where troops have been housed for the past three winters, there is every facility for the accommodation of soldiers, and the sanitary conditions as is evidenced by the general health of the soldiers quartered here, are splendid. In Belleville and other towns throughout the district there are similar buildings which could be used, and in spite of that fact the Government is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on a barracks at Kingston.

The same condition applies in No. One Military District, where the sum of $400,000 is to be expended upon the construction of a barracks at Carling Heights, while the Stratford Herald points out there is a splendid building in Stratford large enough to accommodate 3,000 or 4,000 men. Throughout the district are many fine armouries.

Under the circumstances it is hard to see the necessity for the building of barracks. As the troops are now trained there is no battalion drill and the recruits could receive the individual instruction that is being given just as effectively at Peterborough or Belleville as in barracks at Kingston.

AN ANXIOUS SITUATION.

There is little comfort for the people of Canada in the statement given to the press by Dominion Fuel Controller Magrath. The whole question as to whether or not Canadians will suffer from lack of fuel during the coming winter depends upon the weather. If there is another extended cold spell such as held Canada in its grip last winter there will not be coal enough in the country to get through on, but with a moderate or mild winter the supply should be sufficient. Mr. Magrath states that the total supply of anthracite coal alloted to the Dominion from the United States is considerably less than last year, although this shortage is made up to some extent by an increase in the supply of bituminous coal.

The individual householder is urged to exercise rigid economy in the use of coal. The larger supply of soft coal available should be taken advantage of, and people who can use it in their grates or furnaces during the autumn and early winter should by all means do so, reserving the anthracite for the colder weather. "Individual conservation is the solution to individual comfort later on in the season," Mr. Magrath points out.

One way of economizing is by making sure that the furnace is overhauled and in good shape so that no heat is wasted.

THE THRIFT CAMPAIGN.

The Dominion Government is now conducting a campaign for the encouragement of thrift among the people of the country. It is somewhat late in the day to start such a campaign, but doubtless the Government has gone on the assumption that "it is better late than never." Certainly there is need of the exercise of thrift among the Canadian people.

The war has brought prosperity to a great many people, but, at the same time has enhanced prices to a very marked extent. In a very large measure the increased prosperity is an artificial one, much as if a grave digger and an undertaker were to come together in the midst of a pestilence, rub their hands and exclaim, that "business is good." Munition workers, textile operators and others catering to the war needs of the nation have prospered exceedingly, but in a measure it is through the flesh and blood of our own people.

This war prosperity cannot last. It is very probable that manufacturers will profit by the experience they have gained through the years of war and will turn to new markets and to new activities, but there must come a period of re-adjustment which will try the resources of the ordinary worker. It is therefore most imperative that the people of the country should be educated in the principles of thrift. A dollar saved and profitably invested is a silver bullet to help defeat the Hun, while a dollar wasted is that much of a contribution to the cause of the Huns.

Thrift has not always been a popular doctrine to preach in Canada. A few years before the war, when we were all living in a fool's paradise and wasting our substance like prodigal sons, a fearless and progressive newspaper in a certain city in Canada started a series of articles on thrift. The series had only got properly started when the advertising manager of a rival paper went around to all the merchants and pointed out the dangerous propaganda being preached by its contemporary, telling the merchants that the people were being educated to hoard their money in the banks, and not spend it. The opposition to the thrift campaign was so pronounced that the newspaper was reluctantly forced to discontinue it. We would wonder if that paper who decried the thrift propaganda of a few years ago will take the Government's thrift advertising in the present campaign?

We wish the thrift campaign every success. It is something that needed preaching and practising in Canada, but at no time more than during the present titanic struggle.—Journal of Commerce.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

People who complain that they are weary of war-giving should note the despatch describing the fighting of a unit of the old regular British army which has had no rest during the war.

Save to win is a good slogan—and it applies equally well to gasoline money or coal or food.

Germany are claiming their retreat from the St. Mihiel salient was a success—so it was for General Pershing's men.

The Toronto police force may not have a union, but they evidently did some lively striking just the same during the recent riots.

RALLY DAY TALK IN GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. McKenzie of Knox Church will give the Rally Day talk to the Sunday School of George street Methodist Church to-morrow. A full attendance of the school is hoped for.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Well, Pa, You Started It.

Washington Sun: A well-planted dictograph would probably disclose some interesting quarrels by this time in the Hohenzollern family.

There's Room at Mess Table.

Detroit News: Young men within the draft ages who are still at home have a remedy if they are tired of war bread. The boys in France are getting the all-wheat kind.

Especially When Unarmed.

New York World: The German admiralty has proved conclusively that neither the English, Scandinavian nor American fishing boat is a match for the submarine.

Stack O' Wheats Might Help.

Brooklyn Eagle: King George and Queen Mary enjoyed griddle cakes before the griddle at the Y.M.C.A. hut. With a record of 150 U-boats down, the king and queen ought to try "sinkers."

Look Out of the Window.

London Daily Express: The English are the victims of a false modesty. It has become a habit to say of everything that it is something that they do better abroad. Because Jeremiah draws down the blind and refuses to look out of the window he is sure that he can't do this and he can't do that. When, however, an Englishman does look out on the world he discovers that there is nothing that he cannot do and very little that he has not already done. The way to cure Jeremiah is to unbandage his eyes. The sober truth is that no nation, during the whole history of the world, has ever equalled the achievements of the British nation during the past four years. Mistakes have occurred, because things had to be done in a hurry, but it has been proved that there is nothing that Germany can do that Great Britain cannot do better.

Upsetting Theories.

London Advertiser: A noted military critic says that Metz cannot be stormed. The same thing was said of the Somme, Vimy Ridge and the Hindenburg line. Going by the book all these strongholds were invulnerable. Never has there been a war where the accepted principles of warfare have been so consistently upset as in the present struggle.

No Clocks in the Trenches.

Providence Journal: Employees who are tempted to strike should take thought of the boys in the trenches. They should ask themselves what the American soldier who is clearing out a machine-gun nest in a forest in France or striving up a steep slope in the face of the enemy's murderous fire, or keeping lonely watch on an exposed patrol would think if he heard that they were planning to leave their work for the sake of easier hours or higher pay. "There are no clocks in the trenches; no schedule of hours is observed where the troops in khaki are pressing the soldiers of the kaiser across the bloody salient between the Marne and the Aisne.

In an international way the tennis and yacht honors still remain in America, but owing to the war the polo cup is making a long stay abroad.
